Selznick's "Duel in the Sun" more than lived up to expectations in a multitude of ways as it made its debut at the Capitol Theatre last night. Mayor Arnett Opens Kinsmen Club Project

Mayor J.F. Arnett officially opened the Kinsmen Christmas tree project in a speech delivered at the regular meeting of the Kinsmen Club of Summerside in the Olympia Restaurant last evening. The program was broadcast.

Mayor Arnett, who was introduced by club president Charles Hogan, complimented the club on the fine work that they have performed since their organization over three years ago. He mentioned particularly the annual Halloween parties for the children and the Kinsmen outdoor rink, built and maintained by the club.

He explained the Christmas tree project and said that trees would be set up in Holman's and Smallman's stores and donations of food, clothing or money could be left near them and would be given to a needy family at Christmas. He reminded the citizens of their favoured condition and asked them to back the project so that for every person in town Christmas 1948 would be a happy one.

Bill Fridgen was chairman of the business meeting and welcomed James Harris as a new member. Greg Mulholland reporting for the sports committee said that as soon as the weather was favourable the outdoor rink would be put in operation.

George Olscamp reported on the progress of the United Emergency Fund for Britain and Wally Coulson on the Christmas tree project. It was decided to have the annual toy matinee on December 18th for the orphanages and Car. Woodside was appointed chairman of the committee in charge.
