

VARIETIES

The following pieces from the Water Cure journal are open to criticism, but nevertheless contain some very valuable hints.

SUCCESS TO THE BLOOMERS.

Reformers of customs and fashions in war, Has yet been subject to violent shafts. I have never again will wear a long skirt. To fasten my feet and to wipe up the dirt.

Some think they're models for our times, And know not the pleasure of moving with ease. I can't stand it, I can't stand it, I can't stand it. I can't stand it, I can't stand it, I can't stand it.

Without labor, Long dresses may go to parade through the street. We are to be led to the new costume to wear; But all who delight in useful employ, The use of their limbs they must freely enjoy.

For as in the country, long skirts will not do, Our duties require us to walk in the dew, Cook, scarp, wash and iron, make butter and spin the wool, While they labor.

And we have right to wear just what we please, While we labor.

Sometimes in the garden we spend a few hours. In stepping up seeds on to lay up our stores; A blossom drops, but we do not care to see, Because we can move with more comfort and speed.

Without labor, And then, in the winter, a blossom you know, Don't think it a hardship to walk through the snow. To fuddle the cattle, or drive their own sleigh, Such things we can do when the man is away.

At their labor, It is so delightful to take the fresh air, Especially so when the weather is fair; It is so good to see the new fashions in vogue, And not confined to the care of a house.

With their labor, The silly may laugh, and the ignorant stare, But we should see to it that we are not aware; For surely no sensible woman or man Will wish to insult us, and none censure.

For we labor, A Quaker passing by, at a market stood, At a market, he inquired the price of cotton. "I have none," said the honest countryman, "that will suit you; they are decayed, and their flour is gone."

"Think this," said I; "will do the next stand." "Hast thou good fruit to day?" said he to the dealer.

"I have none here are some of the finest nutmegs of my garden. They are small, but rich of their kind."

"Thou hast not come to-day?" said he to the dealer. "I am certainly not."

"O very well; I will take two." He carried them home, and they proved not only unsound, but miserably tasteless.

"I am certainly not," he replied to the dealer. "I have none here are some of the finest nutmegs of my garden. They are small, but rich of their kind."
