Nfld. Feed Company Fast Growing Concern

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The government of Newfoundland and a fast-growing agriculture industry are co-operating to make one of the province's newest business ventures a sure-fire success.

Nine months ago, Fortress Formula Feeds Ltd. had established its market, had been operating six weeks and was supplying farmers on the Avalon Peninsula with about 20 tons of formulated feeds a day. Today the figure has risen to nearly 30 tons a day.

The new plant, which employs 14 people year-round, was financed by Robin Hood Flour Mills Ltd. in co-operation with the provincial government. Premier Smallwood described it as part of a government program of agricultural expansion.

Greatest advantage was the ability of the mill to supply the farmer with freshly produced feed—something that was almost impossible before. Previously, when a farmer here wanted food for livestock and poultry he could buy a small quantity of stale feed from a retailer or have a large consignment come in from the mainland.

The large consignments were usually economically prohibitive for the small farmer. Now he can back his truck up to the door of the mill only a few miles from his home and buy any quantity of the fresh product.

Sales volumes are expected to reach 100 tons a day within five years.

The government's aim in supporting the mill is to make conditions favorable for farming and poultry producing to become a profitable business and thereby make the province increasingly more self-sustaining in beef and poultry products.

Today, Newfoundland produces only half as many eggs as it consumes. For every seven chickens eaten, only one is grown here. The province's half-million people also consume 30,000,000 pounds of beef a year but only 2,000,000 is produced locally.

The success of the feed project may be influenced by three other ventures now in the developing stages.

At nearby Pepperrell, the government is co-operating in the construction of a poultry processing plant and an abbatoir is also being built in the area. These will give the farmers a ready market for large volumes of produce that was not available before.

The third venture is the largest. D. W. Hale, manager of the new feed mill, said his company is watching with "great interest" the 1,000 head of cattle brought here last month from Saskatchewan to develop a beef-producing area on the Burin Peninsula.

Mr. Hale said it was the intention of the ranchers to use pasture as much as possible for the cattle feed but his company hopes "to be able to supply any supplemental feeds required for this project."

Quebec Support For Tories Said Lost By Four Decisions

By DAVE BUTLER

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Prof. Paul Fox of the University of Toronto's political economy department said here four policy decisions including the execution of Louis Riel in 1885 brought about the alienation of Quebec toward the Progressive Conservative party.

Speaking before the 21st general council of the United Church of Canada, Prof. Fox said with the advent of John Diefenbaker to its leadership in 1956, the Conservative party shifted the nature of its appeal and its political base.

"(Originally under its first leader, Sir John A. Macdonald, the party drew considerable strength from Quebec as well as from Ontario."

But Quebec was alienated by four successive important policy decisions.

He listed these as the Reil's execution, "the bungling of the Manitoba separate school crisis in the 1890s and 1890s, the crude imposition of conscription in the First World War and the advocacy of conscription in the Second World War."

"Looking back on the period from 1921 to 1957," he said, "one can conclude the Conservatives were kept out of power nationally for more than 30 of those 36 years because in election after election, they got almost no support from Quebec which had a quarter of the seats in the House of Commons."

He said the only time the Conservatives got more than five Quebec seats in those years was in 1930 and then they were able to form a government.

He said the Western provinces became alienated through two acts of Macdonald's government —the policy of erecting a high tariff and the establishment of a cross-country railway to foster East-West trade.

Mr. Fox said the Westerners construed this as a plot to force them to finance the country.

"The tag that the Conservatives were anti-French and anti-Western stuck on the party until Mr. Diefenbaker became its leader," he said. "He was able to remove it by virtue of the fact that he was a Westerner himself and he was . . . able to get a modicum of support in Quebec in 1957 which turned into a landslide in 1958. Subsequently, he lost that support and was voted out of power in 1963.

"Many English - Canadians who are concerned are puzzled by what it is French-Canadians want," Prof. Fox said. "The answer, in general, is to be themselves, to be allowed to preserve their own dentity. It is on the question of how this is to be accomplished that French-Canadian opinion is divided."

Cigarettes Seen As Moral Issue

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The United Church of Canada's general council has adopted a resolution that the council "declare its belief" that the health hazard involved in the use of cigarettes makes this a moral issue.

In a 12-page report, the general council's interboard committee on the distribution and use of tobacco said the use of tobacco involves personal decision. "The individual's choice to begin cigarette smoking, sometimes as early as eight or 10 years of age, may have serious or tragic consequences two or three decades later."

The report said the Christian, as any responsible citizen, has a duty to conserve his resources of good health. He is expected to fulfil his obligations to God, his family and his community.

"With this in mind, he should seriously consider whether he has any right to knowingly incur the risk of premature death due to coronary heart disease or cancer of the lung when, in choosing this form of pleasure, he may leave his work undone and his family deprived of his presence and support."

CHICORY BALLAST

Chicory, used in salads and coffee blends, is believed to have reached North America in early hen ballast in ships.

Report Given On Kennedy's Plane Crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board said here an "improperly executed instrument approach" probably was the cause of the airplane accident near Southampton, Mass., June 19 in which Senator Edward M. (Ted) Kennedy (Dem. Mass.) was seriously injured.

Edwin Zimny, 49, the pilot, and Edward Moss, a passenger, were killed in the crash, and Senator Birch E. Bayh Jr. (Dem. Ind.) and Mrs. Bayh were also injured.

The C.A.B. listed the probable cause as "an improperly executed instrument approach by the pilot in which improper altitude control resulted in descent below obstructing terrain." The plane involved was a twin-engine Aero Commander.

The bidding:

2♣	Pass	2♦	Pass
2♠	Pass	4♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	4NT	Pass
6♣	Pass	6♠	Dble

Opening lead — five of diamonds.

This hand occurred in the match between Italy and the United States in 1959. When the Italians held the North - South cards, the bidding went as shown.

Chiaradia opened with two clubs. In the Neapolitan Club system — which he and Forquet were playing — this showed a long club suit with another suit on the side.

Forquet made the natural response of two diamonds and Chiaradia bid two spades. The jump to four diamonds was a slam try, inferentially accepting spades as trumps.

After Chiaradia's rebid his spades Forquet bid four notrump (not Blackwood). Chiaradia, having second - round heart control, accepted the slam invitation by jumping to six clubs, which Forquet corrected to six spades.

The American East (Fishbein) doubled. Fishbein did not have a sure trick in his hand, but he knew what Chiaradia and Forquet did not know — that spades and clubs would break about as badly as possible and that the slam would therefore probably prove to be unmanageable.

Fishbein's judgment was vindicated when declarer would up going down two — 300 points. Chiaradia discarded a heart on the ace of diamonds, played a spade to the king, and then led a club towards dummy. West (Hazen) ruffed and then played the ace and another heart. Chiaradia later lost another club trick.

At the other table, with an American pair (Stakgold and Harmon) now North - South, the bidding went:

Here North became declarer instead of South, and the opening heart lead went through the king. Stakgold lost the first two tricks and later lost a club to go down one — 50 points.

Actually, six spades played by South was a reasonable contract, but the Italians lost points on the hand due to unlucky distribution.
