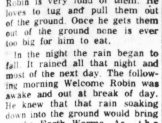
What Was Reddy Doing?

Before you judge be sure you know
That what you think is really so.
—Reddy Fox.

For a long time there had been no rain. The ground was very, very dry. For days and days Welcome Robin had been looking for Earth Worms and Reddy Fox found one. You know, Earth Worms are those long reddish-brown Worms that live in the ground. Welcome Robin is very fond of them. He loves to tug and pull them out of the ground. Once he gets them out of the ground none is ever too big for him to eat.

In the night the rain began to fall. It rained all that night and most of the next day. The following morning Welcome Robin was awake and out at break of day. He knew that that rain soaking down into the ground would bring up the Earth Worms. As the ground had grown drier and drier the Worms had gone down deeper and deeper. Now they would come up to the surface again. They like to come out after a rain and no one knows this better than does Welcome Robin.



"I wonder where that fellow is going?" thought Welcome Robin.

Now there was one place where many Worms lived in the ground. Welcome Robin had had many a breakfast there. He headed straight for that place.

He stopped in the top of a tall tree to greet the morning as he loves to do. "Cheer-up! Cheer-up! Cheer-up!" sang Welcome Robin. He was as happy as he sounded. He was just getting ready to move on when he saw Reddy Fox coming out of the Old Pasture. Reddy was trotting along as if he knew exactly where he was going. He wasn't stopping to hunt for Grasshoppers or Mice or anything else.

"I wonder where that fellow is going?" thought Welcome Robin. "I wonder if he is out after breakfast the way I am." He watched for a few minutes and then he realized that Reddy was going in the same direction as he, ing in the same direction as he, to get where the Worms were. He waited there in the top of the tree to watch Reddy.

Reddy went straight to the place where Welcome Robin expected to find the Worms. Reddy sat down. Welcome Robin remained right where he was. It wouldn't do to go down on the ground near enough for Reddy to catch him. He would just wait until Reddy moved on.

Reddy seemed to be watching something. For a few minutes he sat perfectly still. Then he took a quick step or two forward and picked up something. He was eating. Welcome Robin could see that, although he couldn't see what Reddy was eating.

"Now, what could Reddy have found to eat out there?" said Welcome Robin.

Just then Reddy repeated the performance. He took a quick step and picked something up. Welcome Robin began to get impatient. He wanted his breakfast and he was sure he could get it right where Reddy was. If Reddy would only get out of the way. Finally he flew over and lighted in the ground a short distance from Reddy.

"Good morning, Reddy Fox," said he. "What are you doing over here?"

"I'm getting my breakfast," replied Reddy.

Welcome Robin tried to be polite. "That's good," said he. "May I ask what you are eating for breakfast?"

Rocket Bases At Sea Suggested

PARIS (CP)—A United States congressman suggested Wednesday that submerged or floating platforms sprinkled in the seas as nuclear rocket bases could be NATO's answer to Soviet missiles.

Democratic Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington expounded on his revolutionary idea as a press conference after U.S. admiral Jeraudi Wright, NATO naval commander, said all NATO powers should have atomic submarines.

Wright told NATO's parliamentary assembly the United States should modify the McMahon Act on nuclear secrecy to clear the way for equipping allied navies with submarines such as the Nautilus. So far only France among the allies is building an atomic submarine.

Jackson said with floating platforms NATO's European members "could take their retaliatory capacity and move it way out to sea."

He said the Russians would have to concentrate on finding and destroying the platforms, instead of allied home installations and populations.

Atomic submarines able to move about and escape detection for long periods would make ideal platforms, he added, and the Russians "would waste billions of dollars worth of equipment and technology" in meeting the new strategy.

IDEA IS PROJECT

Jackson, chairman of the military applications subcommittee of the joint U.S. congressional committee on atomic energy, said he had been working on the platform idea since April.

The idea, he added, is especially adaptable to the situations of Britain, Norway and the Netherlands with their seafaring traditions, but could also be used by other NATO members.

He coupled his statements about seagoing platforms with the assertion that the U.S. strategic Air Command's retaliatory forces would be en route to destroy Russia before the first Soviet rocket could hit New York.

SAC as of today could knock out the Soviet Union after the first blow at the West, he asserted.

"They (the Russians) would never hit twice."

But, he added: "Will this be true three years from now? Unless we take new initiatives it probably would not be. But we have the talent and the knowhow to get ahead and stay ahead and I am sure we will."

Jackson did not explain how SAC could be off on a retaliatory mission so quickly.

There have been reports that SAC has an "orange alert" system to flash the word from its Omaha, Neb., headquarters to its world-girdling bases if a Soviet attack started.

Asked about this, Jackson said "I didn't say anything about any flash system."

SOVIETS MASS SHIPS

Wright told the conference that Russia is building a huge navy designed to isolate North America from Europe and destroy NATO.

He added: "All our war plans are prepared, are approved and are ready."

His Atlantic Command's first and most important task, he said, is "the employment of naval atomic forces against the forces of Soviet naval power. This we do with the striking fleet including aircraft carriers and other forces with an atomic capability."

Wright said Russia has developed the largest peacetime fleet in history.

"The clear inference to me is that the Soviets in building this fleet do not visualize a short war," he said.

Besides using naval atomic forces against the Soviet fleet, Wright said, the allied naval command must carry anti-submarine defences into the narrow reaches of the North Atlantic. It also must give close protection to shipping, protect coastlines against missile-launching submarines and ensure that North America does not become cut off

Lawyer Seeks Ruling On Papers Seized In Tax Raid

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto lawyer seeks an Ontario Supreme Court ruling on whether documents seized from his Toronto offices during a recent raid by RCMP and national revenue department officers can be examined by income tax officials.

Mr. Justice J. L. McLennan adjourned until Nov. 22 application brought before him Friday by Samuel Ciglen who contends the documents are confidential.

Mr. Ciglen is taking the action to prevent the documents being examined bon the grounds they are privileged—confidential correspondence between himself and clients.

The hearing will be held in camera.

In an affidavit Mr. Ciglen said the officers entered his offices and seized "by force" the documents, books, records and papers of his clients and "clients of my firm."

CLAIMS PRIVILEGE

He said that prior to the seizure he claimed "on behalf of my clients a solicitor-client privilege" and obtained a written agreement with Francis J. Dubrule, in charge of the raid, that the solicitor - client privilege would be determined.

With his application, Mr. Ciglen had filed the authorization for the raid, signed by Mr. Justice Joseph T. Thorson, president of the Exchequer Court of Canada.

The raid was authorized to seize anything which "may afford evidence as to the violation of any provision of the Income War Tax Act, the Income Tax Act or regulations thereunder."

An Ottawa source said at the time the case might involve possibly $10,000,000 and operations over a period of years.

CLC Supports Seamen In Opposing Ships Transfer

MONTREAL (CP)—The 1,100,000 - member Canadian Labor Congress and two large international labor organizations joined the striking Seafarers' International Union (CLC) Thursday in its fight against transfer of eight Canadian National Steamships freighters to Trinidad.

Canadian SIU Director Hal C. Banks announced the CLC decision following conferences with congress President Claude Jodoin in a downtown hotel.

The CLC is parent body to about 90 per cent of organized Canadian labor.

Mr. Banks identified the two international groups as the International Transport Workers' Federation and the International Trades Union Council.

The publicity-shy CNS announced Saturday plans to transfer the registry of its eight-vessel West Indies fleet on grounds of high wage demands by the SIU.

ANTI-STRIKE MOVE?

"As far as we are concerned this is pure and simple strike-breaking on the part of the government," Mr. Banks said. "The issue is fundamental and we do not believe it is economy."

His statement said:

"The CLC and the entire Canadian labor movement is backing us in this fight to transfer these ships.

"I have just finished conferences with Mr. Jodoin and other members of the CLC executive council and was informed that the CLC is joining us on this stand.

"We also have assurances from the International Transport Workers' Federation and the International Trades Union Council that no affiliate of these world-wide bodies will work these Canadian ships if they are scabbed out."

A major result of the CLC decision to back the seamen's union is expected to be the refusal of longshoremen to handle the ships in Canadian ports.

"We also have a guarantee from unions representing mates and masters and engineers that they will not sail with scabs," the SIU director said.

"If the 310 seamen employed by the company are thrown on unemployment insurance rolls, it will cost the Canadian people $80,000 a year in unemployment insurance."

SAYS DEMANDS LESS

"In comparison, the five-per-cent wage difference now separates the company and union in its negotiations will only amount to $24,000. This in our opinion is not sound economy."

CNS offered a 13-per-cent wage increase but the union is asking a 20-per-cent hike. An able-bodied seaman now receives about $204 a month on CNS freighters.

The seamen rejected the CNS wage offer in a vote Wednesday.

Censors Lose Appeal Case

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court dealt movie censors another blow Tuesday.

Because two of its own decisions which said "sex and obscenity are not synonymous," the court struck down a ban by the Chicago police censor board on The Game of Love, a French film.

It did so unanimously and without hearing the customary oral arguments. The action reversed a decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Chicago which had upheld the ban on the movie.

Beyond saying it was reversing the Appellate Court, the Supreme Court's brief unsigned opinion cited a decision issued last June 24.

In that decision the court upheld federal and state laws banning obscene literature which it defined as "material which deals with sex in a manner appealing to the prurient interest." However, the decision added this comment:

"The portrayal of sex, e.g., in art, literature and scientific works, is not sufficient reason to deny material the constitutional protection of freedom of speech and press. . . .

"The fundamental freedoms of speech and press have contributed greatly to the development and well-being of our free society and are indispensable to its continued growth. Ceaseless vigilance is the watchword to prevent their erosion by Congress or by the states. . . ."
