CORRECTION. Mr. Lidstone of the Guardian that it was correct to say that John Campbell defeated him in the 1925 election for Mayor as he did not run that year. He says he has never been defeated either as a councillor or as Mayor which is a good record. The Guardian repeats the error which was a misunderstanding and was not intentional.

view. Yesterday Ross Gray (Lib. Lambton West) urged immediate enactment of compulsory overseas service without a plebiscite which he considered dangerous and Edouard Lacroix (Lib. Beauce) opposed the plebiscite as a "terrible concession to extremism."

While Mr. Lacroix said he would vote against the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, indicating lack of confidence in the government, he did not go the length of cutting himself off from the Liberal party.

Whether he and other French-speaking Liberals opposed to conscription will ally themselves with Mr. Lacombe's new Canadian party may not be known until after a vote is taken.

Mr. Lacombe, first elected to the House as a Liberal in 1935, was returned in the 1940 general election as an Independent Liberal, with a majority of 1,826 over an official Liberal candidate. Since his reelection he has been sitting and voting with the government.

The governmental point of view on the plebiscite received the full support of Douglas Abbott (Lib. Montreal-St. Antine-Westmount), who said he believed in conscription. He urged an end to dispute over the plebiscite itself in order to give the Canadian people an opportunity to show that democracy can function "even in wartime."

$400,000 scheme Recreation Centres For Dehydration Of vegetables In Summerside

Tabled recently in the House of Commons was the following Order-in-Council (P.C. 9228) dated December 6, 1941, relating to the establishment of vegetable dehydrating plants:

Whereas the Minister of Agriculture reports that in view of the evidence of increasing interest by both the British War Office and the Department of National Defence of Canada in dehydrated vegetable products for war purposes because of their high nutritive value, facility of transportation, and long-keeping characteristics, and particularly in view of the fact that the British War Office recently indicated that they were prepared to place an order for 1,000 tons of Canadian dehydrated vegetable products but only 137 tons will be delivered because of the inability of Canadian plants, as presently equipped, to supply the full quantity within the period specified, it is expedient that measures be taken to dehydrate, according to technical practices which produce products having a high vitamin content, certain vegetables for Government account:

That to assure production of a high quality product it is imperative that all phases of processing be under the control of the Government and to this end it is proposed to furnish certain designated plants, one in British Columbia, two in the Maritime Provinces, with the necessary equipment at an estimated total cost of not more than $25,000 and to provide inspection services to insure that the product meets prescribed specifications:

That allowing for payment for reasonable prices for raw vegetables together with all processing and packaging charges, it is estimated that the total commitment involved, excluding possible storage charges, would be as follows:

500 tons (dried product) at $520 per ton	$260,000
75 tons (dried product) at $540 per ton	40,500
50 tons (dried product) at $580 per ton	29,000
25 tons (dried product) at $980 per ton	24,500
Total	$354,000
Plant charges	25,000
Total	$379,000

That it is anticipated that through the ultimate sale of the dehydrated products full cost of the products would be recovered by the Treasury of Canada and that the cost of special equipment required ($25,000) would be absorbed by the Dominion Government as a capital outlay necessary in the production of strictly war commodities.

THEREFORE, HIS EXCELLENCY the Governor General in Council, on the recommendation of the Minister of Agriculture and under the authority of the War Measures Act, Chapter 206, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1927, is pleased to authorize and do hereby authorize the Agricultural Supplies Board:

(1) to equip five plants in Canada to dehydrate vegetables in accordance with prescribed specifications;

(2) to purchase or direct the purchase of such surplus potatoes, turnips, carrots and cabbage from the 1941 crop as may be available, not exceeding the quantities hereinbefore mentioned;

(3) to direct, supervise and pay for the dehydrating, packaging and storage of all vegetables purchased hereunder;

(4) to store, sell, or otherwise dispose of the said dehydrated vegetables as may be deemed desirable or expedient.

His Excellency in Council, on the same recommendation, is further pleased, hereby, to authorize the expenditure out of moneys allotted from the War Appropriation to the Department of Agriculture for the Board of a sum not exceeding $400,000 for the said purposes.

committed to present restrictions on the Government. The Prime Minister is entitled to respect for sticking to the opinion that he obligated himself by declarations made against conscription for service outside of Canada. There is no need, however, to put Canada through the turmoil of a general election, nor to bring discredit upon responsible government in Canada by the plebiscite expedient.

CHAMBERLIN'S EXAMPLE. It is within the power of Mr. King this very day to release the Government of disabling limitations without violating any obligation. The Prime Minister's resignation would absolve every minister of complacent past commitments.

When Mr. Chamberlain resigned, he advised the King to call upon Mr. Churchill to form a Government. With a fine spirit of patriotism, Mr. Chamberlain consented to serve in Mr. Churchill's cabinet. Mr. King could similarly advise the Governor General to call upon Mr. Howe or Mr. Ralston, or whoever seemed most fitted for the task, to form a Government.

Whatever errors of judgment Mr. Chamberlain made in the years of appeasement, and in failure afterwards to bring the nation's effort up to a full measure of preparedness for total war, he is assured of an honored place in British history by a grave act of self-effacement. Mr. King's long years of service in Canadian public life would merit for him an honored place in Canadian history. He would more approximately Mr. Chamberlain than Mr. Churchill in his statesmanship. A responsible government. No plebiscite at this time of grave crisis can serve in place of leadership. The most distinguished act of leadership in Mr. King's political career could well be to follow the example set by Mr. Chamberlain—even to serve in a total war cabinet with a trusted colleague as Prime Minister.

Gov't Senate Leader Honored By Fellows. OTTAWA, Jan. 23.—(CP)—Senator Raoul Dandurand, Government Senate Leader, was honored today by Senators from both sides of the Chamber who presented him with a bronze bust of himself.

The presentation which took place in the Senate Chamber, was attended by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and representatives of the cabinet. Senator Dandurand, first called to the Senate in 1898, celebrated his 80th birthday last Nov. 4.

In a presentation address read by Hon. George Parent, Speaker of the Senate, the bust by Alfred Laliberté of Montreal was described as "a token of our esteem and admiration."

bec to every sitting Commons member under the 1941 population figures is 51,034. This compares with 44,500 in 1931.

The clause in the British North America Act providing that no province should have in the House fewer members than it has in the Senate, saved New Brunswick from a loss of one of 10 Commons seats on the basis of the latest population count.

This same clause is protection for Prince Edward Island with four seats, while Nova Scotia, with 12 seats and Ontario with 82 would each have lost a seat except that the change in population in each of these provinces, in relation to the Dominion total, was small.
