FIGHT IN STATION

MERIDIAN, Miss. (AP) — A dozen policemen broke up a near riot in a bus station here Friday when three busloads of Negroes, returning from the civil rights march in Washington, attempted to use white facilities in the depot. Police Sgt. Sam Keller said the 123 passengers went into the Trailways Bus Station and many used the white restrooms, sat in the white waiting room and sought service at the restaurant's white counters. About a half - dozen white youths were involved in the argument and melee that broke out.

Prince Co. Children Complete Swim Tests

Approximately 2,000 children received instruction in swimming and water safety in Prince County during the months of July and August. Over 30 classes were conducted by Red Cross swimming instructors at 28 localities. The swimming program covered all levels of Red Cross awards plus the levels of the Royal Life Saving Society.

Miss Frances Anne Cullen was supervisor for Prince County and was responsible for co-ordinating the different instructors and localities. Miss Cullen also tested each locality and presented Red Cross swimming awards.

'Wedding' At Winnipeg May Rock Canadian Labor

By ROBERT RICE

OTTAWA (CP) — A wedding that may rock the house of labor in Canada and the United States is planned for Winnipeg next month.

After a long and sometimes touchy engagement, two public service unions plan to merge Sept. 24 to form a new labor giant of more than 80,000 members.

The merger will join the 30,000-member National Union of Public Service Employees and the 50,000-member National Union of Public Employees.

The new union will be called the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

It will be the second-largest union in Canada, ranking next to the powerful United Steelworkers of America, which claims 100,000 members, and ahead of the Carpenters Brotherhood and the Automobile Workers.

With the creation of CUPE, observers expect a reawakening of strong nationalistic fervor within the ranks of organized labor in Canada.

WILL AFFECT CLC

The new accent on Canadianism will be reflected in a change in the balance of power within the Canadian Labor Congress, the central labor body of some 1,050,000 unionists in this country.

One result will be a reshuffling in the hierarchy of the CLC to make room for CUPE and its influential leadership.

The main voice of Canadian unionism within the cabinet of organized labor now is William J. Smith, national president of the 35,000 - member Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers. He serves as a regional vice-president on the executive council of the congress.

Both Mr. Smith and Stanley A. Little, president of the National Union of Public Service Employees, have been calling for a realignment of unions within Canada—a major revision aimed at creating fewer but bigger unions around a strong central labor body.

Mr. Little, who likely will become first president of the new union, says the merger is "only the beginning" of what he contends must be a major reform in the whole basis and structure of the trade union movement in Canada.

RELATIONS STRAINED

In recent months, relations at the international level between the Canadian Labor Congress and its counterpart in the United States — the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations — have been prickly at best.

The focal point of the rift in relations between the CLC and the AFL-CIO is the Great Lakes labor dispute.

This dispute involves a Canadian union versus an international union—the Canadian Maritime Union against the Seafarers' International Union. The SIU has exported the fight to the U.S. for settlement, a tactic that has brought down the ire of Canadian labor and led to a government investigation that proposed an unprecedented trusteeship over five maritime unions by the federal government.

In making this recommendation, the investigator—Mr. Justice T. G. Norris of Vancouver —said some U.S. international union officials have been slow to appreciate the widening differences between Canadian and U.S. traditions, political systems and economies.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	2♣	Pass
2♠	Pass	3♦	Pass

Opening lead—nine of hearts.

Here is an odd situation that arose in a team match. A slam was bid at both tables, the contract being six clubs at one table, and six notrump at the other table. The player who bid six clubs went down one, while the player who bid six notrump made the contract.

Both declarers received a heart lead and the entire question was how to play the clubs so as to lose only one trick.

The first declarer led a club from dummy at trick three and finessed the ten, losing to the jack. He lost a trick later to the king and went down one. The second declarer finessed the queen instead of the ten, and thus made the contract.

The first declarer would have been successful if East had held the J-7-6 instead of the K-7-6. In that case the ten, not the queen, would have been the winning play.

Problems of this type are best solved mathematically. There is no sure-fire play to cover all the possibilities (unless you see the opponents' cards), so, in choosing which card to finesse, all you can do is rely on probabilities.

The first thing to do in trying to determine whether to finesse the ten or queen is to brush aside those hands where your play makes no difference. Such hands would include those where West had K-J-x, or x-x, or x-x-x, or J-x-x, and so on.

The pertinent hands are those where East has K-x-x, J-x-x, J-x-x-x or K-x-x-x. The first two may be disregarded because East is equally likely to hold one or the other, and the ten will win as often as the queen over a period of time.

The third case is also ignored because you lose two tricks whether you play the ten or the queen. It is the fourth case that is decisive and makes the queen the better play in the long run. This is because you lose only one trick by playing the queen, but two tricks by playing the ten.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
