Daley Speaks Out

FOR SEVERAL years Arthur Daley, sports columnist and free lance writer with the New York Times, has been known as one of the greatest scribes baseball has ever seen.

IN the following paragraphs Daley combines his vast knowledge of 'America's Game' with big fears of big time baseball businessmen to write what I think is an article that should be read by every interested ball fan.

Mr. Daley - - -

The Carpetbaggers

PERHAPS it would not have made any difference in view of the fact that Walter O'Malley had a sharp eye for a wayward dollar bill. But the then president of the Brooklyn Dodgers grew alarmed after Lou Perini had shifted his Braves from Boston to Milwaukee, thereby shifting from red to black. A virtually bankrupt franchise instantly changed to a lush money-maker, with an annual attendance of more than two million.

"At this rate," said The O'Malley, knocking the ash off his cigar with an elegant flick of his pinky, "no team will be able to match the financial resources of the Braves in the bidding for talented young ballplayers. They will have an advantage so overwhelming that none of the other clubs in the league will be able to match them."

Not long thereafter, O'Malley went off on his own Gold Rush to California, taking his prosperous Brooklyn franchise with him. He struck it big in Los Angeles, far bigger than Perini did in Milwaukee. Is this cause and effect? Who knows? The bland and wily Walter has such X-ray eyes that he could look from Brooklyn through the Rocky Mountains and discern the Goleonda in Chavez Ravine.

On The Move

PERINI'S MOVE to Milwaukee started all the other money-grubbers on their way. The St. Louis Browns became the Baltimore Orioles. The Athletics skipped out of Philadelphia and landed in Kansas City. The Giants' tradition-steeped franchise went from New York to San Francisco. There also was a skip from Washington to Minnesota, although a new franchise was left behind as an empty consolation prize.

Baseball once was a game involving sportsmen who gloried in their profitable years and suffered through their bad ones. But they stayed where they were. They had roots that were deeply embedded in the loyalties of their fans. Such is the case no longer. The Great American Game has become as commercial as General Motors.

The strongest of all rumors has the Milwaukee Braves, no longer the diamond mine they were during the Perini regime, moving to Atlanta next season because Atlanta can promise bigger gate receipts and bigger television loot. Next week, East Lynne. It almost has become as cynical an operation as that.

There isn't a nicer guy in the game than John McHale, the president of the Braves. The other young executive in the syndicate with him are all likeable men. That's why it is painful to rap them on the knuckles. But it is outrageous to think that baseball has degenerated to the level of musical chairs.

Fractured Metaphor

NO LONGER is Milwaukee hysterical over the Braves. Attendance has dropped from a high of 2.25 million to a mere three-quarters of a million. This is a rude and shocking decline. But baseball is a game of cycles—except maybe in the case of the Yankees.

Just the other day, a radio broadcaster summed up the imminent departure of the Braves in priceless verbiage.

"They have milked dry the goose that laid the golden egg," he said in a soaring flight of rhetoric that has not been matched since Shakespeare's day.

This would take considerable doing, of course. But even in that magnificently mangled metaphor, there are certain elements of truth. The Braves were an instant relief in Milwaukee, setting a National League attendance record of 1.8 million, six times as many as had been drawn in Boston the year before.

No victorious warriors of ancient days returning through the breached walls of their city ever were heaped with more adulation and acclaim than were the Braves in their first season. The adoring fans gave them clothes, groceries and furniture. Every day was Christmas. This was fantasia mit sauerbrauten and gemutlichkeit.

The Long Honeymoon

IT COULDN'T possibly last. The marvel of it was that it lasted as long as it did, nine glorious years. But then disillusionment took over. Many factors were involved as the decline set in. It wasn't indifference. It was a growing resentment of front-office policies that irritated the fans. They can be wooed back, but the lengthy period of waiting might put too much strain on the limited financial resources of the current owners.

So they'll probably follow the cynical example of O'Malley, the man who runs the National League, and go high-tailing after a quick buck. It can be found in Atlanta, but that doesn't mean that the move is right. Nothing is more destructive of the image that baseball pretends to have than this carpetbagging all over the map, milking the goose dry.

It's time this practice was halted. Other wise there will be no more milk, no more geese.

HIDING FROM HIS SCORE

No, Mike Souchak covered his head with a towel to escape the high humidity as he talked to Vic Ghezzi during second round today of the PGA championship. Souchak was four strokes off the pace of current leader Bobby Nichols while Ghezzi was lagging behind with over par rounds.

Koufax Is One Nice Guy That Didn't Finish Last

LOS ANGELES (AP) — To show you what a clear-thinking chap Sandy Koufax is, he has not only kept success from going to his head but has even managed to cut it off before it reached his stomach.

Some guys, having just won a most-valuable-player award, would come off the winter banquet circuit carrying enough extra weight to make Jackie Gleason look emaciated.

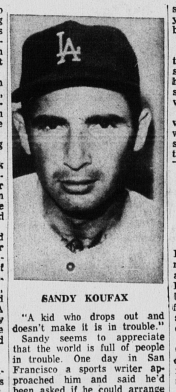
Koufax came back weighing less than when he started.

Sandy smokes, enjoys a drink or two of an evening and sometimes stays out until well after dark. But, like teammate Don Drysdale, he makes sure he gets in all the work he should between pitching starts.

"In that respect Koufax and Drysdale are the best I've ever seen," says manager Walt Alston of Los Angeles Dodgers. "If this is the day Sandy is supposed to throw between starts, he'll come out to the park and throw even if it's a day off. A lot of guys will throw a day early or a day late and take the day off. But not Sandy. And Drysdale is the same way."

ATTENDED COLLEGE

Koufax, who attended the University of Cincinnati 1½ years before signing with the Dodgers, describes himself as "a kid who left college to play baseball—and was fortunate enough to make it."



SANDY KOUFAX

"A kid who drops out and doesn't make it is in trouble."

Sandy seems to appreciate that the world is full of people in trouble. One day in San Francisco a sports writer approached him and said he'd been asked if he could arrange a brief meeting between Sandy and a 10-year-old boy who was going blind.

Koufax was outside the Dodger clubhouse at 6:45 p.m.

But the boy couldn't get there on time. The writer, a little embarassed, said: "Look, Sandy, I know you've got some running to do. Go ahead, and if the boy shows up I'll come out and tell you and maybe you could come back again for just a minute."

Koufax said he'd wait.

He waited 10 minutes. Finally the little boy arrived. He was so excited when he saw Koufax he couldn't even talk. He just stood there, looking up at Sandy with what vision he had left.

"So Sandy carried on the conversation with him himself," the writer said. "If you're doing a story on Koufax, you might put that in."

RISLEY, England (CP) — A jubilant team of Canadian riflemen threw their hats in the air Friday night when their victory in the Mackinnon Cup event at the National Rifle Association matches had been confirmed.

The 12-man Dominion of Canada Rifle Association team scored 1,024 points, one more than the Ausralian team. England came third with 1,019.

The Canadians stood up after the firing at 1,000 yards and pondered. Word had come down the firing line that South Africa had made a total of 1,028. But South Africa is not in the Commonwealth.

The South Africans shot for a series of special medals, which they won, and Canada had copped the coveted long-range team trophy after coming a poor fourth last year. South Africa was ineligible for the Mackinnon.

WON IN 1962

Canada last won the Mackinnon in 1962 with 1,044. Last year Scotland's 1,026 — considered a lowly figure—was still good enough to eliminate the Canadians, who had only 991.

Lt. Cpl. Ken Richey of Edmonton had the best individual score among the Canadians—91 out of a possible 100 at 900 and 1,000 yards.

Flt. Sgt. Mike Susick of Summerside, P.E.I., shot a fantastic 49 out of a possible 50 at 900 yards but dropped to 39 at 1,000 to finish with 88. He had no excuses—just shook his head about tricky winds.

Arsenault Sets Record

GREENWOOD (Special)—The Islanders track and field club made an outstanding performance at the opening day of the Highland Games here yesterday by taking no less than seven first place awards, and placing second or third in six other events.

The performance of George Cheverie in the Javelin and Andy Arsenault in the 880 yard run dash were the highlights of the Islanders day.

Cheverie tossed the javelin 158' 7" to set a new N.S. record and Arsenault competing in the junior class, ran the first sub two minute mile of career by clocking the distance at Columbus Field in 1.58-7.

Joe Cheverie was the only Islander to capture two first place honors. He won the midget javelin with an 137' toss and took top honors in the high jump with a jump of 5' 7½" and placed third in the pole vault (9' 10").

Frances Whitlock was the top girl performer as she capured first in the shot put and second in the 60 yard dash. Jack MacEachern took first in the discus, second in the shot, third in the javelin and third in the hop step and jump.

Robert Waugh captured top honors in the midget pole vault. The weather was perfect for yesterday's action and activity will resume at the field today.

Legion Squad Meets Juniors

The Charlottetown Legion Juveniles will travel to Mt. Stewart on Monday where they will tangle with the Northern Centennial Juniors. The game will be played at 6.30 p.m. The following is a list of players on the Centennial Junior squad:

S Affleck, E. Aylward, K. Batchilder, W. Bradley, 'Butch' Cheverie, D. Clark, M. Crane, A. Connolly, "Billy" Conohan, J. Duffy, L. Ellsworth, J. Gill, S. Hughes, S. McGuire, R. MacLean, J. McGuire, D. MacEwen, N. Rogerson.

SPORT OF KINGS

MacIntyre Is Burning Up Kings County Ball League

By ED CLINTON
Souris Bureau of The Guardian

Lawrence MacInyre, one of the best pitchers in the King's County Baseball League tied a league record last Sunday. This was for strikeouts in a regular game, and Lawrence racked up twenty-one Souris batters on Sunday to tie the record set by Erwin Connolly last year. This adds to his feat of a couple of years ago when he struck out twenty-nine batters in an extra inning game. Lawrence, with his ability, if he was with a top contender such as Morell or Georgetown would probably break most of the league's pitching records.

Souris Centennials nearly won their first game of the season last Sunday, and in the process nearly gave Georgetown their first setback of the season. A passed ball in the top half of the last inning scored the winning run for the Eagles, and extended their unbeaten streak to six games. And from here on out the Eagles are going to be hard to catch.

Mike Kelly of Morell, who has won the league batting title the past two years in a row, went five for six last Sunday against Peakes and moved into the lead for the first time this season. Mike is batting a cool .448. And while this might be considered a good average, his title winning averages were .456 and .478.

Some of the teams are lax in two duties. One is phoning the game results into our City office on Sunday nights. The home teams are responsible. Phone 894-8506 collect and the results will be published. Also home teams are responsible for sending game summaries in to me for the record books. A couple of teams haven't sent a game in yet, and one team, from Peakes have forwarded every game they played, both at home and away, and for which we are extremely grateful. Thanks Anne.

This Sunday will see another full slate of games. Georgetown Eagles travel to Peakes trying to maintain their unbeaten streak. They met the first Sunday of the schedule with the Eagles edging the Bombers 9-8. This game will probably see

Minor Action At Ch'town

In Little League action the Twins downed the Tigers 9-5. Phil Claybourne was the winning hurler while John Mitchell and John McMillan pitched for the losers. Brian Sobey led all hitters with a perfect three for three performance. Claybourne, Gary Doyle, Terry Connors and Shane Dowling all had two hits.

In other L.L. action the Red Sox dumped the Yanks 8-3. Leslie Merrian fanned 14 and walked 2 in route to the win while Doug Mobbs, the losing hurler, struck out 11 and walked three.

Paul Sanders and Doug Mobbs each had two hits. One of Sanders' hits was a double while Mobbs' hits included a triple Mike Grant had the longest hit of the game, a home run, in the opening frame to drive home three runs.

In Farm League action the Senators outlasted the Phillies 18-14 and the Giants beat the Cards 10-3. In Bantam League play the Braves drubbed the Dodgers 7-2.

Gerry Murphy pitched for the winners and Richard Young for the losers. Brian Greenan and Mike Duffy led all hitters with two safties. Kevin MacCormick and Bobby Stull had the longest hits of the game, each belting doubles.

Practice Called

The Charlottetown Legion juveniles will hold a practice this afternoon at 2.00 p.m. The workout will be held on Memorial Field and all players are requested to be in attendance.

Australia Dominates Tournament

MONTREAL (CP)—Australia grabbed a quick 2-0 lead Friday in the Davis Cup tie against Canada as Wimbledon champion Roy Emerson polished off Keith Carpenter in straight sets and John Newcombe outlasted Francois Godbout in a tough battle.

Emerson, 28 - year - old top world amateur, needed only 53 minutes to down the 22 - year-old Carpenter 6-2, 6-1, 6-2.

But it took young Newcombe two hours and 15 minutes before he defeated Godbout 6-3, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

Emerson seemed to play only as hard as he needed to and only double-faulted once while Carpenter missed on 12 second serves. He broke Carpenter's serve eight times and only lost his serve twice.
