Evidence Is Completed In Liquor Selling Case

SUMMERSIDE — Crown evidence was completed yesterday before Magistrate R. S. Hinton in the case of Percy Gallant Summerside, charged with unlawfully keeping liquor for sale.

Final evidence for the Crown was given by Cnst. Ronald E. Mailman, Summerside Police force. He testified that Nov. 2, 1962, he was employed that evening keeping observation on the home of Percy Gallant, 176 Fitzroy Street, Summerside. Shortly after 9 o'clock he saw two men enter the house from off Alley Street. Shortly afterwards he saw a third man drive up in a car and go into the house. About 9.20 Cnst. Mailman saw a man leave the house and go towards the car.

The man was stopped and identified as Thomas Gallant Summerside. He was carrying a paper bag that contained three pints of ale. This man and the articles taken from him were turned over to Police Chief S.D. A. Wannamaker.

Soon after, he saw two young men leave the residence. He stopped them and they were identified as Hartley Percy MacPherson of O'Leary RR and an Edwin or Erwin Alton Phillips also of the same address. The two were searched and Cnst. Mailman found a full pint of rum under Phillips' belt. He accompanied the trio back to the police station.

About 11.30 Cnst. Mailman, in company with Constables Champion and Grady of the Summerside Police and Cnst. Edward F. McCue of the RCMP, returned to the Gallant house. They had with them the three men seen coming out of the house earlier.

The trio, when asked, pointed to Percy Gallant as the person having given them the liquor.

Cnst. Mailman said the police during the search of the house found beer and liquor in the front room and hard liquor in the kitchen. In both these rooms were found empty bottles and two shot glasses in the kitchen.

ASKS DISMISSED

Defence Counsel J. Watson MacNaught, QC, in his motion that the case be dismissed, expressed his dismay at what he called "the police entourage dragging these three men to the police station, interviewing them and dragging them back", and Mr. MacNaught said since Percy Gallant was the only person at the house apart from the police group, he was therefore the only person the trio could say gave them the liquor. "This type of identification should not be permitted in any court", said Mr. MacNaught.

The motion was not allowed by Magistrate Hinton, and defence called their first witness, Mrs. Annie Graham, Summerside. Mrs. Graham testified that on the night of Nov. 2 she went to the Gallant home about 8.30 and left about 11.30. She was in the living room watching TV with the accused.

She stated she saw no bottles in the room, but did see cases there. Asked by Crown Counsel John J. Holmes if she didn't find it rather unusual to see beer cases in the front room, witness replied that lots of people in Summerside have cases in their rooms.

She said while at the house, she and Mr. Gallant never left the room. She said she heard someone come in the front door, but didn't know who it was. She said there was a back door in the house but she didn't know if anyone came in that way or not.

WAS HOUSEKEEPER

She testified that she worked as a housekeeper for accused last summer. She did not know what Mr. Gallant did for a living. She said while she was at the house, and upon frequent visits, she never did see the sale of any liquor or beer.

Mr. Gallant, the accused, testified that his means of support are the old age pension, sometimes keeping roomers and boarders, and gathering empty bottles.

Asked by defense counsel if he sold any liquor on the night of Nov. 2, last, witness replied "If I did I must have sold it in my sleep." He said Mrs. Graham was in the front room with him watching television, and that he often falls asleep while watching the programs.

The case was adjourned to Feb. 11 for judgement.

The only other case on the docket was that of Edgar Francis MacKay, Summerside, charged with damaging public property. The case was dismissed because the complainant failed to appear. On a previous appearance, the complainant also failed to appear, and the magistrate at that time warned that if it happened again, the case would be dismissed.

Defence counsel for McKay was Neil R. MacLeod.

SIGHT 12 BODIES

Lieut. Dewey F. Barfield, pilot of a coast guard rescue plane, reported sighting 12 bodies in the sea in the area where the navy plane crashed. The submarine Carp, which had been engaged in a training exercise with the missing plane, picked up one body.

The eight - engine B - 52 jet bomber apparently exploded in flight north of the remote mountain village of Mora, N.M., before dawn Wednesday.

One of the six crew members was killed, three were found alive and two were missing.

A body was found in the largest piece of wreckage high on a 9,000-foot ridge about 14 miles northwest of Mora.

Search parties found a parachute with a note written by Lt.-Col. Donald Hayes, 39, the pilot. The note said:

"I'm going to walk east and down to the road to get some help."

Hayes was one of the two missing.

Search parties found an injured major not identified in the same general area where Lt.-Col. Nicholas Horangic, 39, parachuted to safety. Horangic was the radar operator.

Also alive was Maj. Thomas McBride, 41, the co-pilot. He came down within 75 yards of Horangic but didn't know it.

DESCENDED NORMAL

At Kansas City, it looked like a routine landing. The four-engine prop-jet Continental Airlines aircraft descended in a normal pattern toward the north end of the 7,000-foot runway at the municipal airport.

The aircraft did not settle to the ground. It continued along and above the runway, then crashed into a dike at the opposite end of the field and burst into flame. The aircraft's passengers and crew members died in the burning wreckage.

At the controls of the 56-passenger plane from Midland, Tex., was Capt. Joseph W. Smith, 46, of Dallas, a pilot with 17 years experience. There was no hint from him of anything wrong.

At New Orleans, divers found the body of co-pilot C. Norman Hansen of Houston, Tex., strapped to his seat in the wreckage of the small passenger plane in Lake Pontchartrain.

They continued a search for the body of the pilot, Bernard A. Kimberly of Marrero, La.

The two-engine Trans Air Lines plane crashed into the lake during a thick fog.

The survey will be carried out by federal government personnel, under the federal - provincial agricultural rehabilitation and development program.

Included in the study will be a transportation survey, which is expected to include the West Point ferry proposal.

Mr. Daley said that economic problems of the County will be studied, including agriculture, tourism and new industry.

HERE NEXT WEEKEND

Diedrich Duick, federal department of agriculture economist, who directed the 1959 socio- economic study of agriculture in this province, will arrive next weekend to confer with Mr. Daley regarding the survey.

$100 Fines Are Levied For Fishing Lobsters

ALBERTON — Joseph Frederick Doucette and Walter Alexander Buote of Tignish, were each fined $100 and costs or 45 days by Magistrate W. Chester S. MacDonald at Alberton yesterday on charges of fishing lobsters during a closed season.

Fines of $50 and costs or 30 days were handed down to Nelder William Costain, Elmsdale RR and Calvin Costain, St. Louis RR for possession of a large quantity of undersized lobsters.

Edward Joseph Perry, Leoville; Edgar Joseph Gaudet and Benny Joseph Gaudet, Tignish; pleaded guilty to charges of assaulting Cnst. Howard Foley and breaking out of the Tignish jail.

Defense Counsel J. Watson MacNaught, QC, suggested that the jail was not a fit place for human beings and that the assault charges were of a technical nature and not of a vicious nature. Crown prosecutor George McMahon in asking for a jail term stated that the trio had shown a total disregard and disrespect for law and order and apparently had the village of Tignish in fear of them.

Sentence was adjourned to March 20 by the magistrate who warned the three men that the severity of their sentence depended entirely on their behaviour until that date.

For making application for a liquor permit while not of age a Tignish youth was fined $20 and costs.

Matheson Doubts House Opening Date

Liberal Opposition leader A. W. Matheson expressed doubt yesterday that the Legislature will sit in March.

"Work of the treasury board on the 1963- 64 estimates has not yet begun," he said, "and when the Liberals were in power it took about two months to prepare the estimates."

Premier Walter R. Shaw said recently that the session could be expected to begin "in early March."

Mr. Matheson suggested that "the opposition will be strengthened considerably this year, with the Dec. 10 election seeing us gaining three seats."

Standings in the 30- seat legislature now are Conservatives, 19 and Liberals, 11. Previous standings were Conservatives, 22 and Liberals, 8.

Ferry Work Is Delayed

The MV Confederation should be ready to leave Halifax Shipyards about the middle of next week, though that is only an approximate estimate. It was learned yesterday from John Smith, department of transport in the Nova Scotia capital.

Work on the carferry that plies between Borden and Tormentine in season has been held up for parts which are coming by road. The date the ferry will be completed will depend on the actual arrival time, it was explained.

The Confederation is having modifications to her bow to make her more suitable for the sort of work she will be doing on the service, it was learned. There were no details as to what the modifications entail.

Biculturalism Statement Due

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker said in the Commons Wednesday he likely will make his statement Monday on biculturalism, promised Jan. 21.

He told T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, that his statement will enlarge on the government's proposal for a federal-provincial conference on this subject.

Mr. Douglas referred to a royal commission in his question, and Mr. Diefenbaker replied that the government has no intention to set up a royal commission on biculturalism.

Office Here For Causeway Is Planned

CAPITAL BUREAU OF THE GUARDIAN

OTTAWA — Northumberland Consultants Limited are expected to establish an office in Charlottetown this year, Heath Macquarrie, MP, for Queens, said here Wednesday.

The firm, an amalgamation of three engineering companies, will assist the federal government in plans for the construction of the Prince Edward Island causeway. Mr. Macquarrie said he understood the firm will open a Charlottetown office some time in May and use this as its headquarters for the engineering studies that will precede actual construction work.

In Charlottetown Premier Shaw said this is a "tangible indication that the causeway is being proceeded with. I am pleased that an office is to be set up here."
