Harry Cooper And The Man He Can't Beat

(By Paul Mickelson Associated Press Sports Writer)

SPRINGFIELD, N. J., June 4.—The greatest battle in the United States open golf championship today probably was fought over the corrugated furrows of a great golfer's soul.
Not all of the big money shooters of the fairway like "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, the fidgety little shotmaker from Chicago who won the Canadian open in 1932, but almost to a man they will tell you he is the greatest golfer in the world. Only—and they tell it with a shake of the head—he can't lick one man. That man is Harry Cooper, who fights himself heart and soul as he trudges toward the doorway of fame, only to be cheated by one flare of temper.
So, we walked down a few blocks of championship lane with him as he tried again. It was a bitter battle that he waged with himself. And once more, he lost the fight. He played what he said was his greatest game but scored only a 71, one under par. The score was good enough to place him among the leaders but if his soul had had the placidity of a Walter Hagen it might have been a 65.
Cooper flared and glared at the unorthodox form of his playing partner before he hit a shot.
"Must I look at that swing all the way around?" he asked.
On the first hole, he missed a 12 foot putt for an eagle by an inch. He missed putts from six to 10 feet for birdies in the next four.
As he finished and cooled himself off in the clubhouse, he said: "Did you ever see a greater round of golf than that one. I never did. It's the best I ever shot. And what did I get for it. Just a 71."
With that he broke into a hearty laugh. If he had laughed at the fifth instead of the eighth he would have won the crown he lost in play-off to Tommy Armour nine years ago.

BALTSOROL GOLF CLUB, Springfield, N. J., June 4.—The New Jersey countryside reverberated today from the most-shocking blast of sub-par explosives ever set off in the 40-year history of the United States open golf championship.

As the shades of evening settled over beautiful Baltisorol, closing the most hectic opening day the tournament has ever known, big Clarence Clark of Bloomfield, N. J., once a terror of the winter circuit, came booming in to make the pace-setting role a three-way affair with diminutive Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., and lanky Ray Mangrum of Dayton, Ohio, at the "quarter pole" of the 72-hole golfing derby.

Each of the trio shot the course in 69, three strokes over par and a new competitive record for Baltisorol's upper course by a one-shot margin.
Under cool grey skies, with the tee markers moved forward to cut fully 300 yards off the 6,866-yard course, the pins placed invitingly in the middle of the greens and nothing more menacing than a refreshing cross-breeze, the par-burgers took advantage of playing conditions that were a sharp contrast to the terrors of Oakmont a year ago.

They did everything but take Baltisorol apart for the benefit of a gallery of nearly 5,000 fans. The day's unprecedented shotmaking record, after exactly 184 players had taken a whack at the course, showed no less than 14 players under par, while 10 others equalled the par of 72.
One shot behind, at 70, came the betting favorite, tall Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., lantern-jawed Johnny Revolta of Chicago, the Association champion and dead-end putter of the deal, N. J.'s 41-year-old Tom Kerrigan of Bronxville, N. Y., who played in the last open held at Baltisorol in 1915; and a pair of "dark horses," Leslie Madison of Hollywood, Calif., and Frank Moore, Harrisdale, N. Y.
Boy Gray, professional of Windsor, Ont., and the only Canadian in the messy field of mashie mechanics, had a bad time with the outgoing nine and wound up with 70. He steadied on the in-journey to complete 37, two strokes under his faltering out-going effort. His total was the same that "Sad Sam" Parks, the Pittsburgh pro who won this tourney over the sunbaked Oakmont last year had.

Tied for 10th place at 71, only two shots off the pace were each title-seekers as blond Craig Wood of West Orange, N. J., making miraculous recoveries throughout a dazzling round; "light horse" Harry Cooper of Chicago, whose six on the par-four 13th cost him a chance to join the leaders; and Ky Laf-foon of Chicago, the par-indian star, together with another duo of outsiders, Ted Longworth, the Pacific northwest's one standard-bearer from Portland, Ore., and Johnny Bulk, youthful Public Course pro from Chicago.

New Yachting Club To Help Sport, Claim

Formation of the Yacht Racing Association of Northumberland Strait four months ago was probably the best thing that ever happened maritime yacht clubs on both sides of the strait in the opinion of the organization's vice-president, A. "Mac" Irwin, Charlottetown yachtsman-printer.

Patterned after and affiliated with the North American Yacht Racing Union, the Northumberland association will serve as the governing body of yacht clubs in the three eastern provinces whose boats ply strait waters. The organization's executive is made up of representatives of clubs in each of the Maritime Provinces.

Vice-president Irwin says it will serve to standardize racing in Northumberland waters which previously was "happy-go-lucky". The association will promote a better spirit of co-operation among clubs along the strait.
The Northumberland association plans to stage inter-club contests but the sail-boats which enter will be standardized to dispose once and for all of the wearisome task of setting handicaps and the unpreventable dissatisfaction which usually follows handicap races. Usually there was nothing friendly about the "friendly" competitions rival clubs used to hold.

When the inaugural meeting of the body was held last February one of the first things done was to lay down regulations government size, sail-spread and view of all club entries in association-sponsored races to be held this summer.
"Mac" Irwin prepared and submitted a design of the association's "model yacht" and it was accepted. It is of the "Mic-Mac" class and will be the association's standard.

The vice-president has already built one yacht according to the specifications and is completing another. The keels of both were laid at one end of his printing establishment where he can boat-build in spare moments and supervise the job while engaged in his printing business.

The first "Mic-Mac" slid into Charlottetown harbor for her first taste of water just a short time ago. It is not a christened yet but a temporary name—"crow"—was painted on its black hull before it was launched so it wouldn't be hounded by the jinx which pursues vessels that take their first bath unchristened.

A third yacht of the "Mic-Mac class" is under construction in Prince Edward Island at Summerside, and others at Pictou, N.S., and Shediac, N.B. For a couple of years any yacht built before the birth of the Northumberland association and nearly conforming with the body's specifications will be allowed in its competitions but the time will come when its various clubs' trim craft will be as like one another as peas in a pod. Then the game will be up to the sailors more than the boats, says Mr. Irwin.

The new boats will get their baptism of fire June 9 and 10 at Pictou during the lobster carnival.
The new association is going to be a "good thing" for yacht racing all along the strait and will no doubt start a great revival of the old sea sport, says the Charlottetown sailor.

White Sox Hand Yankees 16-3 Drubbing As Tigers Wallop Athletics 18-9

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)
NEW YORK, June 4.—Chicago White Sox beat the Yankees at their own slugging game here today, handing the American League leaders their worst drubbing of the year by banging out 16 hits for a 16-3 victory.
They walloped four Yankee hitters, including Monte Pearson, the league leader, while Johnny Whitehead was setting the New York sluggers down with four hits including Red Rolfe's homer.
Zeke Bonura, with a double and two singles, batting in four runs; Rip Radcliff, with a homer and a pair of singles and Luke Sewell, also with a homer, paced the White Sox batting attack. Joe DiMaggio of the Yanks had a single, stretching his consecutive game hitting streak to 17.
Bob "Lefty" Grove gained his eighth victory in 11 pitching starts when the Red Sox came from behind at Boston and turned back Cleveland Indians 4-3, for the third straight day.
The ace southpaw gave the Indians nine hits, passed four and hit Roy Hughes with a pitched ball but managed to hold them scoreless until the seventh inning. Scoring 10 runs in the third inning and six in the fifth, the Detroit Tigers walloped the Athletics 18-9 at Philadelphia. Fourteen Tigers batted in the third inning and excepting Jack Burns all scored a run or more.
Mickey Cochrane, who with Pete Fox scored two runs in the third inning, gave the finishing touch to the batting spree by hitting a home run with the bases filled. Detroit batted around again in scoring six runs in the fifth.
Al Simmons, centerfielder for the Tigers, was out of the game with a sprained ankle. Manager Cochrane said Simmons would be unable to play for several days.
St. Louis Browns snapped a string of six straight losses to the Senators this season by turning in a 6-2 victory at Washington.
Big Pippo Marberry, once dean of the league's relief hurlers, started and was charged with the defeat in the first game he has started for Washington after trying his hand at umpiring and by turning to the game only to be released by the New York Giants. Marberry left the game with the score 3-2 against Washington in the seventh, after giving up six hits and a single walk.

Stewarts Win Opener From Rovers 21-12

Picking up where they left off last season the champion Stewart's Bakery softball team triumphed over the youthful Rovers, led by Ev McNell, last evening 21-12. Stewart's fell on the offerings of two Rover hurlers, Curly and Whitlock, for 23 hits which coupled with nine errors enabled them to take their opening engagement by a comfortable margin.

Ray Stull, speed ball artist of the Stewart's team, was in good trim striking out nine batsmen and allowing but nine hits. Three circuit blows by Whalen, Stewart and Carmichael respectively featured the tilt.
The Rovers despite the score played an excellent game refusing to admit defeat until the final inning. The newcomers to the league flashed a form of better things to come so far as they are concerned. Stewart's intact from last season served notice that they will again be the team to beat. In their inaugural appearance they displayed plenty of power at the bat and on the field a fine balanced team.

Plan Three Team Ladies Softball Loop
Plans were laid for the organization of a three-team ladies' softball league at a meeting held at the Holy Name Club last night.
Three coaches, Elmer Rice, Vic Williams and "Abbie" Weeks were selected. It is proposed that at the next meeting the coaches will get together, arrange their respective lineups and draw up a league schedule to open the latter part of the next week.
Judging from the enthusiasm of last evening's meeting, the girls will have in operation shortly, a league that will rival that of the City League.

Cubs Pound Four Giant Pitchers For 8-5 Victory; Dodgers Halt Cards 4-3

NEW YORK, June 4.—The Cubs collected 18 hits off four Giant pitchers today for an 8-5 win at New York and an even break in the short series.
Lon Warneke, chalking up his fifth pitching victory of the season, had little difficulty with any of the Giants except Mel Ott, who hammered out his eighth and ninth homers of the season, driving in three New York runs.

It was Clyde Castlemen's seventh start on the mound for the Giants, and his first defeat.
Reds moved back into fifth place by defeating Philadelphia 5-3 at Cincinnati to sweep the two-game series.
Harold Kelleher, youthful Philly pitcher, limited the Reds to five hits until the seventh but then lost control. After Kampouris singled, Kelleher walked Herman and hit Goodman. He then walked Curly to force in Kampouris, permitted Walker, who ran for Herman, to score the tying run on Scarsella's long fly, and Goodman to bring in the Reds' fourth run on Lombardi's double.

Paul Dean failed in a relief pitching role at St. Louis and gave up the tying and winning runs as Brooklyn Dodgers snapped the Cardinals four-game winning streak with a 4-3 setback.
The Dodgers eighth-inning uprising, good for two runs, resulted in the defeat being charged against the younger of the Dean brothers, his fourth of the season.
Frenchy Bordagary led the Dodgers' attack with three hits, one a double.

Boston Bees, playing at Pittsburgh, shelled Cy Blanton from the mound for the 10th time this season, but the Bucs' 1933 star rookie won his second game when Paul Waner quelled a Boston uprising in the eighth with a leaping catch off the wall of Hal Lee's liner with two men on base. The score was 7-5.
Gus Suhr sent the Pirates ahead in their half of the first with a three run homer. Al Todd's double in the fourth scored two more Pirate runs and Blanton singled his catcher home.
Bees sent Blanton to the showers in the eighth with three successive hits.
