American Diplomats Strive For New Purpose In NATO

By JOSEPH E. DYNAN

PAIS (AP) — American diplomats are striving, thus far with scant success, to inject a new sense of purpose and cohesion into the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

On the military front, NATO forces are in relatively good condition, with a terrifying nuclear arsenal at their disposal.

On the political level, the alliance is drifting, casting about for a suitable role in the decades ahead.

In grappling with the problems of the nuclear age, American and some other NATO leaders now are trying to spread the control of atomic defence—and responsibility for possible nuclear warfare — without increasing the number of nuclear nations. Or, as the jargon of NATO puts it, without proliferating nuclear armament.

This runs counter to President de Gaulle's determination to make France a nuclear nation and the dominant NATO power on the European continent.

WOULD PATROL COASTS

The latest American project to solve this dilemma centres on a multilateral force, which NATO has tabbed the MLF. This proposal envisages a NATO surface fleet armed with Polaris missiles and nuclear warheads, manned by crews of mixed nationalities, which would patrol European coasts.

The idea is that these vessels could retaliate immediately, destroying Russian targets in case the Soviet Union launched an invasion of Western Europe—and that this knowledge would deter the Russians from ever doing it. The vessels, jointly owned and operated, would constitute NATO's own nuclear weapon. Little countries such as Denmark or Holland, lacking their own nuclear armament, would have a voice in nuclear defence.

The chief and openly avowed reason for this scheme is West Germany. Barred by treaty from manufacturing their own atomic weapons, the Germans nonetheless constitute an anchor of Western defence across Central Europe. They are providing 12 divisions to the NATO front line, as compared with two or less from France and Britain.

The Germans feel that in any showdown their troops must have modern arms.

FEAR GERMAN FORCE

Many NATO statesmen fear that if France and Britain, and perhaps other states, develop as independent nuclear powers, then pressure will begin to build up among Germans for a strictly German nuclear force. This would be psychologically disastrous on the NATO side.

France has rejected MLF and refuses even to discuss it. Britain has joined the study with the proviso that this does not compel participation. The Britons question the expense as well as the utility. West Germany has endorsed it and is ready to pay a huge portion of the cost.

Thus here, as on the Central European land front, NATO's forces in being seem headed toward a sort of U.S.-West German alliance.

A "working party" to examine the feasibility of MLF includes Britain, the United States West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Greece and Turkey.

U.S. FINGER ON TRIGGER

A French objection is that the authority to fire nuclear weapons would remain in the hands of the American president.

The Americans contend that MLF is simply a suggestion, a starting point for further discussion. If the Europeans can come up with anything better, Washington will be glad to look into it. From this angle, MLF might be a trial balloon designed to prod Europeans into creative thought.

One possible alternative might be a European A-force, based on the combination of British and French nuclear power. There have been hints that Washington might consider sharing the nuclear trigger with a unified Europe if this ever emerges.

De Gaulle shows no sign of being willing to share control of his fledgling atomic forces with Britain or anyone else.

Four Arrested On Cheque Fraud

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police said here thev have taken four men into custody, climaxing investigations of cheque-fraud schemes reported to have amounted to nearly $200,000.

Two of the men are to be arraigned in Shawinigan in connection with the reported bilking of St. Maurice Valley dairy co-operatives of $100,000 in six weeks.

The suspects allegedly wrote cheques for butter purchases against newly-opened bank accounts, then withdrew the money before the cheques could be cashed.

The other two suspects are being held at Montreal.

Tweedsmuir Will Move Speech Reply

LONDON (Reuters) — When the new session of Parliament opens in the House of Lords on Tuesday, Lord Tweedsmuir, 51, son of the late John Buchan, the novelist and former governor-general of Canada, will move the loyal address in reply to the speech from the throne.

The seconder will be Lord Windlesham, former chairman of the Bow group, a Conservative party research organization.

Tweedsmuir, it is understood, plans to wear the uniform of a lieutenant - colonel of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment of the Canadian army in which he served from 1939 to 1945 and which he commanded in Sicily and Italy in 1943.

Lord Tweedsmuir, as Buchan was then known, was governor-general of Canada from 1935 to 1940. He died in Montreal in the spring of his last year in office.

Gov't To Name Committee On Radiation

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is establishing an advisory committee on radiation protection made up of university, government and non-government people, Health Minister LaMarsh told the Commons.

But existing detection measures were considered adequate at present.

Her statement was in reply to a recent submission by the Voice of Women organization which was sharply critical of existing methods of monitoring radioactive fallout in Canada.

The new advisory committee is based on a recommendation of the Dominion Council of Health, an advisory body whose members include senior provincial officers of health.

The council studied the Voice of Women's report, Miss LaMarsh said, and prepared a reply stating that "detection of fallout is only one of five interrelated factors which must be considered in assessing the total effects of this source of ionizing radiation on health."

But it "found no indication" of a need for additional radiation detection measures.

Top Steer Is Worth $3 Pound Dressed

HALIFAX (CP) — An Aberdeen Angus steer that topped the cattle auction at the Atlantic Winter Fair a $1.62 a pound now is worth $3 a pound as dressed meat. That's the value placed on it by James Earle, merchant manager for Dominion Stores Limited, who bought the animal for $1,409.40.

The steer was slaughtered by Nova Scotia Co-operative Abattoir Ltd. here after the sale Monday night. After hanging for two weeks or so to improve the flavor the meat will be sold in local supermarkets.

Mr. Earle said housewives will get the meat on a first-come-first-served basis at the regular price.

The steer, sold by Lindwood Farms of Lower Sackville, N.S., weighed 870 pounds. Sobey's Stores Limited paid the next highest price at the auction—$1 a pound for a 990-pound Hereford steer owned by Fulton Sanderson of North River, P.E.I.

Opening lead — three of spades.

Self-preservation is a basic law of life, and this instinct to survive extends to the bridge table as well. Any experienced player is bound to do everything in his power to protect himself from impending defeat.

Take a case like this one, for example, where South becomes declarer at four heart after taking the direct route to game over East's (weak) two spade bid. West leads the three of spades and East takes the ace and returns the queen.

If South lacks the instinct to survive, he will play the king and eventually suffer a one-trick defeat. He loses two spade tricks right away and eventually loses two more spades to go down one.

But if he senses the danger that exists, he will make the contract without much trouble.

It is certainly not difficult for him to diagnose West's opening lead as a singleton, and he should therefore be alert to the consequences of covering the queen of spades with the king.

Sure defeat is staring him in the eye if he wastes the king at trick two. He knows that the king will be ruffed and that he will almost surely have to lose two more spade tricks later.

Accordingly, he should duck the queen of spades and let East win the trick. When East now continues with the jack — as good a play as any he can make —South plays the nine, continuing to preserve the life of the monarch.

West can do no better than ruff the spade with the six, but the defense is by now out of steam. South makes the rest of the tricks with ease.

Declarer can also come to the same conclusion by looking at the problem from a different light. He has ten winning tricks after the ace of spades is played, and all he has to do to preserve them is make sure that one of them— the king of spades —does not get ruffed.
