TALKING WITH COAL. The idea that coal has any connection with telephones may seem strange to many people. More startling is the fact that this particular kind of coal costs about $10.00 per ton.

Millions of people use this coal every day though they do not recognize it. It is found in the microphone of every telephone.

Most people know how the vibrations of the voice alter the resistance of the carbon granules and thus impress the sound waves on the electric current. To prepare granules for the telephone transmitter, blocks of the finest anthracite coal are taken. Anthracite is chosen because it is rich in carbon, which renders it suitable for the work of varying the electric current.

When the lumps are ground up the dust is sifted and all that is not of the correct size is thrown aside. The remainder is washed and treated with various chemical solutions to remove all impurities. This work requires skill and technical knowledge, as any foreign matter will prevent the granules from taking up the subtle variations of the voice and will cause unwanted noises in the telephone.

After this the granules are rinsed and dried, and sorted by several ingenious methods so that only the best and most suitable are left. They are then ready for the microphone. If we look at them under a microscope they appear as small lumps of clean shiny coal.

It is not surprising to find that the original blocks of anthracite have now reached the value of $5 a pound. Although the price sounds high there is no need to worry. A pound is sufficient for more than two thousand microphones!

Assuredly by more than 300 per cent.

When the fourteenth Legislature of Nova Scotia was dissolved last Summer there were but two Conservatives in it. In the general election of June 25 forty Conservatives were returned leaving the Liberals in possession of only three seats.

When the eighth Legislative Assembly of New Brunswick was dissolved last Summer it contained 12 Conservative members of the total 48. When the voting was over in the general election of August 10 the return showed 36 Conservatives elected against 12 Liberals.

So in the last three years the Conservative party has captured control of four provinces, in every case changing from a small minority to a large majority. From a party whose fortunes had reached the low point the Conservatives rose to a position of greater strength than that their opponents had previously held.

The sweep of Conservative victory, which began in this Province in May 1923 and has continued until all the four provinces mentioned are now under strong governments backed by the great mass of the people, is not going to stop, but will keep on until the King Government is overwhelmed. In the present mood of the Canadian people election overturns are not a matter of narrow margin. The popular will in such cases approaches unanimity. Political incapacity, trifling with the vital interests of the public, relying upon the shortness of the people's memories and their supposed apathy in regard to the business of the commonwealth—all this has had its day and the people are now having their revenge.

The country was suffering the nervous reaction that followed the great strain of the war, everybody was against the Government. Premier Hearst was defeated in Ontario and the affairs of the Province were rashly committed to the hands of men without political experience who proved themselves to be without political capacity. In all the countries that had taken part in the war there was similar unrest and disposition to visit upon the government the general spirit of irritation. The Wilson Government was swept away in the United States, and in every case of the nations on the Continent of Europe changes of government were brought about.

The Meighen Government here suffered the common fate of the time and was put out of office to make way for Premier King, who in the war years could not have been elected in any English-speaking riding of Canada. Only a very small remnant of the Liberal party sympathized with his stand against the measure for recruiting our valiant men at the front.

There has been truly a great change in the temper of the people since then. Now, instead of supinely putting up with abuse of the country by the Government of the day, the people of Canada are alert and determined to put at the head of their affairs men committed to the National Policy, resolved to put the country in the world race for population, prosperity and progress along all national lines.

Canada cannot be prevented from becoming a very great nation. It is for the people of Canada to give the signal for the forward march of this Dominion by casting their ballots for the candidates nominated to support Mr. Meighen. Ballots for other candidates will be wasted.—(Daily Mail and Empire, Toronto.)

son, and many other of frail physique, and does Mr. Meighen's bearing not recall the dominant souls that were never stayed by bodily weakness but like Wolfe and Nelson, conquered in spite of all.

"Both were frail in body," says Goldwin Smith; "aspiring in soul, sensitive, liable to fits of despondency, sustained against all weaknesses by an ardent zeal for the public service, and gifted with the same quick eye and the same intuitive powers of command. There was more in Nelson of the love of glory, more in Wolfe of the love of duty." "It is no time to think of what is convenient or agreeable; that service is certainly the best in which we are the most useful—for my part I am determined never to give myself a moment's concern about the nature of a duty which His Majesty is pleased to order us upon; and whether it is by land or sea that we are to act in obedience to his commands, I hope that we shall conduct ourselves to meet with his approbation."

It is this spirit of obedience that makes the leader who can command, and we know with what obedient service the present Conservative leader toiled throughout the years of the Great War. These elder leaders stirred the world with the force of indomitable will. So it is that Arthur Meighen is stirring the will of the people of Canada. The will of the people smites like a thunderbolt.

Did you ever find a child who does not love the story of the gingerbread man? And even better than the story, children love the gingerbread man himself. Cookies taste much better and will give many times the enjoyment if some of the dough is fashioned into the hero of this much told tale.

If you do not have a cutter a pattern can be made from stiff white paper. Lay this on the rolled dough and cut round it with a sharp knife. Use your ingenuity in "dressing" the gingerbread man. Raisins, currants or dots of frosting will do for buttons shredded bran makes realistically bushy eye brows—eyes, nose and mouth can be drawn with frosting or melted chocolate.

The original gingerbread man wore a coat made from pink icing which gave him a very gentlemanly appearance. The modern one is sometimes dressed in cow-boy outfit. Shredded bran makes wonderful chaps—sprinkle it on before the cookies are baked and press it into the dough with a rolling pin. Put a belt and gun with melted chocolate. A gay bandana can be produced with colored frosting.

A simple recipe for Gingerbread Men is as follows: 1 cup shorting, 1 cup brown sugar
