

P. W. C. NOTES

Student Election Campaign Had Something For Each

Hullo once more from Prince of Wales. The column's a bit late in starting this year, but we hope to bring our readers up to date by summarizing all that has happened so far, and start next week off with what's new for '57 in social, sports and academic at P.W.C.

As everything has a beginning, so has college life, the difference being that college begins anew every year. For P. W. C. the long summer deadness of her echoing corridors was rudely awaked by the registration of students last Sept. 4th, setting some new records for attendance in First and Second years.

Friday, a week later, the first "Get Acquainted" social was held and needless to say with so many students ready and rearing to go, it was an outstanding success, and the first rung on the social ladder was gained and passed, leaving many happy memories to be recorded in the Year Book.

Next on the locker room discussion list was the oncoming College Elections. Frank Burke, the leader of the Red and Blue party, was a leader in most of the "hash overs," apparently he started campaigning early last spring. It has been said he even went so far, as to visit the schools throughout the district talking Grade Ten students into voting for him, providing they passed Entrance exams.

Frank's opposition, the Collegiate party, were opposite in many ways. They organized their party a week before elections, and nominated Jim Norton, a third year student, as leader, setting him at a bit of a disadvantage due to the late start. Two days before the Election the party gears went into high speed, with lots of party talk and promising being done. Over night the Corridors were decorated with posters and pledges suggesting who to vote for in case one was a bit undecided. A band appeared out of nowhere, to support the Red and Blues, and the Collegiates, not to be out done, trauced up with a yellow convertible, Raccoon skin coats and plenty of girls, dressed contrary to the weather, and appealing to the indecisive male students eye.

Rally day came at last, and before a student gathering in the auditorium speakers from both parties made their final plea. To many, memories of last year's rally came to mind again, but were soon sent back to the far regions, for, for once the speaker's could actually be heard. The rally marked the end of campaigning, and the final decisions now rested in the Studentbody's mind.

The next day, Tuesday, the results were announced, with Frank Burke's Red and Blues winning a decisive victory and giving Frank the honor of president of the Student's Council.

AFTERMATH

When the noise of the Elections died down, and one had time once more to look things over, a surprise was in store: for the many clubs and unions which provide many students with their fellowship, had quietly sprung up. Foremost, and boasting the largest attendance, of these clubs is the dancing group organized last year. Monday night is meeting time, and the College fairly rocks with the music and glee of its members thoroughly enjoying themselves.

Sports also got under way during the election noise, with our new Physical Director, George Scantlebury, ably organizing the annual P.W.C. Track and Field Meet at Memorial Field. At the same time he also got the boy's football team out strenuously concentrating on their training. They play their first game Thursday, when they meet S. D. U. in one of the first games of Canadian Football to be played on the Island.

Well that about does it for our summary of the past, the future, well who knows? We can say though that the future does look bright, and rumors are flying about a Variety Concert, maybe next week more will be known.
