Two Japanese Missions Study Canadian Scene

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Japanese missions are in Canada seeking answers to problems created by modern living, employment and sales resistance.

While one mission had some good news for British Columbia exporters, the other is concentrating its efforts to develop greater markets, particularly in Eastern Canada.

The good news was brought by a 16-man paper market survey delegation to Canada and the United States.

Shigeyoshi Kajiwara, leader of the delegation, said the growth of the supermarket in Japan has created a demand for imported pulp to make kraft paper.

Markets are sought by a "feeler" mission sponsored by the Tokyo metropolitan government.

A spokesman said its business will be to find out how much progress Japanese goods have made in the Canadian market, to study Canadian quality standards, designed specifications and prices and to survey economic conditions and activities of urban centres they will visit on the way east.

DEMAND IS GREAT

Mr. Kajiwara said supermarket packaging has created a demand for more kraft paper thn is being produced in Japan.

"We will be looking at this kraft market and others as well, but we are primarily here to study Canadian distribution methods," he said in an interview.

He said there are great markets for paper but a shortage of pulps in Japan—thus a demand for imported pulps.

Only a small percentage of the imported pulps had been from Canada in the past because of prices and import restrictions. But the government had removed restrictions this spring and "we are looking for an increase."

There was a possibility of Japanese finance entering the British Columbia forest industry as it had already done in the mineral industry.

Fujio Fukuyama, a member of the Japanese consulate here who is acting as spokesman for the Tokyo group, said an earlier mission showed that Western Canadians favor Japanese goods while Easterners relied heavily on U.S. sources.

A MAJOR PROBLEM

"This is a major problem for Japanese businessmen and one that this group is going to try to help solve."

At the same time it would attempt to find why some goods —for example, toys—have been having market trouble.

Mr. Fukuyama said his country of 93,000,000 is having employment trouble with larger manufacturers taking workers away from smaller manufacturers producing sundry goods, the largest part of production in Tokyo.

The mission hoped to discover how such products as kitchenware, cameras and other non - bulk goods could be made more attractive to purchasers abroad to try to remedy the domestic problem.

"The whole life of the Japanese depends on exporting and it is a continual struggle to try to maintain and increase markets," Mr. Fukuyama said.

TRIBUNE BACK IN WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The New York Herald Tribune is back in good graces at the White House—or at least it is back on some White House desks.

The newspaper incurred presidential wrath in May of 1962 and White House subscriptions were cancelled. But officials now say it is being delivered again in various presidential aides and is available to President Kennedy himself if he wants to read it

There was no explanation for the reinstatement.

The White House cancellation of The Herald Tribune subscriptions was disclosed in newspaper reports saying Kennedy was annoyed by stories it carried following the Republican line.

But White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger said the main reason for dropping it was to diversify the newspaper selection.

Canada Pledges $14 Million To Underdeveloped

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has pledged $14,000,000 to the International Development Association which will begin to make loans to underdeveloped countries in 1965.

Acting Prime Minister Chevrier made the announcement after a cabinet meeting.

He said a number of appointments to the bench and the fisheries council were made. Names would be made public later.

Mr. Chevrier also announced creation of a new post—Queen's publisher—to look after the purchase, supply and maintenance of office machines. The public printing plant will remain a separate entity under the Queen's printer. Both the Queen's publisher and Queen's printer will be responsible to the new industry department.

The bidding:

2♣	Pass	3♣	Pass

Opening lead — jack of diamonds.

The expert does not have X-ray spectacles, contrary to some opinions, but he does have a good sense of what's going on at the table and who has what.

This deal was played in a match between Great Britain and Egypt. When the British held the North - south cards, the bidding went as shown West led the jack of diamonds, taken by the ace.

Declarer played a low heart to the queen, which lost to the king. East returned a trump, the queen losing to the singleton king (and proving that South was not blessed with X- ray eyes). West then played a low heart, the jack forcing the ace.

The British South now drew a round of trumps and ruffed a heart in dummy, which East overruffed.

East returned a trump and declarer won and played a club to the jack, the finesse succeeding. The position, declarer having lost three tricks, now was:

Declarer played the queen of diamonds, forcing East to cover with the king and thus transferring the burden of guarding diamonds upon West. After ruffing the diamond, South cashed his hearts, forcing West to choose between discarding the ten of diamonds or ten of clubs.

West could not discard successfully, and the outcome was that South made four spades as a result of the transfer squeeze. Without the queen of diamonds lead the squeeze would not have worked.

The same contract was reached at the other table, where an Egyptian pair were North-South. At this table also, the opening lead was the jack of diamonds, and, not to be outdone by his counterpart, the Egyptian declarer likewise made four spades on the transfer squeeze.
