ALBERTON

The newly appointed mayor of the town of Alberton is Mr. G. R. Proff, as there was only one name for nomination, he was elected by acclamation on Tuesday, the 18th. Councillors are: Messrs. W. R. Oulton, Heber Cobbett, re-elected, Merritt Callaghan.

Mr. J. A. MacKinnon is visiting in Alberton, the guest of her daughter, Mrs. W. R. Oulton.

Friends regret the illness of Mrs. Catherine O'Brien at the home of her nephew, Mr. Alfred Gillis, Kildare South, and wish her a speedy recovery.

There is a general epidemic of "flu" among our town and country folk, most prevalent among the school children and children of pre-school age.

Little Miss Brenda Inman, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Inman, Jr., accidentally had the little finger of her left hand smashed by a closing door. She was immediately rushed to the Western Hospital where she received medical aid and returned home the same evening.

Mr. John Moran was a business visitor to Charlottetown the early part of the week.

Mr. Leo MacDonald, who fell and hurt his side while on duty at Borden pier, has returned to work after a ten day lay-off.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Stewart of Charlottetown and Mrs. John MacLean of Borden left on Tuesday for Montreal where they will attend the MacConnell and Stewart wedding, which takes place there in the near future.

At the hockey game which took place here on Monday night between the Victoria Vikings and Borden Nationals upwards of 900 spectators were in attendance, probably the largest crowd in the history of the rink. After a rather tugged game at Victoria on Friday which ended in a 6-6 tie, excitement ran high and crowds thronged the rink. The game was fast and clean with referees MacLeod and Arsenault doing a fine job. The game ended 8-2 in favor of Borden which gives them the right to meet the cautious service at the rink this winter is run by Mr. John Noonan and is receiving the patronage of all rink-goers.

Mr. Russell Lewis, Summerside, recently spent a brief holiday at his former home in Hills River. Mr. Lewis also visited his mother, Mrs. Henry Lewis, Conception, who is able to be about and is enjoying excellent health at the age of 92 years.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28. Because sow prefer to lie with their backs higher than their bellies and because of a Kentucky farmer's bad luck, thousands of little pigs which otherwise might have died are growing up into prize porkers.

The Department of Agriculture said the farmer's bad luck was the fact that the foundation of his pig farrowing house slipped, throwing the floor on a slant.

A few days later a new litter of pigs was born. Not one was crushed by its mother, as sometimes happens. Succeeding litters likewise reached maturity without accident and the farmer checked more carefully.

He found that the mother sow preferred to lie with her back to the high side of the floor while the clumsy little pigs tended to tumble to the low side. The result was that when the sow decided to lie down, the pigs usually were out of harm's way.

Other farmers began to slant the floors of their farrowing houses deliberately. One reported to the department that he saved an average of 9.2 pigs per litter compared with only 7.2 on an even floor.

The department now is recommending that farmers slant the floors of all farrowing houses. It said that a slope of only an inch and a half to the foot works very well.

of their industry had been relaxed. "It is generally agreed," he told The Guardian today, "that the cost of operating holiday resorts has advanced very considerably in the last few years. It is also agreed that the operator of a holiday centre is entitled to at least a fair margin of profit on his investment."

"It should be borne in mind also that rate charged for summer tourist accommodation in Canada have been far below those in the United States. This applies all along the line from the more expensive establishments operated by instance by the railroads to those catering to tourists of moderate income, and is particularly true in the case of the Maritime Provinces.

"In lifting the restrictions hitherto placed on establishments catering to tourists, the Government recognized that they had been operating under a handicap, and that upward adjustment of rates was quite reasonable in view of mounting costs.

Mr. Dolan said that the tourist industry in the Maritimes was a large, important, and well-run enterprise. Both individuals and companies catering to the travelling public had high standards of ethics and were too farsighted to take advantage of a government cutting to overcharge their customers.

"I do not believe," he said, "that lifting of controls on holiday resorts will have any effect at all on the summer visitors coming to Canada from the United States. It is possible that it may have the effect of slightly lessening the volume of domestic summer travel but not to any great extent."

"We have also continued to collaborate with France in a number of other directions," Bevin added. "There has been more than one meeting recently of the standing Anglo-French economic committee, and experts of both sides are continually working on problems connected with the commercial relations of our two countries."

British and French officials had recently exchanged views on matters connected with Germany by

It should not be thought that Bevin was neglecting her relations with other countries. Agreements had been concluded with France, Belgium, Luxembourg and Norway for reducing restrictions on travel between Britain and these countries and it was hoped similar agreement would soon be signed with other countries.

Bevin made it clear that he was not going to Moscow to make a treaty with Germany, but to take the necessary steps to provide the next stage towards conclusion of that treaty. "Whatever may be done, it must not increase the cost to the British taxpayer who had already borne heavy burden."

Bevin said that because of their sacrifices in two world wars the Dominions must be adequately consulted in peace settlements and arrangements for such consultations must be made for the sake of future goodwill.

Views on Germany. The slow-speaking Foreign Minister set himself against a centralized government for Germany with comment that the security of Europe had to be provided and "I am not sure yet, even after two wars and two defeats, whether Germany really recognize the effects of defeat and the stupidity of war as an object of policy."

The Germans must learn by education or some other way. "The first essential was the full agreement between the four powers."

Bevin announced that the British Government would shortly put to Russia its proposals for revision of the Anglo-Soviet treaty of 1942, in which Generalissimo Stalin had made it clear that there were several out-of-date passages.

There was complete agreement between Stalin and Bevin made by the treaty, despite charges made by the Communist Party organ Pravda in December, which Bevin described as "a little misunderstanding" of a sentence in his radio broadcast.

However, Bevin remarked: "I cannot help wishing that the Soviet Government had taken the matter up in the first place through diplomatic channels."

His speech, opening a one-day debate on foreign policy, covered a wide range of subjects.

Word of Caution. Bevin cautioned the British people not to "expect too much" from the foreign ministers conference. He said the ministers faced "terrible difficulties."

Referring to the failure of negotiations for revision of the 1936 Anglo-Egyptian treaty, Bevin said it was clear that there was a great desire that a new treaty should be established but the main point of contention was the Sudan.

If the Egyptian Government pursues the course it has announced, Bevin declared, then Britain has a completed answer.

"In our view the treaty of 1936 saved Egypt and indeed saved the Allies and prevented a great dis-

The tanker Contreras, which normally has a crew of 46, advised by radio that it was disabled 50 miles east of Key West, Fla., the Coast Guard reported. Another fishing vessel, the dragger Rainbow, became disabled 60 miles east of Boston, her home port, but was towed in by the Coast Guard.

In a statement on general disarmament he said Britain believes that any satisfactory system must be based on collective security so firm that "no one country would be left to hold the enemy for a considerable time while the others were considering whether they would come to the assistance."

participated in the invasion of Normandy, was taken in tow by the Coast Guard cutter Cherokee off the Virginia coast and reached Hampton Roads, Va., safely. The liner had reported springing a leak in rough seas.

Also in distress 245 miles southeast of Bermuda was the schooner Winifred Marla. The navy tug Holst, however, was standing by to aid her although sales prevented the rescue vessel from getting a line aboard at once.

Schooner Loses Sails. The old Cape Verde packet Lucy and Evelyn, a three-masted schooner, wallowed in heaving seas 150 miles southeast of Cape Cod light, stripped of all but her mizzen sail.

She had no radio but was sighted by a Boston trader. The Coast Guard cutter Legare was speeding to her aid. A Navy plane also was dispatched to help the Legare find the schooner. The Lucy and Evelyn was en route from Africa to New Bedford, Mass., but already had been brought disabled into Norfolk 11 days ago.
