
RUSSIAN EMBASSY HIT BY TAR

A large spot of dripping black tar is visible on the wall near the entrance to the Soviet embassy in Washington after it was spattered yesterday by a group of Cuban refugees protesting last week's student attack against the U.S. embassy in Moscow. They also were protesting, they said what they termed the presence of 40,000 Russian troops in Cuba.

Island Students At Dal Urge SDU-PWC Unity

The Prince Edward Islander's Society of Dalhousie University, Halifax, has outlined its views on the qeustion of higher education on P.E.I.

The group, composed of Island students studying at Dalhousie, states it has sent a document containing recommendations on the matter to Minister of Education L. G. Dewar, and copies to all members of the Legislature. Signatures of 53 members of the society were attached to the document.

The following recommendations were made by the students:

1. That the Prince of Wales College Act be proclaimed as soon as possible, and a board of governors consisting of people who have hitherto shown some interest in the institution's future be appointed.

2. That the recommendations of the Royal Commission report regarding financial assistance to Prince of Wales and Saint Dunstan's be accepted and acted upon now.

3. That the proposed scheme for the unification of Prince of Wales College and Saint Dunstan's University is basically sound, and after Prince of Wales is established in a suitable fashion, discussions aimed at achieving this end be undertaken between the two institutions concerned.

4. Should these recommendations of the recent Royal Commission not be feasible at this time, then Prince of Wales College as it now exists should be removed from government control and allowed to conduct its operations and negotiations with Saint Dunstan's as an entity in its own right and with its future entirely in its own hands. Should this happen, clause (2) above would still apply.

PEARSON

yond April 10 the government would have no money.

The government would then have to call an election, or adjourn Parliament and operate on governor - general's warrants until it thought Parliament's mood had changed. This latter method is drowned upon and would be an unlikely course.

Proponents of an early election say all private and public opinion polls indicate the Liberals can win a clear majority in a general election now—this despite the scandal allegations.

TAX CUTS?

The government is also blessed with a booming economy. Tax cuts, always good at election time, are a possibility when Finance Minister Gordon presents his budget in a few weeks.

Besides, the Liberals consider the Conseratives' internal troubles will prevent them capitalizing on the government difficulties. They see the smaller parties making some gains but not enough to allow the Conservatives to get back in power.

Some sources say it would be desirable, but not crucial, for the government to await Chief Justice Frederic Dorion's report on the Denis-Rivard affair before starting the campaign.

Others in the cabinet and the party want no election this year. They argue the government can carry on, albeit with difficulties, and that the public should be allowed to forget the scandal allegations first.

Before Christmas, Mr. Pearson said he had no plans for an election but that the party must be prepared for one if it is forced. At a New Year's Eve press conference, he said he was "not a betting man" when asked about the odds on an election
