CREATION ATTESTS GOD'S GENEROSITY

St. John tells us very briefly and concisely that God is love, and insists vigorously on the primacy of God's love for us. It is God Who has first loved us, and it is we who are to respond to that Divine love — it is always God Who holds the primacy. "Let us therefore love God; because God first hath loved us."

It is, of course, a characteristic of love and goodness to be generous, diffusive of itself. Love seeks to give of itself, and we all instinctively recognize unselfishness, generosity, self-sacrifice, as works of the human lover, who is, after all, but a very faint shadow of our God, Who is love itself.

The whole history of the relation of creation (and particularly of man) to God is the story of the outpouring love of God for His creatures — an activity prompted by no need, no necessity, but simply by infinite love's free desire to share itself.

The very act of creation itself, whereby God has brought all things outside of Himself into existence, is nothing other than an act, a fruit, of His love. He did not create the universe or any of its parts because of any need, any lack in himself. He alone is the fullness of perfection, infinitely and completely self-sufficient, enjoying total possession of infinite and unending life and happiness.

DIVINE GENEROSITY
No, our creation proceeded from an act of a Divine generosity which seeks to share something of its own being and life

Brilliant Lay Apostolate Talk Given To BYC

An interesting, informative and stirring address on the lay apostolate was given to the members of the Basilica Youth Club yesterday morning on the occasion of their annual Communion Breakfast by Mr. Wilfred Driscoll. Prior to the breakfast the B.Y.C. members attended Mass at St. Dunstan's Basilica and received Holy Communion in a body. The breakfast was held at the Parkdale Hall and presided over by Desmond Burge.

In his remarks Mr. Driscoll pointed out that there was a great need for apostolic work among the lay people and that the task was a challenge to everyone not just a few.

He stated that the aim of this work should be to bring all things to Christ and he outlined three basic principles in each individual for achieving this end: (1). True knowledge of our religion; (2). Loyal practice of Christian virtues and morals; (3). Strong attachment to the church.

Mr. Driscoll compared the body of the Church to the body of a man. He pointed out that the body suffered when it lost an arm or leg and that the Church suffered when it lost members such as the millions that have been lost to Communist countries in recent years.

He stated that the unawareness or inability of the free world to see the magnitude and seriousness of these problems is one of the tragedies of our times. He added that for the first time in centuries cardinals were being tortured, priests and nuns murdered and yet the world shrugs its shoulders as though nothing had happened.

The speaker pointed out that there was much which the members of the B.Y.C. could do to help the church. He emphasized the power of prayer; the habit of contemplation; reading of religious articles; response in some practical way to the work of the missions; and a program of study.

Speaking of the B.Y.C. itself he stated that there should be something very definitely spiritual about the club around which everything else should revolve in a

To Conduct Music Exams

Here to conduct examinations for McGill Conservatory of Music is Mr. Reginald DeHaviland Tupper, retired vice-director of that institution. Mr. Tupper has had a long service with McGill Conservatory where he came from England in 1917.

For the first ten years of his stay at the University, he was teaching and conducting the University Orchestra. In 1927 he became secretary of the Conservatory and five years later he took over the post of vice-director.

Although officially retired, Mr. Tupper still continues to conduct annual examinations for the Conservatory. For 22 years his duties took him to the Western part of Canada and this is actually his first visit to Charlottetown. There will be 19 students trying their examinations while he is here.

One with such a long time spent in the field of Canadian Music is able to make some interesting observations, and it is Mr. Tupper's opinion that the standard has increased to a great degree during his experience in this country. A factor to which he attributes this development in musical culture is the granting of credits for music in high school and university courses. This, he said, opened the field much wider and made a musical education available to a far greater number of students. He praises highly, the work being done by the Provincial Musical Festivals, noting that a large percentage of hitherto unknown talent is being uncovered.

lessor manner. A vote of thanks to Mr. Driscoll was moved by Mr. Ivan Dowling and seconded by Mr. Derrill MacGuigan.

Rev. Reginald Phelan, who was able to attend the meeting for only a short time, spoke briefly and congratulated the members for their fine turnout.

Breakfast was served by the Parkdale Women's Institute and they were tendered a vote of thanks from the meeting for the fine meal they prepared.

His worrying hours, too, are shorter today

Joe never had it so good!
Today he earns more than twice as much as he did ten years ago. His hours are shorter. And the new plant where he works is bright, modern and efficient — a vast improvement on the old one.

And there's another important change — one that benefits Joe and his family in a personal way. Not so long ago, he used to envy the workers in big plants because they had group life insurance. But now Joe's company, though comparatively small, has arranged a similar plan which also provides health and accident insurance, as well as pensions.

This coverage takes a big load of worry off Joe's mind. Especially the group life insurance — which adds extra dollars for his family's protection over and above the life insurance he has provided on his own.

Joe's experience is like that of thousands of workers in many different businesses throughout the country. Group insurance, little known 25 years ago, has developed rapidly because it meets such a vital need. It has met this need so successfully that last year, Canadians received a total of about 90 million dollars in group benefits from life insurance companies.

Here is more evidence that life insurance companies, and their representatives, are constantly seeking new and better ways to serve the needs of Canadians in all walks of life!
