NEWS FROM OTTAWA.

Redistribution Bill Debate.

(Special Correspondence of The Examiner.)
[CONCLUDED.]

Mr. Montague said: I do not rise for the purpose of making a speech. Unfortunately I seem to have brought down upon myself the wrath of the exceedingly brave and brave member for Lambton (Mr. Lister) who has just been speaking for the purpose of making a speech in the name of Mr. Mowat. I am sorry to hear that Mr. Mowat was so angry that he word advisedly, in the Legislature of Ontario, in the name of Mr. Mowat, that the measure was a fair one, justifiable in every particular, and such a one as any honest man could not criticise either in this Legislature or in the Legislature of Ontario. I do not intend to do to-night with the indignities of that bill in extent, but if the hon. gentleman who rose to defend the bill knows anything about it and desires to give the House information and to deal fairly with the House and the country and as between man and man, I submit that he should not refuse to answer me two or three questions. All I ask him to do is to give explanations and justification for two or three instances I will give him. If he cannot justify Mr. Mowat's action, he either must admit that he rose here for the purpose of misleading the House, or that he rose here without the information which he should possess when he said he was able and willing to defend Mr. Mowat's act in the Ontario Legislature. I asked the hon. gentleman a question about the Yorks, and the hon. gentleman said I had the information and I had no right to ask him, and he hid behind a veil of the House, just as a hero hides behind a haystack when someone arrives with a shotgun, and in order to avoid answering he hid behind your ruling, Mr. Speaker, which was a very just one—that I had no right to interrupt an hon. gentleman in this House. I gave the hon. gentleman the figures, and I asked him for an answer. I ask him for a reason—either for the purpose of equalizing the population, or for the purpose of dealing fairly between the parties, for upon one or other of these grounds Mr. Mowat interfered with the constituency of West Huron. The population of West York under the old regime was 17,984.

Mr. Lister—You are wrong.

Mr. Montague—I am not wrong, except perhaps by two or three units, but not as regards the hundreds or thousands. The population of East York was 23,312. The unit of representation in Toronto was about 23,000, supposing that Mr. Mowat's third member, under the minority representation had a right to be classed as a member for Toronto in the Ontario Legislature. What did Mr. Mowat do? Does the hon. member for Lambton know? I pause for an answer.

Mr. Lister—Do not play theatrical.

Mr. Montague—I am afraid the hon. gentleman rose without possessing a proper knowledge of the facts to justify Mr. Mowat. What Mr. Mowat did was this: he found, unfortunately, that the constituency of West York had persisted in giving a small majority to the Conservatives in the general election which preceded the Gerrymander Act. He found that it had given in the last general election a majority of 19 for Col. Grey, and what did he do? He did according to the rules of justice and fair-play which have been laid down by Mr. Lister, he did the very opposite to equalizing population, but he did equalize politics. He took away the growing town of Parkdale with a population of 1,170 and he added it to the City of Toronto whose unit was already 28,000, while the population of West York was 18,000. He took away a unit of 19 from the Conservative party in West York, but that did not suffice. He took away also the village of Richmond Hill and he added it to East York whose population was already 23,000. He left the constituency of West York with a population of 15,974, but he made it Grit in the Legislature of Ontario by equalizing it from 17,000 to 15,000 while the city of Toronto had an enormously large ratio and while the constituency of East York had a population of about 24,000 or 25,000 when he had done his equalization. I ask now upon what ground will the member for West Lambton justify this, and I pause for an answer? If the hon. gentleman answers that, I trust, sir, you will give me an opportunity of asking him to justify several other similar instances. I ask my hon. friend from Lambton (Mr. Lister) how he justifies that?

Mr. Lister—Do not go on playing the theatrical. You have got the figures there have you not?

Mr. Montague—Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman must admit that he has misrepresented me to the House.

Mr. Lister—I have done nothing of the kind.

Mr. Montague—Thank you. The hon. gentleman is now the esteemed and polite gentleman from West Lambton, while I am the uncultured interrupter who stands before you and asks for the Speaker's condemnation. Mr. Speaker, I rose with that one instance, but I will give the hon. gentleman half a dozen more if he will explain that one. He rose to explain that Mr. Mowat had redistributed the constituencies in the Province of Ontario for the purpose of equalizing population. Is York redistributed on the basis of equalization of population?

Mr. Lister—Yes, sir.

Mr. Montague—The hon. gentleman says yes. Then, Mr. Speaker, having reduced a constituency which had 18,000, and added what had been taken from that to a constituency that had already 23,000 population, if the hon. gentleman calls that equalization, and says that that was the basis upon which Mr. Mowat did it, I leave the hon. gentleman and Mr. Mowat to

Address and Presentation.

Miss Gordon and a number of her pupils met at the Baptist parsonage on Friday, 10th inst., and presented Mr. Spurr with a beautiful and valuable silver butter cooler and the following address:

We, the teacher and pupils of Cavendish School, feel that we cannot let the present term come to a close without making some recognition of your invaluable assistance to us in music at different times, and we ask you to accept this little gift as a small expression of our appreciation of your services, your invaluable kindness and the interest you have always taken in our school.

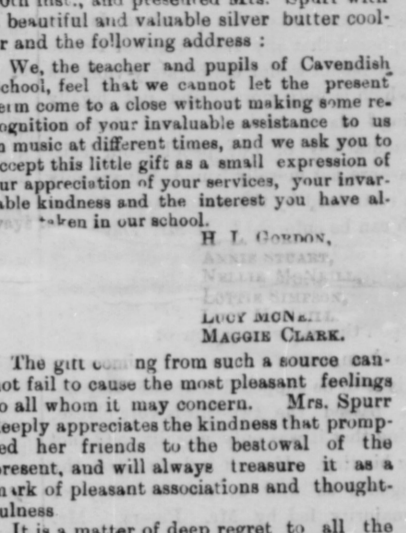

H. I. GORDON,
MAGUIRE CLARK,
LUCY SIGNS,
MAGUIRE CLARK.

The gift coming from such a source cannot fail to cause the most pleasant feelings to all whom it may concern. Mrs. Spurr deeply appreciates the kindness that prompted her friends to the bestowal of the present, and will always treasure it as a mark of pleasant associations and thoughtful friends.

It is a matter of deep regret to all the students of Cavendish school, as well as the community at large, that Miss Gordon, their esteemed and efficient teacher, is just closing her last term of teaching at Cavendish. Her painstaking care and energetic efforts to make her school a success have met their due reward in the love and respect of her pupils. May success attend her.

Few people have any idea of the care with which tobacco has to be attended after it is grown. It will imbibe odors of almost any kind if placed near the source of them. A pig sty, for instance, near the place where the planter stores his crops will impart a disagreeable flavor, which no care afterwards will divert it of. Among the many precautions taken to obtain a faultless leaf for the "Myrtle Navy" brand is to ascertain carefully the methods which every farmer adopts with the crops in the sections of Virginia where the "Myrtle Navy" leaf is grown.
