CANDIDATES

The New Democratic party is the only one with a straightforward, clear cut stand on nuclear weapons, claimed the speaker who said nobody knows where the PCs stand, and charged that the Liberal attitude seems to be to accept nuclear weapons now, and then renegotiate to get rid of them in a few weeks or a few months. This, he charged, is a direct change from a year ago when their policy was the same as ours is today."

Mr. Pearson knows in his heart that accepting nuclear warheads for Canada is wrong, but he was pressured into the stand by Liberals who saw a chance to win votes by the decision, the Cape Breton man charged. There is no need for such a move which would be valueless as the United States has all the nuclear deterrent needed, he maintained.

Canada can and should make a useful contribution to NATO defence by supplying conventional forces, he added. Mr. Pearson is asking for a "stable" government but "a majority government doesn't necessarily mean a good government. We has a party with the biggest majority in history in 1958 but it wasn't a good government, nor did the majority Liberal group of 1953 provide good government," he maintained.

Alex MacLean said transportation to the mainland is a problem that will exist until some political party takes it in hand and does something about it. "Although my colleague, Mr. Arsenault, and I are members of labor unions we realize", he said, "that the farmer is even worse off than organized labor, when he should have parity price related to his production costs."

Those who work in our fish plants are asked to proces the product at starvation prices or even worse, he said. A New Democratic government could do something about that, Mr. MacLean stated.

PROMISES FORGOTTEN

Mr. McInnis recalled that Prime Minister Diefenbaker had promised parity prices to the Island farmer in Summerside in 1958, had promised aid to the potato grower when he was in Charlottetown last year but had done nothing on either occasion.

Mr. Arsenault suggested the party could at least double its vote production this time, and Mr. Fontaine suggested that some 4,000 votes were polled last year due to the efforts of 10 men. "If everyone in this hall worked, you could treble that vote", he advised.

Mr. Dunphy pledged his best efforts and asked for all the support that can be given him.

VETERAN SPEAKER

Mr. Mullin discussed party principles and gave fatherly advice "from the experience of a man who has recently turned 80."

A tap dancing performance by Marlene and Debbie Webster, Parkdale was warmly encored.

The nomination of Mr. Dunphy was moved by Charles Campbell, Alex MacLean was moved by Herman Mayne, Emerald and seconded by Tiel Erkelens, Charlottetown and Mr. Arsenault was moved by Leo McIsaac, Mermaid and seconded by Perley Rayner, Charlottetown.

The nomination of Mr. McInnis was moved by William Handrahan, Tignish and seconded by Perley Raynor. Opposing him were Douglas MacFarlane, Bedeque who was moved by D. J. Mullins and Harvey Dawson, Tignish who was moved by Clifford Murphy, Charlottetown and seconded by Clifford Bernard.

OFFICERS ELECTED

Tommy Dunphy, Peakes was named vice-president for Kings; Leonard Arsenault for Queens and D.J. Mullin, Prince. Mary Ann Gledhill was named secretary-treasurer. Executive members for Kings are Bill Quinn, Brendan Dunphy, and Tyler Beck, Montague and Victor Bernard; for Queens Wilfred Driscoll, Charlottetown; Ian Webster, Clifford Murphy; Alex MacLean and Tiel Erickens; for Prince, Douglas MacFarlane, Harvey Dawson, Bill Handrahan, John Fitzpatrick, Summerside and Arnold Wood, Cape Wolfe.

Restless Red Intellectuals Are Tabbed Anti-Communists

By ROBERT TUCKMAN

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev has branded the Soviet Union's restless intellectuals anti - Communists who threaten to undermine the Soviet system.

In a speech Friday to about 500 writers, artists and other intellectuals at the Kremlin, Khrushchev pilloried Ilya Ehrenburg, 72-year-old leader of the liberal forces, in terms reminiscent of the 1957 condemnations of the late poet-author Boris Pasternak.

Sunday newspapers devoted four pages to his address, and it was read over Radio Moscow in a 2½-hour broadcast.

Khrushchev's words were widely regarded as an ultimatum to writers, painters, composers and other artists who had challenged the authority of the Communist party in cultural affairs.

Their challenge, expressed by Ehrenburg in a series of recent meetings, was a plea for peaceful coexistence between the officially approved socialist realism and art forms imported from the West.

BETRAYS PRINCIPLES

Khrushchev rejected this, saying: "Peaceful coexistence in the field of ideology is a betrayal of Marxism - Leninism, treachery to the cause of the workers and peasants."

A liberal victory on this issue, he said, would mean "a blow at our revolutionary achievements in the area of socialist art."

"By the logic of the struggle, the affair could hardly stop at this," he added. "It is not to be excluded that these people, gathering their forces, would undertake an attempted attack on the achievements of the revolution."

CHIDES POET

Khrushchev also called a popular young poet, Yevgeny Yevtushenko, to repentance for his firm support of Ehrenburg's dissent against the government's campaign against abstract art.

Alluding to Yevtushenko's reputation in the West as an "angry young man," the premier chided him:

"If the enemies of our cause begin to praise you for works convenient to their purposes, then the people will rightly criticize you. So choose what suits you best."

The Soviet party chief presented a rebuttal of charges that artists under Stalin "varnished reality" while knowing of his crimes.

Khrushchev defended them and present party leaders, saying: "They believed Stalin and didn't even think that repressions could be directed against honest people who were devoted to the cause."

Typical Soviet Union Spy Has No Recognizable Image

By JOHN EDGAR HOOVER
Director of FBI
AP Copyright 1963

WASHINGTON (AP)—In this era of the Soviet spy, these questions often are asked:

"Who is a Soviet spy?" "What does he look like?" "Does he have a profile?"

Many people, undoubtedly, have a mental image of a spy—perhaps a good-looking, Mata type, ready to romantically deceive, or a dire-faced fellow, in a long coat, racing up and down an alley.

Nothing could be further from the truth—for the profile of a Soviet spy today is that he has no profile. By this I mean it is not possible to set up any composite picture—because he is so different, so varied.

The spy may be old or young, man or woman, of any national background. He may be highly educated or illiterate; he may be a doctor, dentist, stenographer, military man, government worker, scientist or of any trade or profession; he may be highly trained as a spy or a neophyte; he may live in a cheap boarding house with no money in his pocket or reside in a swanky home.

PHILADELPHIA CHEMIST

Harry Gold was a rather undistinguished chemist from Philadelphia. His contact, Dr. Klaus Fuchs — who furnished Gold with data about the most valuable United States secret of the Second World War, the atomic bomb—was a highly competent, well-educated scientist. Another Gold contact, David Greenglass, though not a scientist, was in an army assignment at Los Alamos which enabled him to sketch the lens mold of the atomic bomb. Then there was David's wife, Ruth. She didn't actually commit espionage, but helped solicit her husband to do his spy work.

All the spies in the case—including Julius and Ethel Rosenberg—were different, yet they were part of one of the most dangerous spy combinations ever directed against the United States.

A typist, a file clerk or a charwoman —any person who has access to coveted industrial and scientific documents — can be valuable to the Russians.

SOME ARE MASTERS

Then, like Col. Rudolf Abel, there are deep - cover Soviet spies—native Russians, professionally trained in espionage, who enter a foreign country with false identification papers. Col. Abel posed as a photographer with a studio on the fifth floor of a Brooklyn building. He was an ordinary-looking fellow who would never command a second glance on the street—yet he was a master Soviet spy.

After his arrest, the FBI found that his studio and hotel room were virtual museums of espionage equipment — cipher pads, shortwave radios, equipment for producing microdots. Found also were containers, such as coins and shaving brushes, which had been hallowed out to hide messages.

This lack of a standard profile for a Soviet spy makes the task of detection more difficult.

The ordinary citizen can help.

Not long ago a photographer called the FBI to report some information. On the basis of his call we were able to identify a Russian diplomat who, operating under an alias, was trying to obtain a special high-altitude aerial map of New York City of a type ont commercially available—a map which could have been of prime military value.

This photographer's vigilance paid high dividends.

ULTIMATUM

DISPUTE CLAIM

Company figures dispute Vogel's claim that he hasn't had a raise in five years. The company says there was an increase of 2.5 per cent in base pay Jan. 1, 1960, and another four-per-cent May 1, 1960. In 1961, there was a boost of three per cent on Feb. 1 and another 2.5 per cent Sept. 1. This was followed by two per cent Jan. 1, 1962.

Coal still provides about two-thirds of France's energy needs. Coal consumption is still going up, and is expected to rise at least until 1965, despite sharply increasing use of petroleum and natural gas. French mines produced about 60,000,000 tons in 1959, but this will gradually be reduced to about 55,000,000 tons by 1965. Meantime, consumption has been running about 70,000,000 tons and is expected to reach 75,000,000 tons in 1965. The differences between production and consumption are made up by imports.

Business News Is Dimmed By Uproar From Hustings

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Business news can scarcely rise above the roar of the hustings these days.

Even the most competent analysis of current situations loses much of its point because of uncertainty about what policies may prevail after April 8.

Of necessity, however, business must go on much as usual and shows only a minimum of upset. The business community, in fact, appears to have learned to live with both national and international problems with amazing calm.

The season of annual reports and annual meetings, now heading for its peak, brings a generally cheerful picture from last year's brisk-paced activities.

News of increased earnings, however, is tempered by concern over narrow profit margins. In some cases increase sales were accompanied by lessened profit, and in some others the profit situation was saved by special circumstances. The lower foreign exchange value of the Canadian dollar brought a rosy hue to many statements that would otherwise have been much more sombre.

The prime question now is the extent to which this year may match last year's progress.

ECONOMY BRIGHTENING

The March bulletin of the Canadian Association of Purchasing Agents says February provided evidence of renewed activity in manufacturing and processing industries. Production, new orders and employment were reported higher, while inventories of raw and finished materials appeared to have declined slightly. Prices were generally firm.

This is more cheerful comment than a month ago when the association's February bulletin said: "The January survey of manufacturing and processing industries showed a continuation of the levelling trend noted in December."

The bureau of statistics says Canadian exports were up to all main geographic areas in January—a record total for the month of $546,800,000, up 8.7 per cent over last January.

Canadian Marconi Company is among the growing list of Canadian producers who are finding the United States market receptive to Canadian reliability sets. On the basis of last year's results, the company is exploring ways of expanding American sales.

Automobile news continues buoyant. Ford of Canada, preparing for two-shift operation at its assembly plant at Oakville, Ont., has added 1,000 hourly-rated workers since production of 1963 model passenger cars started, bringing the plant's current total of hourly-rated personnel to 4,100.

VOLVO DROPS PRICES

Volvo (Canada) Ltd. announces reductions of $100 to $300 in the price of its Swedish-made cars, in anticipation of the start of Canadian production in the Halifax area in mid-year.

The Volvo decision to assemble in Canada, along with reports that Renault and British Motor Corporation might do the same, gives quite a fillup to the idea of increased Canadian production of European - model cars, but automotive spokesmen state that this can be a feasible proposition only under certain circumstances.

Volkswagen, for instance, at its current rate of production, can produce enough cars in a week in its German plant to supply its Canadian sales for a year. Under such circumstances, a spokesman said, it is impossible to produce as cheaply in Canada. He felt there is opportunity for a greater contribution to Canadian industry in the export of automotive equipment to European assembly lines.

The report concerning British Motor Corporation was that it would start assembly at Hamilton, but the company stated that the matter is still under study and no decision has been made.

END LOBSTER WAR

BREST, France (AP) — The undeclared lobster war between France and Brazil appears to be ended. French lobster boats which had been fishing in the disputed waters off Brazil's northeast coast received orders to leave for other waters, the owners said. One of the trawlers from Btirtany ports sailed from the disputed area off Brazil last week. The other five trawlers received orders to leave during the weekend.
