Credit Sales To Canadians Shows Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians have been increasing the rate of their credit buying to the tune of 10 per cent each for the last 10 years, the joint Commons and Senate committee on consumer credit was told here.

G. K. Bouey, chief of the Bank of Canada's research department, said this was a higher rate of growth than found in the United States, where consumers had extended their total by 8½ per cent every year since 1954.

Mr. Bouey, who presented a survey of consumer credit in Canada at the committee hearing, said that although the Canadian credit increase seemed high, there were at least two main factors which might have brought it about.

"The increased role of Canadian chartered banks in the field of personal loans during the last decade probably helped to stimulate the rapid growth of consumer credit in this country.

Mr. Bouey also said statistics seemed to show that far more Americans than Canadians obtained loans on their mortgages to finance such consumer credit as car and appliance payments.

Mortgages and other forms of housing financial arrngements were considered outside the scope of consumer credit nd thus the amount of related credit being derived from them would not be assessed, he said.

In July, the joint committee is to hear a submission from the federated finance companies of Canada. It is also scheduled to hear views on consumer credit from the Ontario Credit Union League, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the National Credit Union Association and the Retail Merchants Association of Canada.
