Strange But True

awakened her. Stranger than fiction, is it not?

Insects that fly by night are color-blind, by human standards, their eyes being sensitive only to blue light.

One of the later hobbies is "sound hunting." By using a tape recorder, the hobbyist is able to derive favorable conditions to capture strange sounds from the animal and insect kingdom. Hobbyists exchange their recordings and thus help each other build up extensive libraries of them.

One sound hobbyist hung a sensitive microphone from his balcony one moonlight night to capture the chirping notes of crickets. Next day he listened to the tape, and lo and behold he heard a Romeo proclaiming marriage to his love, and her refusal.

Paris police were able to solve a crime because an amateur recorder—while listening to the playback of his tape, distinctly heard two men plotting a crime.

He notified the police, and the criminals were caught in their own trap. So, you see, sound hunting has great possibilities and may lead to new developments in almost every field of human endeavour. Parents could tap the conversations between their loved ones, and their neighbors' son, Bill. Jealous wives would be able to get the low-down on what goes on at the office between husband and his secretary after business hours.

Indeed, there would be no limit to what one might hear if one used his imagination and the tape recorder to capture the strange sounds, peculiar voices, and chants that are forever beating their wings against the air waves.

"The greatest thing that can be said of man, no matter how much he has achieved, is that he has kept his record clean."

It sounds ridiculous and almost incredible, yet it is a fact that a certain farmer in this island made a deposit for his wife in a bank and handed her a cheque book so that she could pay her bills without bothering him for money. One day the bank had to notify her that her account was overdrawn. Hurrying to the bank she said to the teller: "There must be a mistake, because there are a number of unused cheques in my book."

The motto of this little story is: Keep your pen sheathed unless you are absolutely certain about that document you are called on to sign. By too free use of the pen, many persons have signed away their property and found themselves without food or shelter. Read carefully every document before signing it. If you don't understand its language, don't sign it at all.

Circumstances sometimes put rich clients into the hands of lawyers and doctors, put commonplace ministers in big churches, and place the sons of the rich at the head of large armies and corporations even when they have only average ability and scarcely any qualifications, while poor lads with lots of gray matter, and plenty of experience often have to fight against almost insurmountable obstacles for years to obtain ordinary situations.

On the other hand, the result of the game does not rest with fate or destiny, but with you. We hear a great deal about "fate and luck" but would fate or luck have availed men like Churchill and Roosevelt if they were not ready for Lady Opportunity when she passed their way?

Luck and fate may be likened to the tide. The resolute folk row with it to reach their goal; they row against it if it flows the other way.

We are supposed to have freedom of speech, but try to exercise to the full extent your right of free speech and see how quickly you'll get into trouble.

A duck owned by Albert Herman of Salt Lake City, ducks water every time it can. Put it in a pond and it paddles out as fast as it can and stays out.

Two new members were added and two visitors were present. During the business period, Miss Louise Callbeck introduced a new seal: "Put Christ into Christmas." Orders were given by the members for those seals. The program consisted of a reading by Miss Phyllis Britten, and 20 facts about the danger of alcohol were read, one by each member.

Mr. and Mrs. Earle MacMurdo, North Bedeque, were in Halifax last week-end visiting with their daughters who is a medical student at Dalhousie University. On their way home on Sunday evening, they met with a car accident. When nearing a bridge not far from Truro an approaching car led Mr. MacMurdo to dim his lights. But the lights went dead and the car ran up on the bridge railing and overturned in the middle of the road. Mrs. MacMurdo was considerably cut about the head and face. She was taken to the hospital where several stitches were required to close the lacerations. Mr. MacMurdo escaped with little injury. The car was somewhat damaged and was left behind while Mr. MacMurdo returned home. Mrs. MacMurdo spent several days in hospital. It is unfortunate that such an accident should happen when the car Mr. MacMurdo drove was a new one he had bought only a few days before going to Halifax. —B.Q.

miles in length. Mr. William Wells, who is a son of the late William Wells of Alberton (The Dock), left home at the age of seventeen stayed for some time in Portland and Boston, and took the advice of Horace Greely and went West. His material success is an object lesson to all young islanders who pursue their fortunes abroad.

Mr. Wells is blessed with a genial and jovial disposition and a saving sense of humor. He takes great pleasure in the company of friends of his youth, and enjoys reminiscences of the simple life of early days.

The urgency of business required plane travel most all the time, and he has had some trying experiences and narrow escapes—once being marooned on a frozen lake for two days, near Fort Resolution where his company had a contract. At present on a business trip to Ottawa, which required three days to finally, he took advantage of the interim to visit the home folks. His prestige and genial manner of address puts him in the category of "first name friends" with many prominent men of affairs in the West and at Ottawa. —K.
