A PLEASANT SURPRISE — In 1867—71 years ago—the family of Alexander Halliday and his wife, Nancy Gillies, with their eleven children, eight daughters and three sons, left their home near Eldon, Belfast, for Huron County, Ont. They lived on the farm now owned by Mr. Laughlin Ross. Their move was some venture as there was no I. C. Railway to Canada then, so they had to go by steamer from Pictou, N.S., to Quebec, thence by Grand Trunk to Goderich, Ont. To reach Pictou they embarked on a large boat—a shallop—at a point a short distance east of where Halliday's Wharf now is. The writer was present at the scene, and although quite young at the time, has still a vivid recollection of the parting of the two families, Halliday's eleven children and Anderson's nine children, twenty in all, and all living at that time. The two sisters that day saw each other for the last time—a sad parting it was. Those were large families in our eyes today. As last known four of the Hallidays are still living and one of the Andersons, the writer, who is here yet. It may be noted that the other sisters and brothers of these two mothers had so far as known fifty-eight children, or in all seventy-eight cousins on one side of a family. These facts were a surprise to four visitors to the Province last week, two of them sons of Isabella Halliday who married a Mr. Slater and lived in Cleveland, Ohio, all her married life. The visitors were James A. Slater and son Kenneth; Wilson B. Slater and his wife Rose (Bieler) Slater. They made a brief visit to their cousin Frank Halliday at Eldon, then took in the historic old Belfast Presbyterian Church and cemetery where their forbears worshipped and where some of them "sleep their long last sleep." The beauty of that old church, now in use for 113 years, and the well-kept cemetery adds to the fond memory of where their mother was born and spent many happy years with her husband and their eleven children.—J. A.
