RENOUNCES RIGHTS

ATHENS (AP) — Princess Sophie of Greece, who marries Spanish Prince Juan Carlos today, has signed a decree renouncing her rights to the Greek throne. The 23-year-old princess was second in succession to the throne after her brother Crown Prince Constantine. Her younger sister Princess Irene, who Friday became 20, now replaces her.

Hard New Look Is Taken At Gov't And Business Role

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

Business today is going through a period of intensive self-examination.

This inward look goes beyond traditional concern with the ability of an individual business to survive; It extends to survival of the system itself as we know it.

In a business sense ways are sought to meet the complex economic problems whose growth accelerates at an almost frightening pace.

These economic problems, however, merge into social and political areas and business asks, and is asked, what are its responsibilities in this regard, and what are the results if it doesn't meet them.

The respective roles of business and government are particularly examined and how best they may be meshed together, with each playing its most effective role.

NOT SACRED

A. O. Drysdale, retiring president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce said at that body's annual meeting last week that private enterprise, like any other enterprise, is not sacred in the public's eye. He added:

"We must be prepared to present to the government and people of Canada carefully documented and irrefutable arguments as to how the gaps in our present social system can be filled by means much less expensive and much more effective than by state plans."

Kurt R. Swinton, president of Encyclopaedia Britannica of Canada Ltd., who is active in many hobbies of a public nature, said at the same meeting that the challenge likewise exists in regard to the world at large.

Closer to home, Mr. Swinton said the reason unemployment has not yet caused a major social and economic revolution is that the unemployed "are still a relatively small minority, with little political power, in a generally affluent society."

"However, it can be predicted that the rapid progress of automation may soon convert this small minority into a large, powerful one. It could even become a majority in the not-too-distant future."

Mr. Swinton said the public image of business has been grossly distorted, but he was critical of the business community for its attitude towards government expenditures in the public sector, such as schools, health services, housing and like activities.

Dr. MacKenzie will be convocation speaker and receive a doctor of literature degree.

Dr. A. C. Hunter, one of the original staff members at Memorial in 1925, will receive a similar degree, while a veteran Newfoundland doctor, Dr. Cluny MacPherson, will get a doctor of science degree.

Soviet Union Issues Denial Of Anti-Semitism

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has responded to charges of anti - semitism with release of a letter from five prominent Russian Jews saying freedom of conscience is ensured in their country.

"There is no Jewish problem in the Soviet Union", said the letter made public Sunday by the Soviet embassy here. "The fact that the number of believers is gradually decreasing should not be attributed to any sort of administrative measures."

Authors of the letter were identified as Z. Vendrof, a writer; Prof. Boris Eidelman, master of laws; Lev Pulver, a composer; Prof. Iosif Braginsky, editor-in-chief of the magazine The Peoples of Asia and Africa, and Prof. Ilya Strashun, member of the U.S.S.R Academy of Medical Sciences.

The embassy said the letter was in reply to charges by U.S. Senator Jacob K. Javits, (Rep. N.R.) that the plight of Russian Jews is "grave and complex."

Javits has not been the only source of reports of anti-semitism in Russia.

In April, Prime Minister Diefenbaker of Canada accused the Soviet Union of oppressing its Jews. He said Russia pretends to abhor discrimination but "the record speaks to the contrary."

The bidding:

Opening lead—two of spades.

Let's say you're declarer at three notrump and West leads the two of spades. You win the nine with the ten and see you have only six tricks that can be taken at once.

You can try for the other three tricks in one of two ways. (Remember you do not see the East-West hands.) One way is to lead the queen of clubs and finesse, in which case you make nine tricks if West has the king. The other is to lead a heart to force out the ace, in which case you make nine tricks if West started with four spades.

The decision is a vital one. If you try the club finesse and it loses, you are sure to go down even if West has only four spades (you would lose three spades, a club and a heart). But if you lead the heart and West has only four spades, you are sure to make the contract (you would lose three spades and a heart).

How do you determine which to do? The answer is that if West is an honest player who always leads fourth best, you should attack heart and shun the club finesse. West, in such a case, would have to pay for his honesty and you would be sure of making the contract.

But what if West is a player who periodically indulges in leading fifth best from a long suit? His general philosophy of trying to deceive declarer at the expense of deceiving partner will present declarer with a difficult guess from time to time—such as in this case.

In the actual hand, South attacked hearts and went down, having been fooled by West's lead, but would have made the hand if he had attacked clubs instead. This does not mean he necessarily played incorrectly, because that would be Grade A blindsight. He just happened to be fooled by a falsecard.

West, though he was not regularly a falsecarder, was clever enough to realize that his partner had nothing and that only declarer could be taken in by a lead of the fifth best.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.
