ALL FRUITS NUTS & JELLIES
CHOCOLATE COATED
Moir's Limited, Charlottetown, P.E.I.

THE very atmosphere of Christmas pervades Moir's candy factory. There can be seen bales upon bales of aromatic cocoa beans; boxes of crisp walnuts, Brazil nuts, almonds and filberts; hundreds of fresh, green coconuts; casks of Bordeaux cherries and great jars of crushed raspberries and strawberries.

Because the fruits and other delicacies come direct from the growers, Moir's chocolates are made from the finest materials. This is the main reason why you will find them so remarkable.

Why Young Danes Remain On Farm

LONDON, Dec. 8.—Denmark has kept its people on the land, writes W. Keith in the Daily News, not by making them like cabbage as much as possible, but by cultivating their interest in life. The fact should appeal to us now, for the movement began after the war with Germany—over fifty years ago. Just as France today is going made on "le sport" and pushing gymnastics for both boys and girls the Danes set out to improve their standards. Life down on the farm in Denmark is interesting because it is lived by people capable of being interested.

In the gallery of modern painting in Brussels recently I saw a picture of a farmyard. A pig snuffed after another pig. Two yokes of lumbered over the fence rail, and his empty sabot on the ground. The picture was painted in stark realism, but at the side was a delicately-painted head of a virgin, suggesting all that the pig gazers were missing. The picture was called "Sunday Afternoon," but the Danish peasant knows better than that. For two or three winter months each year 6,000 of them go to the folk schools, the women go later in the Spring.

Singing, natural history and literature are the principal subjects, but the young farmer, accustomed to hard exercise, has always kept himself in trim by drill and gymnastics on Swedish lines. When he got back to his village he carried on his training in his village club. These exist all over the country, equipped with coffee rooms, smoking rooms, and gym-
