—ADDITION TO HIGH SCHOOL COLLECTION—A beautifully marked owl from the Arctic regions is to be added to the fine collection of birds at the Summerside High School. This bird was caught by John H. Enman of Mount Pleasant and was purchased by the school. The trustees are having it stuffed and mounted by Mr. Bruce Heckbert of Summerside. Mr. Enman said that he had noticed the wild geese were not staying round his place as usual to feed and later he saw the owl. He went out one morning and found the owl asleep in a thicket and got a scoop net and threw it over the bird capturing it alive. He kept it for a few days before killing it. It is an old bird with wonderful markings having four sets of black markings on its wings. This is quite unusual. Its wing spread is a little over five feet. Mr. Heckbert who has had considerable experience in stuffing birds, says that the owl is one of the finest he has ever seen. He has a younger one which was caught by Mr. Preston Noonan of Summerside recently and brought to him to be stuffed. This bird is not so prettily marked and the markings are of a brown shade. Mr. Heckbert says they are not native to this part of the country, but belong to the Arctic regions. During bad storms they lose their way and wander about seeking rabbits or wild duck and sometimes attack wild geese in search of food. Mr. Heckbert has a wonderful collection of stuffed birds at his home including an eagle which was caught in Summerside harbour. This bird has a wing spread of seven feet and is very handsome. Mr. Heckbert also has a grouse, heron, which was captured in the harbor. A very handsome seal is part of his collection. The pupils at the High School are very fortunate in having such a nice addition to their show case. This is the third owl to be donated to the school, two smaller ones being given by Mrs. Holman from the late R. T. Holman's collection of birds. —S

—DIRECTORS MEETING—There was a directors meeting of the O. S. F. Breeders' Association on Friday evening at their head quarters at Summerside. Mr. L. T. Leach of Summerside and Mr. F. H. Copp of Port Elgin were the only outside directors present. Only matters of a routine nature were discussed. Mr. Copp and Mr. Leach left on Saturday on return to their homes. —S

—TOOK MANY PRIZES—His young ones are pleased to see their father home. He recently was unable to attend the Fox Show this fall, but his prizes were shown by his brother Cecil. At the Charlottetown show, he did extremely well, and at the Bonaventure Show, he exhibited twelve ducks, and received eight first prizes, two second prizes and Reserve Champion male pup, Reserve Champion female pup, and Reserve Champion pup of the year, also first prize for matched pair of pups. —S

—FUNERAL SERVICES—The funeral of James W. Clark was held on Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. There was a short service at his late residence, 107 St. James Street, followed by a service in Christ Church (Anglican) at 10:30 a.m. The pallbearers were Messrs. Howard Clarke, Fred Clarke, Herbert Clarke and Arthur Clarke. Mr. Keith Compton had charge of the funeral. —S

—BOATS TAKE SHELTER—Two tug boats the Coalpoles of Halifax and the Bonsecours of Montreal which were towing the dredge, Sunday, belonging to J. F. Porter & Sons, general contractors, from the Three Rivers, Quebec, came into Summerside harbor on Saturday evening for shelter from the storm. They remained until Monday to refuel. They had called at Picou on their way from Halifax. —S

C. Y. M. L. Card Party

Summerside's big Friday night attraction was attended by the usual large crowd. What does attract to go before the end of the first tournament many are becoming seriously (if nervously) hopeful of capturing the grand prize at Christmas.

Clara was "dead on" Friday night. She came through with a decisive win and to the tune of "Dem Golden Slippers." She was forced to take a cellar position in the previous game, but you will recall, was consoled for her determined through efforts with a rather unique prize, a non-winning bearing substitute for a cat. We would hesitate to suppose that Clara is superstitious but she has freely though perhaps accidentally admitted that she attributes her win as well as several basaar prizes, to good playing, but to "the old black cent"—a species of talisman.

Though spring is still many months away "Buddy" unaturally burst forth into vernal hue—he won the card table.

Gertie and "Tucker" just had hard luck!

The "freeze-out" was red-hot—possibly the most hotly contested game of the season. So close was play that our past master on auction (E.C.) experienced serious difficulty in following the score, and every bit of "inquiry" "Who's ahead now?" Ida went within five points of a shot at the goose. Mrs. Gaudet went closer still and would have been a goose richer if she had not forgotten that Isaac was forty "on feathers." Anyhow it was a West End win!

The following were the prize-winners:

Ladies' first, Clara Gallant.
Ladies' consolation, Gertie MacDonald.
Gentlemen's first, Buddy Doolette.
Gentlemen's consolation, Elmer MacDonald.
Freeze-out, Isaac Arsenault, S.

Until that happens, Dr. Gillet does not want a word said about himself or his method. He will let the academy pronounce upon the merits of his discovery and if the academy sees fit the whole world will be informed about it. I have been to Dr. Gillet's laboratory and clinic and there is nothing secret about his method. I can at least tell in unscientific terms what I saw and heard.

There they were, a crowd of rheumatic and neuralgic persons. One lady in the waiting-room said to me: "I like a facial neuralgia for years. It meant atrocious suffering. My face was twisted in a horrible grimace. I could not eat, but had to content myself with liquids. Sleep was impossible. I was wracked with pains. And here I am; as good as cured. I walked to this clinic, something that would have been impossible a month ago." A gentleman said: "It's the same with me. I was a sufferer of angina pectoris. The most horrible pains held me down for years. Now I go and come as I please. Now I am well aware that all this sounds an awful lot like an advertisement on a box of some kind of miracle pills. But Dr. Gillet does not work with pills. Dr. Gillet's method is known as sympathetic therapy. He tickles your nostrils, that is the long and short of it. As I had suffered from severe headaches of late, I presented myself at Dr. Gillet's clinic as a patient. No other way was open to me since the doctor does not grant

Interviews and is even reported to be very brusque with newspaper people.

Works Through Nostrils

I had to wait. The patient under treatment at the moment was a young girl of about thirteen or fourteen. One of her legs was slightly dragging, the last symptomatic remnant of infantile paralysis. "When she came here for the first time, six months ago, she had to be carried," said Dr. Gillet kindly. "And now she walks in and takes her seat on the chair. Just another few weeks and she will be able to skip and dance!"

Then I saw the treatment. The doctor took two small metal stylets. I don't know the English word for stylet. It is a technical medical term for a thin metal stave about six inches long, you might say. These he introduced into the girl's nostrils and then gently, with consummate science which differs in every case, he slightly rubbed the mucous membrane in front of the "this is the spot," he said "where the sympathetic powers of the human body are at their strongest and therefore most easily influenced." You see he made no secret about it.

What happened to the girl? She sprang out of my eyes and the feeling was as if I had taken snuff. I felt very much like sneezing, but I never came to that. You know the feeling. Everybody has it at the beginning of a cold. But my headache was gone and hasn't come back since and the treatment was a week ago.

What a wonderful mechanism is the human body! To throw it out of gear a small emotion suffices. No wonder then if a counter-emotion produced artificially by Dr. Gillet's little metal staves, just a tickling of the nasal mucous re-

Entertainment & Social In Presbyterian Hall

A very enjoyable social evening and entertainment was held last week in the Presbyterian Hall, Rev. C. J. St. Clair Jeans presided.

The program opened with some vocal and instrumental numbers as follows: Piano duet, Mrs. Muttart and Mrs. Schurman; reading, Mrs. MacNeill; solo, Mr. Bentley; piano duet, Mrs. Muttart and Miss Peters; reading, Mrs. Perry; solo, Mrs. Pickering; piano solo, James Harris.

A very charming tableau was very effectively carried out by a group of young people, assisted by some of the older ones.

The first scene was "Mother and Baby" cleverly portrayed by Mrs. Gorrill, Mrs. Muttart and Mrs. Pickering, singing very softly "Sweet and Low." The next scene, "School Days," was sung by some of the older tots, Mina and Edith Dye, Roberta Gorrill, Bobbie Jardine, Barbara Rogers and Janet Baker, Mr. Baker and Mr. Bentley assisting the children. "Old Black Joe." Messrs. Bentley, Baker, Mountain and Forbes, with Mr. Bert Brown as the negro. Family group of five girls singing "Love's Old Sweet Song." Miss Peters and Bud Mountain singing "A Perfect Day" to a gentle faced old lady, Mrs. Daley. "Young Men and Maidens," Miss Peters, Mr. Mountain, Mrs. Muttart and V. Groom, singing "Robin Adair" and "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling." "Young Girl in White," Inez Bell; Mrs. George Pickering singing "Sweet Alice." "Two Old People," Mr. and Mrs. Baker, sung by Mr. Bentley; "Two Young Lovers," Miss Baker and P. Bingham; Male Trio, Bentley, Mountain and Forbes singing "The Quilting Party." Bud Mountain singing "Mother MacIntyre" to "Smiling Old Lady." Mrs. MacNeill. At the conclusion all joined in singing some snappy war time choruses and those dressed in the costumes of sailors and soldiers gave the flag salute.

There was a very large attendance. After the entertainment lunch was served. —S

Awards are Made For Brave Deeds In Saving Lives

HAMILTON, Nov. 24—(C.P.)—Many deeds of heroism and presence of mind throughout Canada are marked by awards of 14 bronze medals and 36 parchment certificates Canadian Humane Society today. Nine of the medals and 22 certificates go to Ontario and Quebec.

Howard Radford of Montreal, received the medal for saving a woman from drowning at the Cartierville Boating Club Aug. 13 of this year. Radford swam out and with difficulty brought her to shallow water. Parchment certificates are awarded to James B. Allen and Ronald Rodger, both of Montreal, for assisting in completing the rescue and applying resuscitation.

Twelve-year-old Cecil Anderson of Toronto (50 Bain Ave.) on June 4 last dived from the railing of a bridge into the weedy Don River and rescued his play-fellow James Martin as he was going down for the third time. He is awarded the bronze medal.

While fishing in the Speed River on April 7, Fred H. Myers of Preston, Ont., saw Jack and Sam Sykes in difficulty in the swollen waters. Myers, who is nearly 70 years of age, at considerable personal danger waded in and brought the two boys to safety in spite of the strong current. The Society announces the bronze medal for Mr. Myers. On April 27 William Foberdy of Paris, Ont., who has several rescues to his credit, saved Fred Bennett from the Grand River. He too receives the medal.

Miss Christine Shannik of Trenton, Ont., receives the medal for saving Andrew Reburn, aged four, from the icy waters of York River March 26, 1934. The child ventured too close to the edge of the ice and broke through. They were assisted to shore by others. Artificial respiration was required for Miss Shannik.

On May 20, 1931, John MacLellan, a mechanic at the Border Cities Aero Club made several gallant attempts to pull Maurice Heller from the burning wreckage of an aeroplane and was finally successful, although Heller died subsequently from his injuries. MacLellan, who was badly burned, now receives recognition for his act in the award of the bronze medal.

Other Ontario medal awards are: Charles F. Galway, Kingston, Ont., for his persistent but unsuccessful attempt to rescue H. Dalton, an overturned canoeist, from drowning in the Camwell River, Northwest Territories, Aug. 29, 1933.

Fred E. Smith, Galt, Ont., who July 23, 1934, risked his life in diving after a man in Tobacco Lake. He was able to bring him to the surface and have him revived after first aid. His sister, Miss Marie O. Smith of Gore Bay, receives a parchment certificate for assisting in this rescue.

Capt. J.C. Hodson, London, Ont., who at midnight July 17, 1934 jumped into a river near Petawawa Camp and rescued James McCutcheon from drowning.

Outside of Ontario and Quebec the bronze medal is awarded to Miss Myrtle MacDougall of Mount Oile, B.C., who though badly bruised, has been given up as incurable, or are at their wits' end and come to Dr. Gillet only as a last resort in desperation, in many cases his alleged cures if not miraculous are nevertheless marvelously. The world will soon learn more of this extraordinary treatment.
