

FRIDAY

The Unlatched Door

The owner of the luggage stood with his back to Barbara, looking after the slouching figure which was slowly withdrawing. Barbara turned to her driver again with the pound note in her hand.

"I wish you many happy returns and may I be there to see them!" he said with a grin.

Barbara was clutching at Roy's arm. At the sound of his voice the white haired stranger had swung round swiftly to stare at him.

"Come on," he said. "Let's get inside," and hurried her up the steps. But she was not satisfied.

"What man?" she asked. "Outside. The man who arrived as I did."

"Oh, that!" He threw a careless glance over his shoulder at the stooping back and white hair moving "Must be the new boarder moving in. He's having a room."

"And now, sweetheart, suppose you tell me what it's all about." "It's awful! Awful!" she said.

"Believe you?" He was gasping for breath. His hand went up pressing on his forehead and ruffling his fair hair.

"Oh, if it were!" she cried. "If it only were!" "Do you mean it's really true? You killed him?"

Strange But True

By F. H. MacArthur

A coasting vessel went on the rocks in a recent gale in the English Channel. The skipper and crew took to the boats and were lost. Had they remained on board all would have been saved for a huge wave carried the little vessel high and dry among the rocks.

At the Soldier's cemetery in Nashville, Tennessee, a stranger was once seen placing a flower on a grave. When asked if he were a relative of the deceased he replied: "No; when the war came on I was all ready to enlist, when a young fellow approached me and said: 'You have a large family. I will go in your place. He died at the battle of Chickamauga. I have always wished to see his grave so I came today.'"

Over a century ago, an infidel German Countess lay dying. She ordered that her grave should be covered by a solid slab of granite and surrounded by a fence of stone held together by iron clasps.

The Scheib family of Lucas, Ohio, have a Bible that was once baked in a loaf of bread. The baked Bible came from Bohemia where it was concealed in the bread by the present owner's great-grandfather during one of the persecutions which were so common in that country.

Believe it or not, the human eye has serious defects of which few persons are aware. To begin with, every eye has a blind spot. This is situated on the retina, at the point where the optic nerve enters the eye.

OSLO (CP) — A government survey shows that Norway's building costs have gone up by about 20 per cent since 1950. The Norway Housing Bank has decided to increase its loans by an average of eight per cent.

Winnipeg (CP) — A bottle company here is looking for an old lady who sent the firm 60 cents for an empty case of bottles it did not return when it was a little girl.

Investigating on his own, a diver discovers that the "ghost" is Rex and that the Lost Spanish Silver Lode, about which Pete had written his brother, is under the lake.

In a tense and exciting adventure film, M-G-M brings popular Walter Pidgeon to the Capitol screen, playing a new and different role as the famous gentleman detective, Bulldog Drummond.

Don't postpone making your will. Do you realize without a will two-thirds of your property may go to your children — not your wife? That a will should be checked (especially if you move) — that it's best to have more witnesses than you need?
