Fine RCAF Station Display Arranged For Air Force Day

This year all sections and departments of the R. C. A. F. station at Summerside will provide static displays designed to give the visiting public on air force day, this Saturday, an insight into the type of work done by the respective sections and the various type of equipment which are associated with the particular phase of their work.

For example, the maintenance service and repair sections have prepared a Harvard aircraft which will continually lower and raise its undercarriage, to give the public an opportunity to see the hydraulic engineering that effects this apparently simple operation.

There will be an animated display of ground crew loading and unloading an aero engine from an engine box by means of a two-ton boom crane.

Those who are mechanically inclined will delight in displays of Dakota, Lancaster, and Harvard engines, each with the propeller mounted.

Those who hate wrapping Christmas presents may be inspired by the R. C. A. F. process of constructing an aircraft engine.

The control room in No. 2 hangar will illustrate how engine and airframe times are recorded, and the various checks that are carried out on aircraft at different time cycles will also be explained.

A display of aircraft specialized tools for engines and airframes, as well as a display of aircraft ground handling equipment may well excite the envy of the tractor operators.

In the electrical department electricians will be shown using an electrical test bed, which is used for testing starters, generators and fuel pumps. Model aircraft fans will be given the opportunity of operating via push button control a number of model aircraft, which have been wired for flashing navigator lights.

Armament Section - The armament section will feature displays of 50 calibre machine guns, 20 mm. hispano aircraft cannon, small arms, Prazer-Nash turret, aircraft rocket firing control pyrotechnics, as well as fully inflated parachute, and flares.

The radio section will display all types of aircraft radio equipment in operation. One feature which should appeal to all is a voice recorder. Volunteers will be given the opportunity of recording and hearing their own voices and an instrument known as the oscilloscope will give you a chance to "see your own voice."

The photo section will have on display a number of aircraft cameras and will feature a display of photographs of local communities on the island. See your home town from the air—try to pick out your own house.

The station hospital will re-produce a hospital room, complete with bedside table, medicine, radio, bed lamp and the other facilities provided by the service for the comfort of the ill and injured. Another display will feature specialized hospital equipment: Heat lamps, infra-red ray lamps, diathermy machine and an operating display of an iron lung.

Safety Equipment - The safety equipment section will display equipment normally used by a ground search party if parachuting in the woods. There will be an animated display of parachute packing throughout the afternoon. These displays will include emergency kits, ten-man dingy and "Gibson Girl" emergency distress radio equipment.

The supply section will feature one male and one female mannequin, dressed in summer uniform, with other articles of kit.

The messing or cooking department will have on display a typical week's diet sheet, as well as an actual sample of whatever meal happens to be served in the composite mess at noon of air force day.

A small theatre in one of the display hangars will run a continuous showing of general interest films throughout the afternoon. Some features include the Charlottetown races and wings for Nato, a National Film Board release.

A display featuring outstanding station personnel in the hobby shop will be judged and awarded prizes on that day. The hobby shop itself, consisting of equipment too massive to be moved, will not be on display, but the completeness and the extent of the equipment used may easily be judged by the quality of the exhibits put on by the hobbycraft enthusiasts.

Fire Fighting Section - An opportunity will be given to all to see the fire fighting section in action during the course of the afternoon when they put out a fire caused by the Lancaster bombing. There will also be a mock airplane crash, which will afford all spectators the opportunity to witness the many phases of fire fighting and risk involved when disaster strikes an aircraft and crew.

Of great interest to C. J. R. V. radio fans will be a radio broadcast by Bob Schurman from a Dakota aircraft as he actually flies over Summerside and surrounding district. This broadcast is scheduled to take place on the morning of Saturday, June 14th.

A most hearty welcome is extended to everyone on the island to visit R. C. A. F. station Summerside on Air Force Day on Saturday, 14th June, starting at one o'clock, Atlantic Standard Time.

SHIPWRECK HAVEN - Bermuda was settled in 1609 by colonists whose ship was wrecked there while en route to Virginia.

String and sacks may be secured at the Department of Agriculture, Charlottetown. The Receiving Station is open at the foot of Prince Street.

A matter of great importance in shipping wool is to ship a number of lots under one name for any community. The minimum charge on any lot is $1.20 per cwt. If you have only forty pounds of wool you still pay $1.20.

Grass Silage - What about your grass silage? The grass is with us, and growing by leaps and bounds. Do not leave it too late. It is also wise, especially in the first year, to use a good mixture rather than straight clover. There is a greater difficulty when clover content is over 60% than when it is under that level. If grass silage is being saved and a preservation is used be sure you have made full arrangements for the latter in time of harvesting.

Culling the Laying Flock - The culling of non thrifty, deformed and non laying birds from the flock in the time of low egg prices and high feed costs would mean the difference between profit and loss.

Very few people cull their laying flock through the laying year and yet the flock should be culled at least every two weeks for the elimination of unprofitable birds. For those poultry producers who plan to keep their laying flock throughout the summer, the following points should be kept in mind in the elimination of non layers.

1. Comb and wattles which are shrunk and dull in appearance.

2. A wrinkled and beefy face.

3. The bird will appear dull and inactive, thin or overfat and broken down behind.

4. The public bones will be thick and close together.

5. The abdomen will be shallow and hard, with the skin harsh and thick.

6. The vent will be small, dry and round.

7. The vent, beak and legs will be yellow in appearance.

8. The plumage of the non layer will be bright, glossy and loose feathered.

In county Magistrate's court in Summerside yesterday, before Magistrate R. S. Francis Arsenault, Summerside, appeared for sentence yesterday in Supreme Court in Summerside, before Mr. Justice Mark MacGuigan.

He was sentenced to two years on a conviction of indecent assault, and to three years on a conviction of robbery.

Both sentences will run concurrently, and the term of imprisonment will be served in Dorchester Penitentiary.

A strong plea for leniency because of his age of 18, was made by W. Chester S. MacDonald, counsel appointed to defend the prisoner.

Crown Prosecutor J. Harold Goodwin pointed out that the prisoner's record to date had not been good, because prior to the convictions for which he received sentence yesterday he has since November of 1949 had four convictions; twice as a result of his having taken automobiles that did not belong to him; once for assault, and once for theft.

Mr. Justice MacGuigan, before passing sentence said he had taken all these things into consideration and was imposing a sentence which when served would leave the prisoner still a young man, and hoped that he would take advantage of the training available in the institution to prepare himself for a good law-abiding life upon his release.

The only other case that was to have been before the court—a civil jury case—Edgar Reeves versus Hubert Aghew, was settled out of court between the respective parties.

cellus MacDonald—opening the meeting. There were 11 members present. It is hoped that a club can be organized at Vernon, and another at Vernon River in the near future.
