CHAPTER TEN
Part One

Catherine caught her breath. There was a swift, convulsive movement in the little group that showed Jennifer in jade green, slim and sequined and sophisticated looking. But Jennifer's face was white and drawn.

Catherine said excitedly, "Win, do you mean it? Is it true. Celia? No foolin'?"

"It's true, but I didn't know he was going to announce it like this. I—well, I'd have told you privately—" stammered Celia, beneath the gay hubbub of laughter and congratulations, while people carefully and very politely did not look at Jennifer, who stood as though rooted to the spot.

"Privately? Why? Did you think I'd be so delighted I'd make an unholy show of myself?" demanded Catherine laughingly, her eyes shining. "Because I am delighted. Celia—I'm tickled silly!"

Win, catching the last sentence grinned down at his sister and demanded gaily, "You're delighted? You're tickled silly? Well, how do you think I feel?"

Later that evening, when Win was dancing with Honey, Celia took the opportunity to slip out on the terrace in the cool moonlight. The house had been hot, and here on the terrace facing the river there was a very welcome breeze.

She turned quickly to face Jennifer, in her green sequined gown, her red hair an aureole about her white and strained face.

Celia said quietly, "I'm sorry the news was such a shock to you."

Jennifer's eyes flashed angrily. "And just what do you mean by that crack?" she demanded shortly.

"Only that I am sorry Win chose to make his announcement without letting you know in advance," answered Celia calmly.

"I don't need you to be sorry for me," flashed Jennifer. "You're not married to him yet, you know I have my doubts that you ever will be—for long, anyway."

Celia said, "And now I think I'll have to ask you to explain that crack!"

"I'd be delighted to explain it," she answered hotly. "I said I doubted that you would ever marry Win, but that if you did, it would not last long—because you can't hold him! He's amused now and interested because you're a novelty, a ga-ga little sap from nowhere that nobody ever heard of."

Celia said gently, "Well, if I can't, you'll be there to pick up

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND WELFARE

Appointed Director Of Advertising

The appointment of Mr. W. D. Hogue, above, as Director of Advertising and a member of the Board of Directors of the Procter & Gamble Company of Canada, Limited, was announced by W. E. Williams, President. Mr. Hogue's appointment will become effective February 1st.

Mr. Hogue joined the Advertising Department of Procter & Gamble in 1939 and has been continuously in advertising work since that time, except for war service as a Lieutenant in the U.S. Naval Reserve. During his company service, he was with the Advertising Department of the Thomas Hedley Co. of England, and most recently, was Director of Advertising of another company subsidiary — The Philippine Manufacturing Company, Manila, P.I.

Mr. Hogue is a graduate of Phillips Academy of Andover & Oberlin College, Ohio. He will make his home in Toronto.

the pieces, won't you?"

Jennifer caught her breath and for a moment her teeth were revealed as she drew back her upper lip like an angry cat. And then she tipped her head arrogantly and said insolently, "I am not at all sure that I'm going to let you marry him to begin with. I haven't begun to fight yet!"

And before Celia could answer her she had turned and walked back into the house. In the doorway she collided violently with Catherine, who drew back and stared after her, eyebrows raised.

"My goodness!" said Catherine inadequately, as she came out on the terrace and recognized Celia in the moonlight. "Oh, it's you Celia! Now I know why Jen was in a towering rage. I hope you cut her down to normal size with a few well-chosen words!"

She perched on the wide railing at the edge of the terrace and lit a cigarette as she continued briskly. "Oh come now darling you mustn't start by letting her get the upper hand! Jen's a holy terror when she's on the prowl! No woman whose man has given her a moment's thought can afford to let her get away with so much as a 'how-do-you-do'."

Celia said quietly, "Then Win has been encouraging her."

Catherine shot her a swift glance and was silent for a moment before she said cautiously, "Oh well, I don't think Win has been entirely to blame. After all everybody in our crowd knows that Jen's out to marry a handsome bank account, and she likes Win."

"I think she's in love with him," said Celia quietly.

Catherine hesitated and then admitted, "I imagine she is, Celia. But after all, that's not entirely Win's fault, is it?"

"No, of course not."

IN MEMORIAM

MR. THOMAS H. HIGGINS

On the morning of Saturday, January 5th, 1952, there entered suddenly into his eternal rest the spirit of Thomas Harrison Higgins, South Melville, Prince Edward Island. The late Mr. Higgins had not enjoyed good health for the past several years, but was able to be around as usual so his sudden passing came as a severe shock to his loved ones. He was the youngest son of the late George Higgins and his wife Charlotte Inman, Inman, South Melville and at the time of his death was sixty-three years of age.

He carried on farming on the old homestead where his home was always a haven of hospitality, and will be greatly missed for his many fine qualities of heart and mind, being a kind neighbour and friend, ready at all times to lend a helping hand. He was a faithful husband, a loving and devoted father and a man whose faith in the living God never failed despite great suffering which he was called upon to bear.

He leaves to mourn their loss a sorrowing wife, formerly Miss Margaret Gass, two daughters, Charlotte, nurse at Lady Minto

Special Course Held For Public Health Nurses

"The Public Health Nurses are to be congratulated", said Col. F. C. Fielding, Provincial Co-ordinator for Civil Defense, "for their initiative in starting the first course in Nursing in ABC Warfare to be held in the Province".

Col. Fielding, addressing the nurses during the conference which was held all this week, outlined the civil defense activities in Canada and the Province up to the present time, and spoke of projected future activities in civil defense organization. The nurses included the two-day course as part of their general study during the week of staff conferences because of the importance of knowledge needed for the part that nurses will be expected to play in a civil defense programme.

Other instructors were Mr. R. T. Matheson, Dr. O. H. Curtis, Dr. H. L. Shaw, Dr. M. Spacke, Dr. Wendell MacDonald, Miss Ruth Ross, Mrs. Norma Simpson, Miss Verna Darrach, Rev. Sister Mary Irene, and Miss Ida MacKay. Films pertaining to the lectures were held by the National Film Board. A limited number of other nurses registered for the course.

This is a forerunner of other courses to follow this month to be organized by the Nurses Association for all professional nurses in Prince Edward Island.

The public health nurses also spent a day this week discussing mental health with Dr. J. C. Theriault, Dr. A. A. McVicar and Mr. E. G. Nichols. They also had a meeting with Dr. L. W. Shaw, Director of Education, and the School Supervisors when matters of mutual interest were discussed.

Hospital, Cochrane, Ontario; Jean with the Island Telephone Company, Charlottetown, and one son Ralph at home. Surviving are also a brother Lorne, Crahan and two sisters (Lilla) Mrs. Samuel B. French and Lucy of Charlottetown, besides a large number of other relatives and friends who will ever cherish his memory.

His funeral on Wednesday, January 9th, was largely attended, services at the home and graveside being conducted by his pastor, Rev. J. S. Woolfrey of the United Church Congregation.

His remains were borne to their last resting place in the Grand Cemetery by the following: Messrs. Harry Dunsford, Homer Provencher, George Villett, Jack Dixon, Wilfred Ferguson and Ernest Holm, all life long neighbours and friends of deceased.

Beautiful floral tributes bore silent testimony to the esteem in which the late Mr. Higgins was held.

Card Of Thanks

The family of the late Thomas Higgins wish to thank all their kind neighbours and friends who so thoughtfully remembered them in so many ways, also those who sent flowers, sympathy cards and letters during their recent sad bereavement.

The Meadow Bank branch of Cornwall Mission Band met in the school on Monday afternoon, Jan. 23 with a large attendance. Douglas led the meeting which opened with the hymn "Can A Little Child Like Me".

Nine pupils took part in a New Year exercise and Blois read a prayer and Ruth a New Year's poem. Laura read the 23rd Psalm as secretary and David MacPhail and all repeated "The Lord's Prayer". Hymn "I Am So Glad" was followed by the last chapter in the Study Book.

In the election of officers, Jean Nunn was chosen president, Miriam as treasurer. Six members paid their dues and three placed money in the birthday box. Collection amounted to $1.09.

After the close of the meeting a treat was provided.

GREAT COMPOSER
Jan Sibelius, the distinguished Finnish musical composer, finished his eighth symphony in 1951 at the age of 86.
