Quebec Circles Question Hamilton Falls Feasibility

QUEBEC (CP) — Questions are being raised in political circles here about the physical and economic feasibility of Newfoundland's plans to bypass Quebec and route power from Labrador to New England via a system of underwater cables and overland wires.

The Quebec government has indicated it doesn't want to blow the Hamilton Falls power issue into a full-scale controversy through a unilateral change of public statemen's with Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland.

However, comments heard in legislature circles make it clear that the government does not think highly of Mr. Smallwood's plans.

The Montreal Gazette in a report from its Quebec correspondent quoted unnamed government officials as saying they remain convinced Mr. Smallwood's whole idea was a gigantic bluff designed to stampede Quebec into coming to terms on a power agreement.

The newspaper said reaction in Quebec was that Mr. Smallwood's alternative route plan was wonderfully imaginative and wildly impractical.

SALE WAS PROPOSED

Originally it was proposed the power from Hamilton Falls be sold to Hydro - Quebec at the Labrador border and then be transmitted overland to New England. Quebec broke off negotiations last July on grounds that it had not been possible to reach an agreement on delivering the power to Hydro-Quebec at an economic price.

Premier Jean Lesage has said repeatedly the door is still open to a resumption of negotiations.

But Mr. Smallwood announced last Thursday he had "escaped Quebec's clutches" and his government planned to adopt an engineering report which said that power could be transmitted from Labrador to Newfoundland and the Maritimes via underwater cables and then overland to New England.

The feeling in Quebec government circles is this route would be longer and costlier than an overland line through Quebec. Quebec has had one experience with underwater cables and it proved a costly failure. The cables were designed to carry power from the Bersimis development on the north shore of the St. Lawrence to the Gaspe Peninsula on the south shore, 31 miles. The cables never worked properly and eventually were abandoned.

A question Quebec officials are also asking is why Premier Smallwood rejects the idea of having Hamilton Falls developed under public rather than private control. The Quebec officials say experience here and elsewhere indicates public rather than private development is the most economic procedure in this area. They say even in the United States public development of power sites is considered orthodox.

WOULD CUT COST

At Hamilton Falls, for instance, Quebec feels public ownership would cut financing costs by half and wipe out the federal taxes a private development would have to pay.

"How do you explain Premier Smallwood's attitude?" a reporter asked Premier Lesage last week.

"I don't explain it," Mr. Lesage replied. "I leave it to your imagination."

British Newfoundland Development Corporation (Brinco) controls about 80 per cent of Hamilton Falls Power Company, which holds a renewable 99-year lease on development rights on the Hamilton River.

Quebec-Hydro owns about 15 per cent of the company and Newfoundland about five per cent, according to unconfirmed reports.

Premier Lesage says Quebec has "never closed the door" to a plan by which this group would spend $700,000,000 to develop the falls privately. Selling 1,000,000 watts of power annually to Quebec-Hydro would extend 735-kilovolt transmission lines 400 miles to the Labrador border, at a cost almost as great as that of the turbine installation at the falls, and resell half the power to New York.

T.:LKS BROKEN

Premier Lesage says negotiations between Quebec and Britons have been "interrupted" since last July because agreement can't be reached on the price at which the power would be sold to Quebec-Hydro.

Quebec balked at the price Brinco suggested because it would place Quebec-Hydro in an untenable position. Hydro would have to buy the power through a fixed-rate agreement over a long term, then maintain the transmission lines and face eventual competition from power produced by atomic energy.

For Brinco, the profit may not be in line with the capital risk involved if the price to Quebec-Hydro is lowered.

One solution — probably the only one — to this dilemma would be for Newfoundland to nationalize Hamilton Falls Power Company, giving Brinco compensation for the $40,000,000 investment it already has made at the site and a fair price for its share in the falls.

Premier Smallwood says Quebec made this a condition for its participation in the development but Premier Lesage denies this.

Quebec's only stand has been to say it is willing to participate provided the price to Quebec-Hydro is right. If Brinco can meet the price, it is right.

If it can't, then nationalization might be an alternative. But this decision is for Premier Smallwood alone to make.

Premier Lesage has suggested it would mean added benefits to both Quebec and Newfoundland. And Brinco, treading carefully between the two provinces has never criticized the procedure as a possible solution.

No Russian Retreat Seen In Quarrel With Red China

By HENRY S. BRADSHER

MOSCOW (AP) —High sources said here the Soviet Union has no intention of giving an inch in its bitter ideological quarrel with China

They said the Kremlin is pressing ahead with plans for a world Communist congress which, Westerners believe, they hope will isolate the Chinese

The sources said the world conference will be held in an attempt to bring unity to communism, but added firmly that the Soviet Union is not going to change its stand on any point.

The sources said the timetable of the world conference has been changed.

A preparatory meeting will be held beginning Dec. 15 as originally planned. But postponement leaves unchanged Soviet long-range thinking about China.

The conference is expected by the non - Communist observers to bring a showdown on which Communists support Moscow and which follow Peking's more militant brand of revolutionary communism. Some Communists, such as Romanian ones, have already tried to stake out an independent third position.

ANGERS KREMLIN

The sources high in the Soviet Communist party leadership said the new Kremlin leaders had been angered by a recent Chinese attack on former premier Khrushchev and his policies.

The policies criticized have been endorsed by Khrushchev's successors in the top Soviet jobs, party first secretary Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin.

The Chinese attack was made in Peking's theoretical journal Red Flag on Nov. 21.

Soviet leaders were particularly angered by Chinese criticism of de - Stalinization. The sources indicated that Soviet foreign policy might be debated with foreign Communists but Russian internal policy was not a proper subject for Chinese comment.

The possibility of a Soviet-Chinese meeting early next year in Peking was greatly reduced by the Red Flag attack and the general Chinese attitude behind it, Soviet sources said Sunday.

Opening lead—king of clubs

A spectacular play provides good newspaper copy when it is successful, but usually, when the play is afterwards examined closely, it is found to be based on little more than good sound reasoning.

For example, look at this hand played in a team of four championship by Alvin Roth, famed New York expert.

Roth became declarer at four hearts on the bidding shown. West led the king of clubs and continued with the ace, which South ruffed.

Declarer now led the king of hearts, which West took with the ace. Had West played another club at this point Roth would have had no trouble making the contract. He would have ruffed, drawn trumps, taken a diamond finesse, and thus made ten tricks.

But West shifted the king of spades after taking the ace of hearts. Roth took the spade with the ace, drew trumps, led the ten of diamonds, went up with the ace, felling the king, and thus made the contract with an overtrick. Had he taken the diamond finesse, he would have gone down one.

On the surface, the sensational play of the ace, spearing the king, does look very odd. The finesse appears to be clearly the better play, even though it would have failed in this instance.

But Roth has been around for a long time and has made many plays of this nature which turned out well, and this one, like so many others, had a very sound basis.

Roth realized that West, a good player, had never bid — even though he had shown up during the play with the A, K of clubs, ace of hearts, and king of spades Roth therefore concluded that West could not have the king of diamonds or he would have entered the bidding.

This being the case, the diamond finesse was marked to lose. Roth played for his one and only chance— that East's king was a singleton.
