ELLEN'S DIARY

Tinkle Of Cowbell Became Only Sound In Berry Field

"This" a recent visitor to Alderlea, about to enter her car, smiled "reminds me of an evening when we picked strawberries. Filled away back where the farms from two roads meet. Remember?"

"In an old hayland" we said.

"Yes. One evening after supper when the chives had been done! And the berries were large and plentiful and..."

"... somewhere, someone was moving a piece of hay?"

"Yes. We could hear the sound of it though it was out of sight back of a hillside."

"That was a peaceful spot. Wasn't it? Away from the world?"

"And as still as a school in the vacation period!" she agreed.

"On the echoes and the birds' songs" we recalled.

"And" she added "the tinkle of a bell on the lead-cow, from a few farms. That was our music," she nodded, "it was good! It was a peace-of-earth sort of sound... Wild strawberry picking, the sounds of a horse-drawn mower... and a cowbell! Days of other years," she offered with a wistful chuckle.

A cowbell, a sheep's bell, a schoolbell, the bell in a Church tower—how clearly those childhood sounds remain with one, sweet and remembered, while the last.

Now the week winds up its affairs. It settled tractors on all other machines of the farming life, to wait out the Sabbath, and allowed the farmers to draw restful breaks. This has been a busy week for farm-folks, as is always that interval between the cropping and haying, a tidying season. And the wedding of hood crops comes now.

At Alderlea, the spreader and

ALPHONSE THIRIAULT BARRY COSTELLO

SANDRA BOSWELL

CPL. L. D. HUME

Bees and sweet clover, and wild-plumding crickets, Jersey and Guernsey, with ripe plums for eyes; Square-chimes now ringing, the chapels in thickets. Bring back the days that were lovely—and wise!

I have heard bells in thundering tower, Clangorous steeple, the vast muffled dome. Hearing is my ear, in this evening hour. Hear my carols on crows coming home."
