GARY COOPER STARS IN
"DISTANT DRUMS" AT
CAPITOL, S'SIDE.

At an appointed rendezvous, during swamp fighter Gary Cooper joins naval officer Richard Webb to lead their force against the hostile Seminole Indians. Under cover of night, they attack the redman's outpost and free white girl Mari Aidon.

Heading for Cooper's hideout, the party is ambushed by more Indians. Cooper starts a grass fire to delay them, but soon the swamp fire is filled with Seminole reinforcements. Splitting his detachment, Cooper and Mari head deeper into the Everglades. The girl tells him that she has a score to settle in Savannah and asks his aid after the Seminoles have been conquered. Cooper refuses.

As the march progresses, the group stumbles upon an old Indian wearing a trooper's gear. From him, they learn of a village nearby. Proceeding cautiously to investigate, the soldiers are set upon. Fleeing with Mari and a handful of survivors, Cooper reaches his hideaway. Preparing for a last stand, surrounded, he taunts the enemy by challenging their chief to a death fight.

The challenge accepted, the two men engage in a fierce underwater struggle from which Cooper emerges victorious, as General Zachary Taylor's brigade arrives to mop up the remaining Seminoles.

Referee Picks Wrong Arm

GLASGOW, (AP)—A referee who hoisted the wrong arm out of an entwined tangle of four almost brought the bout down at a boxing show here.

Peter Keenan, British bantamweight champion, had outboxed Stan Rowan of Liverpool in 15 rounds, flooring him twice.

At the final bell Rowan ran to Keenan's corner to congratulate him and they embraced.

Referee Peter Muir joined the little group, picked out an arm, and raised it in token of victory.

As Muir left the ring an outburst of boos and foot-stamping nearly shook the roof loose. Muir looked back, saw Rowan dancing gaily around and realized his error.

Muir mounted to the ring again and reversed the decision.

Picks Oct. 19 As Election Date

OTTAWA, (CP)—Here is a new election-date forecast from the man who was right in 1949: Monday, Oct. 19.

It comes from Senator John Haig as a second thought to a forecast he made earlier this session. At that time he picked Monday, Oct. 12, but he said Thursday that he overlooked the custom of celebrating Thanksgiving on the second Monday in October.

Senator Haig, Progressive Conservative leader in the upper chamber, is an old hand at picking election dates. He hit it on the nose by predicting June 27, 1949, as the date of the last election.
