"Why is Carnation so Good for Babies?"

Every time you weigh your baby... and when you proudly watch his first toddling steps... you'll be glad that you fed him on Carnation Evaporated Milk. For Carnation adds precious pounds and inches... helps baby's legs grow straight and strong.

"from Contented Cows"

Why Carnation is Better for Your Baby

CARNATION is whole milk in its easiest, most digestible form. Absolutely uniform, because all Carnation Milk is processed in Carnation's own plants, under the most rigid quality controls. More nourishing, because it provides all milk's food values plus 480 Units of vitamin D per pint.

FOR GENERATIONS now, Carnation has been recognized by famous baby specialists and used in leading hospitals. For baby's sake... for your own peace of mind... ask your doctor about Carnation. It's the milk every doctor knows.

Morning Smile

Hooked

"Darling," said the poor young man, when the subject of marriage came up, "you know I love you, but marriage is just impossible. Why, I couldn't keep a canary." "Of course you could, dear," the girl declared firmly. "I love them."

The Question

The father decided to have a serious talk with young Jimmy, who was inclined to be light-hearted and irresponsible. "Jimmy," he said, "you're getting to be a big boy and you ought to take things more seriously. Just think—if I had died suddenly, where would you be?"

and smiled crinkling at Pam. "How's your aunt, my dear?" he asked dryly, suggestively, his attitude—excluding Mark from the conversation—seemed to say: "you're in bad company, my child; so home!" Pam was flushed; her lip trembled a little but she forced a smile. "I'm going to meet her now—I was on my way when—she did not speak the name, 'Byram,' again, it seemed unlucky—"I've got to go now." She turned to Mark. "Couldn't someone call me a taxi?" she asked hurriedly. "I'm conscience-stricken when I think of Aunt Lynn waiting!" "I'll get a taxi for you myself,"

Remember NESCAFÉ

IMPORTANT FOR YOUR SUMMER COTTAGE or CAMPING TRIP!

"Finest Cup of Coffee You Ever Tasted!"

NO FUSS - NO MUSS - MADE "QUICK AS A WINK"

This summer, take along a jar of Nescafé, and avoid the old-fashioned drudgery of coffee-making.

You can have truly fine coffee in a matter of seconds, when you use Nescafé. At mealtimes, for lunches, anytime, it's so easy to make, so sure to satisfy. Nescafé eliminates the nuisance of coffee pots, the bother of messy grounds, and it requires much less space to pack than regular coffee.

Whether you use a cup or a coffee-server, just measure out one teaspoonful of Nescafé for each cup desired, and add boiling hot water. That's all there is to it. *Nescafé gives you delicious coffee every time, and you can serve it iced or hot.

The 4 oz. jar saves you up to 40¢ a pound, the 12 oz. jar saves even more.

Drink NESCAFÉ and enjoy the finest cup of coffee you ever tasted

*Nescafé (pronounced NES-CAFAY) is the exclusive registered Trade Mark of Nestlé's Swiss Condensed Milk Products (Canada) Limited, which designates its Soluble Coffee Product. It is composed of equal parts of pure soluble coffee and added carbohydrates (dextrose, maltose and sucrose) added solely to protect the flavor.

West - Millar Wedding In Toronto

Hart House Chapel at the University of Toronto was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Thursday morning, June 21st, when Catherine Belle, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon S. Millar, Ellerslie, P. E. I., became the bride of George Harold, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Willard West of Charlottetown.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. David K. Andrews.

The bride wore a street-length dress of pale green net over tulle and a corsage of yellow roses. The groom wore a tuxedo. The bridesmaids were Misses O. Brown, a pale mauve silk dress and a corsage of pink roses.

The groom was attended by Harvey O. Brown.

Following the ceremony a breakfast was held at the Savarin Hotel, after which the couple left for a honeymoon in the Muskoka Lakes District.

Previous to her marriage the bride was a member of the staff of the P. E. I. Biological Station at Ellerslie. Mr. West graduated in Engineering at the University of Toronto this year and plans on returning this fall for graduate work in heat transfer.

Mark said promptly; he was minded to leave her alone with his enemy. "Let Foslodick do his worst!" He left them standing by the table, the girl trying to make talk, plainly agitated; the old man's thin, black-clad back still squarely on the retreating offender.

"Hang him!" Mark thought violently. "It's like giving up—but he can have his chance. She's got to know I've been a snook!" His sheer rage at Foslodick did not blind him to his own iniquity.

Traffic was congested outside, and the doorman took quite a while to summon a taxi. It seemed interminable to Mark, wondering how bad Foslodick was making it. "If I'd told myself!" he fumed. "Well, I deserve it—it was a black thing to do!"

"What devil had possessed him to take up with Teddy Banks? He remembered the eighty cents, his tea and odious lumpy muffin, and smiled grimly. Such things led to crime. But without that adventure he would have missed—Pam! He choked back the flood of passionate delight that always swept him at the thought of her. He was a mad fool, and he knew it. In the wild medley of his thoughts the advent of the taxi brought reality.

"Here it is, sir, one of the new rate ones, too!" Mark swung through the revolving doors of the vestibule and made his way toward the alcove. It seemed to him that the room had filled up amazingly and was full of eyes. He did not know that his white face drew them. Foslodick's back was still there, turned this way, and Pam was opposite, a little flushed, a little ill at ease. He could see that; she had worn a rose or two in her furs, she was dangling one now between her fingers, plucking at it nervously. He felt a sickening dread of the enlightened look she might give him, but, as he came up, she smiled, relief in her eyes.

"The taxi?" she asked quickly. "It's waiting for you." Mark wanted to tap Foslodick on the shoulder and force him to turn, but the old lawyer managed, cleverly, to shake hands with Pam without apparently seeing him at all. He was treating the young man like an offensive cockroach, to be ignored when it could not be conveniently crushed.

The red was staining Mark's cheek as he walked down the room with Pam. They did not speak, tables were filled up, and, once or twice they had to pass single file between them, but he thought she knew; he could feel a change in her. Outside the door he stopped her. The street was crowded but they were alone together for all that.

"I've got something to say to you," he said hoarsely. "I suppose you know it?" She looked up at that, her eyes gravely perplexed. She shook her head.

"Didn't Foslodick tell you?" "No!"

Trinity W. A. Hears Interesting Address On Dept. Of Welfare

Mrs. G. S. Morrison of the Department of Health and Welfare of the Provincial Government was the guest speaker on Tuesday afternoon at the July meeting of the Summerside Trinity W. A. Afternoon Auxiliary. Mrs. W. A. Allen presided and Mrs. B. R. Sharpe was pianist. Mrs. W. C. Robertson, Supply Secretary, read a letter from Miss Annetta Rose of Korea, now in Japan, thanking the Auxiliary for a box of baby clothing sent direct to her last March.

She expressed her appreciation and spoke of the special need that the faithful Korean Christians were carrying on in spite of indescribable hardships. A similar box of baby clothing mailed in June, and three boxes of clothing were shipped to Toronto for Korean relief.

Mrs. Lamarr Adams was in charge of the Christian Citizenship programs, with the worship service based on the theme, "Let Me About God." Mrs. Hooper Linkletter read excerpts from a letter from Miss Elina Inman on Trinidad and Mrs. Roy Tanton read an article on the development of the church in Trinidad. Prayer was offered by Mrs. Walter Lidstone.

In keeping with the social welfare program of the Department of Christian Citizenship the address brought by Mrs. Morrison was most interesting and enlightening. She outlined the work being done by the various branches of the Department of Health and Welfare, stating there was need of more general education to inform the public of the needs and purposes of social work and the members of the Auxiliary could assist by passing on the information. "All adoptions in this Province must now be made through the Child Welfare Division," Mrs. Morrison said, and in conclusion stressed that the greatest need in this Province at the present time is a home where mentally deficient, epileptic and crippled children can be cared for.

AN ELECTRIFYING MOTION FILM, "THE LAWLESS" EARNS RAVES

Boldly blasting away at the twin evils of racial discrimination and mob violence, Paramount's "The Lawless," which opened today at the Capitol Theatre, is a blistering action drama that electrifies on the screen with electrifying force.

Rarely has so serious a theme as intolerance been presented with such startling effectiveness by the movie-makers. Most films on controversial subjects tend to be "talky" and static, but "The Lawless" is jam-packed with excitement and thrills from start to finish.

Set in the lush farming area of California where Mexican-Americans from the majority of the vitally needed pickers, "The Lawless" explores the powder-keg relationship that exists between these migrant workers and the "pure white" townspeople.

When one of the young Mexican-Americans is accused of criminal attack, hot-headed bigots take the lead in forming a lynch mob. Their ranks are swollen by the addition of ordinarily law-abiding citizens caught up in the hysteria and they almost accomplish their inhuman objective. They are thwarted, however, by a courageous newspaper editor, a girl reporter and an influential business man.

Macedonald Carey and Gail Russell star in "The Lawless" and are in a good measure responsible for the film's powerful impact. But most of the credit goes to Lalo Rios, who makes his movie debut in the picture as the victimized Mexican-American youth.

Mice. I want berries. Nice, sweet, ripe blueberries." His dull eyes sparkled. They really did. He licked his lips. He was already tasting those berries before he had even found them. Sometimes things taste better that way than they do when they are actually eaten. Jimmy took a long look this way and that way. He wasn't afraid. That wasn't why he was looking, taking a long look this way and that way. It was a matter of habit. He knew that Hooty the Owl wouldn't be hunting at that time of day and there was no one else to worry about. Then Jimmy began to amble across the Green Meadows toward the Green Pasture. Now and then he licked his lips in anticipation. He didn't hurry. Jimmy never does hurry, or very seldom. He doesn't believe in hurrying. In this respect Jimmy isn't up to date. He still lives as his great-great-great-great grandfather did when the world was young. Jimmy never runs into trouble. It is too bad that there are no more people like him today. The Great World would be a much happier place if folks were less hurried. They could learn something from Jimmy Skunk.

Jimmy ambled along until he could crawl under the fence at the edge of the Old Pasture. There he met Old Jed Thumper, the grey old Rabbit who was the father of Mrs. Peter. You know she was Miss Fuzzy-tail when Peter first met her. Jimmy and Old Jed Thumper were old acquaintances. "Howdy," said Jimmy. "Howdy," replied Old Jed Thumper.

Four steps to healthy, happy childhood

Long before your baby takes his first step there are delicious, digestible foods available that are safe for babies and saving in time and trouble for mothers. Made by Heinz, whose name stands high with Canadian parents, these famous infant foods are not only recommended by doctors, but in some cases Heinz varieties originated as the result of specific requests by physicians and nutritionists.

STEP 1—Within the first three months of your baby's life, your doctor will recommend a varied diet of pre-cooked cereals. Heinz offers Barley Cereal, Oatmeal Mixture and Cereal Food.

STEP 2—Soon after, it is customary to add many of the 27 varieties of Heinz Strained Baby Foods, a list comprising almost everything an infant needs at that age.

STEP 3—For babies as young as eight months there is another whole list of 19 Junior Foods, offering a wide selection of sturdier foods—soups, meat products, vegetables, fruits and puddings.

STEP 4—You can hardly say "presto" before those kiddies are school-age boys and girls. In the summer, after strenuous days outdoors, there is nothing they love better than a quick hearty bowl of Heinz Soup—and when school starts again, Heinz Cream of Tomato Soup is a top favourite for lunch boxes.
