

The Dollar.

From the king on the throne, from the peasant who tills, From the lawyer who pleads in his choler, From the client who waits for his share in the spoils, Comes the cry of the crowd for the Dollar. As it ever has been, as it ever shall be, While the heart to the head is a scholar, The Grindens and Grundys by Nature's decree, Shall worship the almighty Dollar. A round bit of gold! That's all! Yet I'm told That the world is built up by its glistening! That the ching-a-ling-ling of this idol's old Brought the devil to stand at his christening.

John Whitcomb Riley.

Training Will Tell.

In the minor moralities the principle of careful early training holds good. The politeness that is now styled old-fashioned might be reintroduced with benefit to those who practised it and to those who are favored in receiving it. The graceful deference to elders and to women is something that is rarely acquired in mature years. A boy of five is none too young to be taught to pull off his cap when he meets an acquaintance, to remain uncovered in the presence of ladies, to step aside to allow them to enter or leave a room first, and to remain standing till they are seated. There is an ease of bearing gained by early drilling in these regards that makes unmistakable the difference between the man whose courtesy is ingrained and the one with whom it is a veneering, no matter how skillfully the latter may have been applied. The table manners of children cannot receive too close attention, and yet they seldom have adequate care bestowed upon them. The constant reproof and admonition required seem but a thankless task for many years. Boys and girls manifest a terrible ingenuity in acquiring awkward habits and unpleasant tricks, and an equal slowness in overcoming them. Perpetual nagging is always painful, both to the giver and the object, but the recompense of grateful appreciation comes surely, though slowly. Some parents weary of waiting for it and abandon the efforts at training. To men nothing can make up for the lack of this early discipline. Women, more imitative and less transparent in imitation, may tutor themselves into a pretence of ease, but a man rarely sufficiently overcomes his self-consciousness to feel otherwise than miserably in a circle where he knows his habits and manner mark him as of less outward refinement than his associates. Once in a great while the wife of a man may succeed in imparting a polish that transforms the rough article into a tolerable counterfeit of the fine one, but it is at the piece of long struggles and bitter mortifications alike to husband and wife. It is in the mother's hand that the power is laid, and with her rests the responsibility if she fails to exercise it aright.

New Way to Pay Old Debts.

"It's a terrible thing to owe money," said Smith. "To be compelled to dodge around this corner and that to avoid meeting a creditor on the street. It takes the manhood out of one, and he soon loses all self-respect. I am very glad to say that I no longer owe a dollar." "Then those old debts that have bothered you so long are all squared up, are they?" "Yes, thank heaven! The last one became outlawed yesterday."

Easter.

The Easter festival falls this year on the 25th of April—the latest day on which it can possibly fall. It has not occurred before on that date during the present century, and it will not happen again till the year 1943. The earliest day on which Easter can fall is on the 22nd of March, and it will not occur on that date till the year 2,000. In fact, the festival only falls on its earliest and latest limits about once in a century.

Different Views of Life.

Wife—You shouldn't take such a morbid view of life, my dear. Look at poor Mr. Smith with his small income and his wife slowly dying, and yet he has a cheerful smile and a pleasant word for everybody. Husband—Is his wife dying? Wife—Yes. Husband—Well, if he doesn't look out he'll give himself away.

Free and Independent.

Mrs. Hendricks (the landlady)—Bless me, Clara, look out of the window and see who is ringing so violently at the door. Clara—Why, ma, it's Mr. Dumley. Mrs. Hendricks (with a sigh of relief)—Thank goodness, he has brought the money to pay his back board or he would never dare ring like that.

MANHOOD

How Lost, How Restored. We have recently published a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses. Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cts or two postage stamps. The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically. This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Address: THE CULVERWELL MEDICAL CO. 41 Ann St., New York. Post Office Box 450. may
