Beaverbrook Success Credited To His Wife

LONDON (CP) — Sir Max Aitken, 54 - year - old chairman of the Beaverbrook newspaper group, credits much of his father's success to the influence of the first Lady Beaverbrook who died in 1927. She was Gladys Drury, daughter of Gen. Charles William Drury of Halifax.

In an interview in The Sunday Mirror, Montreal-born Sir Max says of his mother:

"She was the daughter of a Canadian general, very beautiful, and I loved her more than any other human being.

"My father would never have got where he did but for her and certainly he would never have made the friends he did."

Of his present position as master of the late Lord Beaverbrook's empire, Sir Max says. IS COMPLETELY HAPPY

"I love the life I'm leading now. It's the best time I've had. I'm completely happy."

He says there won't be any change in the policies of the Beaverbrook newspapers and as chairman he will be both a businessman and an editorial man.

"You've got to remember I've been an executive here for 35 years and when you've worked with my father that time there's no change.

"Inbred in me is a feeling for the Commonwealth and for the British people, here and abroad."

In the interview Sir Max denies he was "just a cypher" on the newspapers during the life of his father, who died in June. He takes credit for the editorial stands taken by Beaverbrook's Daily Express in support of former prime minister Sir Anthony Eden at Suez and in supporting the late president Kennedy over Cuba.

Remembering life with father, Sir Max says as a youngster he had a series of ups and downs which came to a head when Lord Beaverbrook finally said:

"Well, get the hell out of it and earn your own living. Nobody's indispensable, least of all you."

Sir Max took his advice and went off and got a job with an aircraft firm in Los Angeles. He came back a year later with a car and $1,000 more than he set out.

Government Gets Fed Up With Aircraft Lobbying

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Two cabinet ministers have given indications the government is getting a little fed up with the lobbying of the Canadian aircraft industry in Ottawa.

Informants said the government welcomes the views of the aircraft industry, or any other, pertinent problems.

But it was becoming irked at the almost constant pressure from the aircraft manufacturers

Defence Production Minister Drury said in the Commons defence committee Tuesday that there is always pressure on the government from the aircraft industry based on economic grounds — that is, contracts for planes — rather than on the military needs of the country

Mr. Drury said defence needs should dictate defence expenditures rather than the needs of the economy or any particular segment of it.

He said the aircraft industry would be "very, very modest" without Canadian defence contracts. In 1962, defence expenditures by the Canadian government accounted for $244,000,000 of the industry's $352,000,000 business.

MAY PUT OFF DECISION

Last month, Defence Minister Hellyer told the Commons his department could postpone a decision on acquisition of a new tactical jet fighter plane for some time.

"But in view of the urgency of giving support to the (aircraft) industry we have been giving early consideration to this matter and hope to be able to make a decision soon," he said.

Informants said Mr. Hellyer in effect was warning the industry not to try to push him into buying a plane he doesn't want or he would simply put off a decision.

Despite this warning, informants said, the industry has kept pushing for a contract to build the U.S. McDonnell F-4 Phantom jet fighter - bomber, at least three times more expensive than the U.S. Northrop F-5 jet plane the defence department favors.

A complicating factor is that the RCAF wants the Phantom. A source said the air force regards the Northrop plane as little more than a trainer

Educationist Dies In Gun Accident

TORONTO (CP) — Funeral services were held Monday for Dr. Edward A. Corbett, 82, of Toronto, former director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education and founder of the Banff School of Fine Arts, who died Saturday at his home when a shotgun he was cleaning accidentally discharged.

Police said Dr. Corbett was cleaning the gun in the living room while his wife, Anna Rae, was upstairs taking a bath. She heard an explosion and came downstairs where she found her husband slumped in a chair.

Coroner Harvey A. Brown said death was caused by severe internal injuries.

Dr. Corbett, the son of a maritime Presbyterian minister, was also an ordained minister of the church.

In 1914 he was stricken with tuberculosis and after his recovery, he moved to Alberta where he spent 16 years as a professor at the University of Alberta.

Dr. Corbett was appointed director of the education association in 1936. He was also a member of the board of directors of the Dominion Drama Festival.

During the Second World War he spent some time with Canadian forces overseas and in 1949, headed the Canadian delegation to the UNESCO world conference on adult education.

Mild Weather Delays Start Of Oil Well

HILLSBOROUGH, N.B. (CP) — A new attempt is being made to expand output in the Maritime provinces' only producing oil and gas field. New Brunswick Oilfields Ltd. hopes to start drilling a new well on the southwest edge of its Stoney Creek Field here by late this week.

Mild, wet weather has delayed construction of a road to the drill site The well will be drilled to about 3,100 feet with natural gas the objective. It is the first attemp to exend he production area since 1956.

The Stoney Creek area in southeastern New Brunswick is Canada's second oldest continuously producing oilfield. It was first tapped in 1909. The 1963 production of natural gas totalled 103,534,000 cubic feet. Oil output was 7,381 barrels. Production has been dropping and is now about half the level of 1952.

HAS GOOD GAS

Field engineer James MacLeod says Stoney Creek has gas of good quality, low in sulphur and does not require "scrubbing"—the removal of impurities. It is piped directly from the well to the city of Moncton, 13 miles north, for distribution by Moncton Utility Gas Ltd.

New Brunswick Oilfields Ltd. has 37 gas and 14 oil wells, all in Albert County. The company is controlled by Western Decalta Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary.

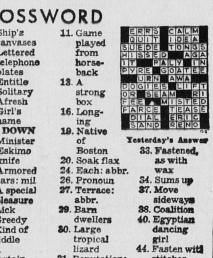
Yesterday's Answer



DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X Z
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♣	Pass	3♣	Pass
3NT

Opening lead—nine of hearts.

Suppose you're playing three notrump on the bidding sequence shown and West opens the nine of hearts. Of course you don't see the opponents' cards and the question is how to play the hand so that you will have the best chance to make the contract.

When it comes to playing the dummy, declarer should of course look upon the hand as a whole and not upon the play of each trick as though it were a complete problem in itself. Thus, in deciding which heart to play from dummy on West's nine, South cannot settle this question without reference to the over-all problem of finding the best sequence of plays to produce nine tricks.

Observe what happens in the actual hand if South covers the nine with the ten. East plays the jack and declarer wins with the king. South presumably leads a spade to the jack, which East takes with the ace.

East returns a diamond. South goes down whether he finesses or not. Assume he finesses West wins and returns the eight of hearts. Curtain.

The same result is obtained if the four of hearts is played on the opening lead. Each ducks and the rest of the play is the same.

Only by playing the queen on the nine can South make the hand. East is forced to win with the ace; otherwise declarer can obtain two heart tricks. But East cannot successfully return a heart because of dummy's ten. Whatever East shifts to, declarer has time to build up nine tricks — four diamonds, four clubs, and a heart.

Why should South play the queen of hearts? Because there is good reason to believe that West's nine of hearts is a top-of-nothing lead and that East accordingly has the A-J. Declarer can therefore tie up the suit by covering the nine with the queen and forcing East to shift his attack elsewhere.

Once the pressure on the heart suit is relieved, South has nothing to fear. Nine tricks are sure to result with any return.
