In just three weeks time, the Prince Edward Island Music Festival for 1954 will begin. As usual, there is an increase in the entry list and extra sessions will be held to hear all contestants. Three adjudicators will be working full-time during the week. Festival committees as well as the general public will watch with interest the experiment in dividing some of the large classes.

Sessions will be held in Summerside for children from that area taking part in junior piano and vocal classes. Of the classes included in this arrangement, vocal classes will be run off in Summerside on Monday and piano classes on Tuesday. The schedule will be reversed in Charlottetown so that the same adjudicator will hear all taking part in any class. Volunteer committees have been formed in Summerside to look after many of the details of the sessions there. This new scheme will enable more Prince County competitors to take part, and no doubt will infect the public with the "festival fever" which prevails around Charlottetown during the first week of May.

The participants and audiences at the Festival do not realize all the work behind the organizing and running of the Festival, but they also can do their bit towards keeping things going smoothly. Those taking part should be sure to observe Rule 26 in the Syllabus: "Candidates using music of their own selection must bring a duplicate for the use of the Adjudicator." This is to be given to the Adjudicator's secretary before the beginning of the sessions which includes that class.

If all competitors will sit together in the front of the hall it is much easier for the Adjudicator to talk to them as a group and to give his suggestions about the interpretation of the music they are performing. And one final suggestion for contestants and audiences: Let's have perfect quiet in the halls so that all performers can be heard clearly.

—Dorothy Cullen, Convener of Music Committee
