PLAN SPACE SHOTS

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Russian cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin said Monday Russia intends to fire "several cosmonauts into outer space this year." He told students at a school in this Swedish capital the cosmonauts will "be put into orbit so they can be used to build permanent space stations" from which a man would be landed on the moon before 1970.

'DEATH RAY' GUN OF THE FUTURE?

Engineer Gaylen Lyell holds a light ray or laser rifle turned over to Army at Boston, Mass., for testing which developer Maser Optics Inc. says could immapacitate enemy soldiers at a distance. Unit at right is laser which uses a ruby rod to amplify light beam and send it out as highly directional light of same wave length through a lens. This gun with two-inch lens can shoot light in beam less than two feet wide at a fifth of a mile. Not shown is battery back to power flash unit. (AP Wirephoto)
