REPORT FRENCH

LAD ASSOCIATED PRESS dispatch from Switzerland says French artillery already has demonstrated a capacity to move from the front, smashing villages and railway installations on the German side of the river Rhine west to Asten. As Gen. De Gaulle presented the latest spectacular achievements to the French cabinet, Gen. Eisenhower in another part of Paris told war correspondents that the formidable Heitor gap was actually in Allied hands and praised the French for their daring breakthrough. He said his armies were keeping up the pressure at maximum strength all along the front. On most of the United States 7th and 3rd Army fronts in France the Germans fell back toward Sigebourg and Saarbrücken, with even their rear-guard resistance disrupted by the intense pressure to which they were being subjected. (The 7th Army, plunging east across Lorraine, captured Carrebourg, 22 miles from the Rhine and 70 miles northwest of Mulhouse, an Associated Press front dispatch said.)

But it was no different and many persons still cannot comprehend how little their private lives have changed by the biggest military operation of history. Flying bombs which came a week ago after Londoners had been told things to shake the Londoners' belief that his war was over. With the invasion hadn't progressed during the day and night he found himself becoming less interested in the relaxation of four year old relations and more interested in the state of his air raid shelter. Since flying bombs have no eyes home secretary Morrison agreed to substitute a dim-out for sent out and Manchester, Liverpool and many other midland and northern England towns flashed on their lights. Everybody looked forward to London's "lighting up" but the night Londoners were told they could allow light to stream from their windows the Germans staged their first raid in weeks and since then the capital has been as dark as wartime Britain, when necessary equipment has been installed. The invasion hadn't progressed far before the Londoner was hit in a vulnerable spot. There was a beer shortage which ministries attributed to a dim-out for sent out and Manchester, Liverpool and many other midland and northern England towns flashed on their lights.

He has built on both coasts, and the operation shown in providing recreation, sports and other facilities. "Last but not most important of all," Commodore Broock added, "because the 15,000 Cadets—that means 15,000 boys kept off the streets at night, trained and disciplined in a line, and citizenship, to say nothing of the training they get in cooperative effort—represent a monument to the Navy League. It should never be forgotten, because they were responsible for keeping the Sea Cadets movement going during peacetime when Cadets were necessary for citizen building. The result was that when the war started there was a nucleus of Sea Cadets available for recruits, which stood us in good stead today." Tribute to Charlottetown "To Charlottetown we must tender our warmest congratulations," Commodore Broock added, "because up to July 31 they had supplied fifty-one officers, twenty-seven Wrens, and 1,163 ratings for the naval service. That represents over 10 percent of the population, which I would say was a very stout effort indeed." Commodore Broock also had words of praise for the smart appearance and efficiency of the Charlottetown Sea Cadets Corps. He understood that eighty-two of the Cadets had volunteered to stage a first naval parade in Summerside on Monday night, accompanied by their band and officers, and that their demonstration was a marked success. Commodore Broock has responsibility for the recruiting and initial training of all officers and ratings entered during the war, having twenty divisions under his command from coast to coast. He leaves Thursday for Montreal.

No Enemy Directed Acts Of Sabotage

OTTAWA, Nov. 21 (CP)—The Royal Canadian Mounted Police have been called upon to investigate many cases of suspected sabotage in Canada, but they have yet to find any evidence of enemy-directed sabotage. R. C. M. P. annual report disclosed today. The report, covering activities during the year ended last March 31, said that during the 12-month period 219 suspected sabotage cases, including many fires in army and air force training centres, were investigated but "no evidence of enemy activity could be obtained." A decision was consequently reached that the great number of fires reported was due to the realization of security measures and the actions of disgruntled personnel," the report said. A steady decline was noticed in damage to machinery, which undoubtedly was attributable to the increased skill of industrial workers.

By William T. Peacock Associated Press Staff Writer
WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP)—American B-29 Superfortresses over Japan in their first air battle over Japan today as a Superfort Omura, giant aircraft carrier, was the third time in less than a month, a communiqué from the War Department indicates that plans for the attack offensive are progressing toward the time when the Japanese will be hit by Superfortresses scheduled nights, increasing in frequency. At least 20 enemy planes were certainly shot down, 16 others probably destroyed and an additional 19 damaged in the fighting. A communiqué from 20th Air Force headquarters said that since the Superforts had been time for all planes to complete the long trip back to China bases. "The Tokyo radio, which customarily broadcasts extravagant claims of Japanese successes, said today that 70 B-29s took part in the attack and that 14 were definitely shot down and 11 more probably. It said four Japanese planes were lost, one by crashing into a Superfort. While one B-29 task force carried out this strike, others hit Chinese warehouses and transportation facilities at the enemy-held Chinese cities of Shanghai and Nanking. The blow at Omura was the eighth B-29 raid on the Japanese homeland and brought the first encounter, a communiqué from the War Department said, with "strong fighter opposition." Located on Kyushu, southernmost of the Japanese islands, the Omura plant has about 75 buildings, including assembly, repair and training facilities.
