CONTRACT BRIDGE

BY B. JAY BECKER

Let's see what happens if he does. He takes three rounds of hearts, ending in dummy, and leads a diamond to the king. West wins and leads a club. Declarer ruffs and leads another diamond, attempting to establish his side suit.

But when West takes the jack of diamonds and fires another club, South is finished. He ruffs with his last trump and goes down one, losing three diamonds and a club.

The proper play at trick two is a diamond from dummy. This is not a hand where declarer can afford to tackle trumps at once. There is too much danger of a trump shortage developing before the diamonds are established.

West wins with the ace and can do no better than lead a diamond. South ruffs and leads another club. South ruffs and leads a third round of diamonds. Now West is up against it. If he leads the fourth round of clubs, declarer ruffs. True, this will reduce South to only two trumps, but declarer can withstand the shortage because dummy, with three good trumps, takes charge of the outstanding hearts.

Declarer winds up losing just three diamond tricks. His 1-4 winners consist of three spades, and three trumps dummy draws, and four club tricks.

If West does not lead the fourth club, declarer wins any other return, draws trumps, and cashes the established diamonds to make ten tricks.

North dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

Opening lead—king of clubs.

The great majority of hands are played by declarer in a suit contract. Proper trump management is consequently an important factor in the play of the cards.

There is always the problem of whether to draw trumps or delay their extraction. There are hands where declarer is best advised to ignore the outstanding trumps and utilize his own trumps and dummy's to the best advantage by ruffing out losers.

The subject does not lend itself to easy generalization, and only long experience provides the answer to the variety of problems that can arise.

West led a club and dummy won with the ace. Should declarer now draw trumps?

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXE
LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints each day the code letters are different.

CENTRALIZE OFFICES

OTTAWA (CP)—Likely places to consolidate far-flung Canadian government offices in London, England, have been narrowed down to two, it was indicated Tuesday. Maj. Gen. H. A. Young, deputy minister of public works, said the search begun about a month ago may be fairly close to a final decision in another month.
