The author of the fictitious advertisement, signed "Shepard & Morrison," offering hogs for sale, which, we presume, has some connection with this subject—will receive the money enclosed with his advertisement on applying at this office.

"Henry G. McIntyre," in reference to the secession in the Irish Volunteer Rifle Corps, has been received.

We call attention to the lottery of a splendid edition of the Life and Times of Wellington, advertised in another column. It is a very valuable work, profusely illustrated with steel engravings and copious maps, making it worthy of the illustrious person whose brilliant actions in the field and wisdom in the senate it describes in an eloquent and comprehensive manner. The lottery is for the benefit of Mr. A. Begley, who is about to return to the old country. We hope all will join and make the lottery a successful one—Com.

UNITED STATES.

Execution in the Southern States.—Intelligence flows in on all sides of fearful excitement in the Southern States at the imminent prospect of the election of Lincoln. The insubordination of the negroes, which is rapidly on the increase, fans the flame. A gentleman who arrived here from the South to-day, states that Minute Men and Committees of Safety are organizing all over the South. In Virginia they are enrolling men all over the State, and the regular volunteers drill daily. The four batteries of rifled cannon, twenty pieces, lately ordered by Colonel Smith, will arrive in Richmond next week, with five thousand revolving pistols and twenty five hundred carbines. Eight hundred barrels of powder have already gone on. There is no exaggeration in all this. Governor Letcher declares openly that its object is to sustain any sovereign State against federal coercion. Letters from Georgia say all their parties are united for secession on Lincoln's election. No doubt is entertained here that in less than sixty days several of the Southern States will have dissolved their connection with the Government.—Boston Paper.

Ship Building in the United States.—All the Ship Yards in Maine are resounding with the stroke of the Carpenter's axe. At Calais there are five vessels on the stocks. There are seven vessels to be built at Pembroke between now and next summer, consisting of three barques and four schooners. Ship timber of all kinds is raising rapidly in price, as is every kind of material in ship building. One firm at Pembroke received orders to build two or three large class vessels for parties in England, but have declined on account of the low price per ton.

The inimitable Blondin fairly surpassed himself during his recent exhibitions in New York. He had made an India Rubber ball 60 feet in diameter, and having suspended it at a height of one hundred feet, clambered up its sides, carrying a tray with his breakfast. He then walked around the ball, and while standing head down, eat his breakfast with great gusto; then he disappeared into the interior of the ball to the amazement of the spectators.

Horrible Murder.—Passengers from Niagara Falls, this morning, bring the intelligence that a horrible murder was committed near Tonawanda, yesterday afternoon. Two stories are told about the matter.

The first account runs in this wise:—As the express train on the Buffalo and Niagara Falls Road was about a mile from Tonawanda, a woman was seen standing near the track, and as the cars approached, the jar caused the woman to fall over and roll away from the rail. The train was stopped and backed up to the spot, and it was discovered that the woman was dead and perfectly cold, with her throat cut from ear to ear.

The other report is, that the deceased was lying across the rails when first seen, and that the cars passed over her, cutting her body in twain, but that on picking her up she was dead, with her throat cut as described above.

In either case a horrible murder has been committed, and the guilty parties no doubt placed the body upon the track to convey the impression to those who might find it that the victim had been killed by the cars.—Rochester Union.

Steamboat Explosion.—Mobile, Nov. 4.—The tow boat Baltic exploded this morning, killing and wounding several.

An Immense Hotel.—The Lindall Hotel, at St. Louis, approaches completion. Its construction will cost over $700,000. It is the largest hotel in the world, far exceeding in size any in New York or Philadelphia. The front on Washington street is 270 feet and its depth is 227 feet. It will easily accommodate 1200 guests, and the boarders can take a walk of a mile and a half before breakfast, by going through the several halls, no one of them twice. The establishment has been leased by the Messrs. Leland Brothers, of New York, and will be finished and arranged under the supervision of Mr. George W. Pearson, for many years the superintendent of the Revere House in Boston.

Fatal Duel.—Two young gentlemen of St. Martinsville, La., one a Deputy Sheriff, named Bonvemil, and the other a gentleman named Fournet, recently fought a duel near that place. Each of the combatants went upon the field armed with two revolvers and a bowie knife; they were stationed twenty paces apart, with instructions, at the word, to fire and advance at will—the fight to end with the death of one or both of the parties. At the second fire Mr. Fournet, having been struck, staggered and fell, but not without retaining both strength and courage enough to fire twice more upon his adversary, but without effect. He died immediately afterwards.

THE UNHANGED FORGER AND SWINDLER GENERAL —A SUPPORTER OF THE GOVERNMENT!

In noticing the advertisement in the Monitor of Wednesday last, over the signature of "Ewen Amos," I wish it to be distinctly understood that my remarks are not intended for that individual. A public malefactor who has been convicted of, and imprisoned for, felony, besides being notoriously guilty of other criminal actions for which he has not yet been punished, but for which many better men have been hung—has certainly no right to suppose that I should exchange words with him. But as he appears in the character of an advocate of the Government—and as he has been again thrust into public notice by some o the friends of the Administration, instead of being allowed to expiate his crimes in jail, to which he had been condemned for a period of two years, I shall notice two or three of the false statements in his advertisement, merely for the purpose of shewing what an admirable friend and supporter the Government enjoy in the person of this unhanged forger. Even the Monitor is ashamed of him, for Amos would not be permitted to appear in the decent society of other correspondents, but is allowed to jostle his way to notoriety through the advertising columns of an obscure journal.

Passing over the vague personal abuse of this apparently incorrigible criminal, Amos says that the article in the Examiner of the 5th instant, respecting the pardon extended to him for the crime of forgery, was written by me in consequence of having been served with a writ at his instance, for £40, the amount of a Note, which he says he owned, and charges me with having destroyed it. All this is false.

First with respect to the Note: In July, 1858, Peter G. Clark asked me to join him in a note, to be placed in the hands of a certain gentleman in Charlottetown, who had a claim against Clark. I had no interest in the transaction whatever, and refused at first to sign the note, but subsequently consented, after earnest entreaties from Clark—the latter promising that the note should not be put in the Bank, nor discounted by any private individual, but placed in the hands of his creditor, as security for his debt. A few days after, Clark left the Island, and it was supposed would not return. In his absence, Amos informed me that he had the note, and showed it to me; he said that Clark had given it to him to sell wherever he could—that he (Amos) had given no value for it, and had no interest in it. This being the case, and Clark having violated the condition on which I accommodated him, I told Amos that I should keep possession of the note—he having handed it to me to copy—or otherwise I would take my name off it. He at first made no decided objection to either course, but afterwards said he would rather I should take my name off the note than keep it altogether, and I obliged him by adopting the former course. I then handed him the note, and he pocketed it, perfectly satisfied. All this was done in the presence of a reliable witness. In a few days, Clark returned to the Island, and Amos waited on him to give an account of his stewardship. The account was so far unsatisfactory, that Clark tore the mutilated note in several pieces—scattered the fragments about the floor of his room, and stamped upon some of them—meanwhile heaping hearty curses on the head of his trusty steward as a reward for his services. Not minding Clark's anger, Amos picked up the pieces of the note—pocketed them slyly—and when he got into his den, pasted them together on a slip of tea paper. This fragmentary note—which, if genuine, would have been due more than two years ago—never saw the light until Clark finally left the Island for California. Then Amos used it, to bolster up his credit, as a bona fide security for money; and although he never asked me for payment of it, for very good reasons, he applied to nearly every lawyer in the City to commence a prosecution for the amount of the note; but they all threw the worthless thing aside, as evidence of an outrageous attempt to obtain money under false pretences. Amos, however, becoming desperate in his career of villainy, unterrified by the prospect of the gallows, or at least an immediate return to jail—and pressed for payment of sundry claims by his unfortunate brother-in-law, one James Fergusson, whom he has swindled in various ways—transfers to this poor dupe the torn note. The dupe hands it to the Hon. E. Palmer—tells him, no doubt, a plausible story; and the Hon. gentleman, after making a personal application to me on the subject, and requested by me to take proceedings against me in order to settle the matter—issues a common process for the amount of the note. This process was enclosed to me in a polite letter from Mr. Palmer, on Monday afternoon, the 5th inst. The article in reference to Amos's release from jail was written on the previous evening, but not by me; and was in print before I received Mr. Palmer's note with the enclosed process—not supposing that any professional gentleman would entertain such a case. Amos says he instituted the prosecution. All I know is, that it is commenced in Fergusson's name; but as Amos is in the practice of using the names of other people to cover his own villainy, his connection with this affair is quite characteristic.

This convicted felon and unhanged forger says that members of the late Government used his services as a Broker to negociate paper for them, and states that I often applied to him for similar services. This is a double lie. Amos's character was known to every member of the late Government as that of a professional swindler and blackleg, and I am quite sure that none of them ever wanted or employed his services. As for myself, I knew him for the first time in July, 1858. An officer of the present Government introduced him to my notice at that time as a person who was in the habit of negotiating Bills; and the officer referred to and myself, having to meet a joint engagement, Amos volunteered to discount paper for us to any amount we wanted. We gave him a note for £75, at his own request—we only wanting £50, and he pressing us to give him one for £100—and as soon as he got it, he sold it to Mr. Henry Hazzard, pocketed the money—Mr. Haszard put it in the Bank—and we had to pay it there to the last shilling. The person whose name was connected with mine in the note, succeeded in getting a few pounds from the unhanged forger on account of this fraud; but he still owes us fifty six pounds, obtained under the most false pretences; and he would have been in the hands of the Sheriff long ago for this amount, only that he was imprisoned for a crime for which many a better man forfeited his life. The Government having, however, pardoned the scoundrel, and he having come out in support of the Administration, I have some chance of getting my money,—at all events I shall employ the Sheriff to assist me in recovering it. Since the time Amos cheated me and my friend out of the £75 note referred to, I have never had any transactions with him. It was the first and last of my dealings, in my own name, with this unhanged forger.

The Islander wishes to make it appear that Amos's release from jail was petitioned for by a considerable number of persons opposed to the present Government. That may be true or false; at all events, we all know how easily petitions of that kind are got up and signed. But it is a matter of no consequence who petitioned for the fellow's release. The fact does not make his crimes any the less numerous or odious He was clearly convicted of forgery in one case, and ought to have been made to serve out his full term of imprisonment; besides that, if the officers of the Government had done their duty to society, Amos would have been arraigned, tried, convicted, and punished for other forgeries. I know of a dozen cases of crime of this description that can be established as clearly as the sun at noonday against him; and the Attorney General cannot be ignorant of what is known to the whole community as well as to myself. Amos, however, is a supporter of the Government, and that secures him some degree of immunity. That fact, too, no doubt reconciles him to bury his genius for fraud in a small community like ours He would do a magnificent business, in his peculiar line, in the midst of a large, rough, bustling, and lawless society, such as may be found in the Western States or California; but he has sense enough to know that his operations might be rudely and suddenly interrupted in that wide field by the visit of a "Vigilance Committee," who, despising his "political support," would leave him dangling from a limb of the nearest tree, as a caution to all professional robbers that pester society and cheat the gallows of its legitimate due.
