NEW YORK

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market declined for the fourth straight session Thursday but prices recovered well above their lows when Wall Street apparently got wind of the fact that President Johnson was going to propose some measures to solve the problem of tight money and high interest rates.
The market was at its worst around mid-day when the Dow Industrials were down to an all-time low of 10.41 at 766.96—the lowest closing bottom of 767.03 reached in the hectic session of Aug. 29. Suddenly the market turned around.
The mere fact that Johnson was calling the conference led many to believe that the president was going to attack the money problem, the biggest cloud on the stock market horizon.
After the market close, this turned out to be a fact.
Some analysts said one reason the market has been sliding is the administration has taken no leadership toward solving the monetary difficulties faced by business and the market.
Although some opinion was that action—any action by government—would help prices, the first reaction to President Johnson's five-point plan to combat inflation was a decline on the Pacific Coast Stock Exchange.
Glamor stocks, which have been the bouncing balls of the market, responded most conspicuously—at first to the downturn, later to the recovery.
For the list as a whole, however, losers outnumbered gain-
