Transportation Lacking In Athabasca Oil Boom

EDMONTON (CP)—Government approval of development of the rich Athabasca oil sands in northern Alberta has signalled a need for improved transportation facilities to cope with heavy traffic generated by the oil boom.

Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. received permission earlier this month to build an extraction plant expected to cost $191,000,000, to tap the oil sands. Business interests in the Fort McMurray area, 280 miles northeast of Edmonton, was heightened by the announcement.

During the first quarter of 1964, Pacific Western Airlines flew more than 800 passengers to Fort McMurray compared with 450 during the same period last year. Mail, express and freight also increased: (1963 figures in brackets) mail 17,648 pounds, (13,376); express 14,901 (3,824) and freight 26,324 (3,964).

The Northern Alberta Railway, which will have a ground transportation monopoly until 1966 when a gravel highway reaches Fort McMurray, is assessing its line from Edmonton to Waterways, one mile southeast of Fort. McMurray, for grade improvements.

EXTEND AIR SERVICE

PWA plans to make an announcement in May on extension of service to the northern community. Company officials said PWA could improve its service by adding an evening flight to its present DC-3 morning run or by using larger aircraft on the route. Use of a DC-4 or DC-6 has been suggested.

PWA is also negotiating with the air transport board for permission to land its DC-3 at Mildred Lake, close to Great Canadian's development site.

The NAR's rolling stock is plentiful and additional equipment could be leased from the railway's parent companies —Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Railway.

However, much of the railway's Edmonton to Waterway line requires grade improvements to accommodate heavier loads and faster speeds.

AUSSIES HELP MALAYA

CANBERRA (Reuters)—Australia will send a light anti-aircraft battery to Malaya in response to a Malaysian government request for support gainst Indonesia, Australia's new defence minister, Senator Shane Paltridge, said Tuesday. He said the battery would go to Butterworth on Malaya's west-coast opposite Penang Island where Australian Air Force squadrons have been stationed for a number of years as part of the strategic reserve.
