Biggest Carrier, Other War Craft Escort Queen

By GOMER JONES ABOARD SS Mermaid (Reuters) - Britain's biggest aircraft carrier and 13 other vessels of the British Mediterranean fleet swung into line Sunday to escort Queen Elizabeth into Malta.

Elizabeth, the Duke of Edinburgh, and their two children watched from the royal yacht Britannia as the warships swept up at 25 knots and passed in review. Five-year-old Prince Charles and three-year-old Princess Anne looked on excitedly as 21-gun salutes boomed out from each of the ships.

More thrills followed for the children, reunited with their parents in Tobruk, Libya, Saturday after a five-month separation while the Queen and duke made a round-the-world Commonwealth tour.

First their great-uncle, Admiral Earl Mountbatten, commander of the Mediterranean fleet, swung over to the yacht in a boat's chair from his flagship, the cruiser Glasgow.

Late in the day, the cruisers, destroyers and frigates, and the aircraft carrier Eagle were joined by three fleet submarines. As they approached the royal yacht the submarines submerged, then resurfaced abreast the Britannia.

Later, the 36,800-ton Eagle sent up her attack jet planes, and squadrons of Avenger and Skyraiders in an aerial fly-past.

Bright sun gleamed on white bow waves as the fleet approached the yacht in two lines, passing on either side of the vessel. Then both lines turned inward at speed and passed alongside the Britannia to take up their escort stations.

Earlier, Admiral Mountbatten signalled the Queen: "On behalf of all ships present, I have the honor to welcome Your Majesty and the Duke of Edinburgh back to the fleet in which His Royal Highness served as first lieutenant of the (frigate) Chequers and as captain of the (frigate) Magpie, both of whom are in the company and in whose life Your Majesty played such an active part."
