

How Can I!!!

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I reheat and serve food without any difference in flavor?
 A. There will be no difference in the flavor of warmed-over food if it is placed in the double boiler and steamed through, instead of bringing it into contact with direct heat.
 Q. How can I give a glossy appearance to slip covers when laundering?
 A. Starching them will make them more glossy and give them more body; they will keep clean longer. Never use bluing on colored or flowered slip covers.
 Q. What is a good dressing for leather-covered chairs?
 A. A good dressing for leather-covered chairs is a solution of equal parts of linseed oil and vinegar.

Magistrate: "But why did you break into this draper's shop four nights running?"
 Defendant: "I got a new dress for my wife and she made me go back and change it three times."

Fair Comment

A religious speaker was expounding on the great work of the Church to a motley crowd in Hyde Park. Some of his remarks infuriated a grimy proletarian who worked his way to the front. Looking contemptuously at the speaker, he snarled: "The Church is supposed to have existed for two thousand years and yet look at the state of the world."
 The speaker looked intently at his interrupter and said quietly: "Water has existed for two million years, yet look at the state of your face!"

BABY'S CRY IS NOT ALWAYS TEMPER

DISTINGUISH between your baby's cry of pain and cry of temper. The "pain cry" should have instant attention. For the feverish distress due to gas on stomach or bowels or those common digestive upsets, give Baby's Own Tablets at once. As one Toronto Mother reports—she finds they work every time.
 "I am the mother of nine children, three of them prize babies, and Baby's Own Tablets have been my only medicine in raising them to the healthy children they now are. As soon as my children became a little feverish I at once gave them Baby's Own Tablets and in a very short time the fever disappeared and the children were normal again."
 Equally effective for constipation, upset stomach, teething troubles and other minor ailments of babies. Quickly effective. Sweet-tasting. No "sleepy" stuff—no dulling effect. Sickness often strikes in the night. Get a package today at drug stores. Money back if you are not satisfied. 50¢.

Cook's Corner

SWEET BREAD 'N' BUTTER PICKLES

4 pounds cucumbers (25 about 4 inches long), 4 medium large onions, ½ cup coarse salt, ice cubes.
 Pickling Syrup: 1 pint distilled white vinegar, 1 cup water, 3 cups sugar, 2 teaspoons mustard seed, 2 teaspoons celery seed, ½ teaspoon turmeric.
 Scrub cucumbers thoroughly with a brush but do not soak in water. Cut tips from cucumber ends and discard. Cut into uniform ¼-½ inch slices. Cut onions in thin slices. Arrange cucumbers and onions with salt in layers in large stainless steel or enamel kettle. Place ice cubes from one tray over cucumbers and let stand for 2 hours or until salt has dissolved. Then fill kettle with cold water and drain cucumbers thoroughly, expressing all the water.
 Prepare pickling syrup by bringing vinegar, water, sugar and spices just to the boiling point. Pour over cucumbers slices in kettle, place on high heat, bring to the simmering point and cook just five minutes, or until pickles change color. Pack tightly in hot sterilized jars and seal. Keep in jar about 2 weeks before serving to develop sweet flavor, crisp texture. Serve well chilled. Makes 4 to 5 pints.

That Body Of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

SIMPLE SURGICAL OPERATIONS PREVENT DEATH FROM BLEEDING ULCER

The commonest ailment in our fighting forces is stomach disturbance because of tension, interference with the regular routine of life, strange surroundings, difference in foods and natural anxiety about loved ones. All these changes from civilian life, aside from personal danger, disturb practically every organ in the body and its workings.

The movements of the stomach walls, which churn up the food, help stomach digestive juices to flow and squeeze the food into the small intestine (duodenum), are disturbed. The opening from stomach into the small intestine is called the pylorus. Just as an ulcer can form in the stomach, so can it form in the duodenum when it is called a duodenal ulcer. A stomach or duodenal ulcer is called a peptic ulcer.

Although stomach and duodenal ulcers are being treated by diet and alkalies more than by surgery, there are still many cases in which surgery is necessary to save life. An ulcer that bleeds and continues to bleed despite diet and medical treatment may require surgical treatment.

In Kentucky State Medical Association Journal, Drs. H. E. Dorson, J. G. Webb, and D. M. Royalty report their surgical treatment of bleeding duodenal ulcer by two surgical operations, pyloroplasty, in which the pylorus, or opening from stomach into duodenum, is enlarged and its direction changed, and vagotomy, in which the vagus nerve, supplying the stomach and stomach walls is cut. These operations were performed on ten patients. The results were most satisfactory.

There were no deaths and there has been no return of the bleeding or of the ulcer symptoms for an average follow-up period of 18 months. These physicians feel that a simple, safe, and effective method of managing any type of duodenal bleeding ulcer. "It will not only control acute bleeding but also will cure the ulcer and therefore prevent further bleeding. A patient who has massive or severe bleeding should be considered an acute surgical emergency to be operated upon as soon as provision for adequate blood transfusions has been made."

Delay, hoping that a large blood vessel will stop bleeding, is dangerous.

use those names. Is that correct?

A. Yes, you should always ask permission first. And if time does not allow this, you can at least write them and tell them you have taken the liberty of using their names.

Q. How long a time should one allow to elapse before returning a first call?

A. The first call should be returned within two weeks unless there is some good reason why it cannot be done.

Q. Who is really the "head" of the dinner table, the host or the hostess?

A. The hostess.

DOROTHY DIX'S COLUMN—

Which Child?

Mother Can Take Only One On 6-Month Trip

DEAR MISS DIX: Can you help me in this matter? I simply cannot seem to make the decision alone. I am planning to visit my parents in South America for six months. That is where I come from, but I am married to an American and have two daughters, 2 and 4. I would like to take both children with me but, for financial reasons and because my husband does not want to stay alone, I can only take one. The question is—which? The 4-year-old can attend nursery school and is better able to take care of herself, but I think she would appreciate the trip more. The younger one I feel needs my attention and care.

Marjorie Nissen

would be for you to take the 2-year-old. The other child is still too young to have any appreciation of the trip and is the easier one to leave to others' care. Have a nice visit!

LOVES MARRIED MAN

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 22, single and in love with a married man four years my senior who works in the same office. His wife is also 22, they have a 3-year-old daughter, and the man will not leave his wife, although he doesn't love her, because of the child. Don't you think his wife is wrong to try to hold him?

HELEN
 ANSWER: This identical query comes up so often that I could almost have it, and the answer, set up in permanent print. However, since each questioner is convinced that she is the only woman faced with it, and since it is such an inexorably important issue, I bring it up rather frequently. The answer is: The wife has prior right to every office flirt who gets a yen for him. Furthermore, Helen, and everyone else with the same problem, you are being taken in by one of the oldest stories since Adam and Eve. Your lover has no intention whatever of leaving his wife and child. As long as you are around to feed his vanity with adoring eyes, he'll continue to fool you until another adorer comes along. Stop being a fool!
 DEAR MISS DIX: The girl I love is 39 and I am 29 and, because of this difference in age, she refuses to marry me. Do you think the marriage could be a success?
 FRED
 ANSWER: A successful, and happy, marriage depends on so many more important things than age that this point alone certainly shouldn't be the deciding factor. If you are suited to each other in background, likes and dislikes, friends, relatives, financial situation, etc., the difference in age will not matter.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am engaged to be married in the near future, and our problem is my fiancée's mother. She is in her early 40's, still working, but wants to live with us. She also has a married daughter and I feel, if she must live with one of her children, it should be the daughter—at least until we are settled.
 A. P.
 ANSWER: Your future mother-in-law is certainly too young to give up her own home and move in with a married child. This doubling up is seldom satisfactory. A woman in her 40's, earning her own living, should keep her independence.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am 18 years old and, although I have had many dates, I am now going with a boy I love dearly. He lives out of town and I only see him once a month. For some time he has asked me to kiss him, and I never have. Should I?
 JO ANN
 ANSWER: Considering your age and the fact that you are deeply

ELLEN'S DIARY

By An Island Farmer's Wife

Tomorrow? James looked ahead to his expectedly last night at retiring. Before that we had seen the stars swing low in the silver canopy of sky and watched while the moon lifted herself gracefully above a dusky hill-top. And the two lads of this place, night-clad, stopped before an upstairs window to admire the magic of moonlight along the fields. And Jamie said: "Why, it's so bright we could tread by it!" "Yes, — but everyone's tired now."

James too, took stock of the stars and moon; he had felt the light wind on his cheek before the evening had hushed it to rest. He had found in it and the sun the warrant of another harvest-day to follow. All gold the sunset was, we recall, matching the shade September tucks in gardens and hedgerows, by brook-sides, and sprinkles with lavish hand over meadows. "Now lads," he had cautioned the harvesters at parting, "let's try to get a fair-good start in the morning!"

And so it was that between this morning and the sundown, many a stook, sheaf by sheaf, each one offered with precision to Mr. A., at its head, was fed in fetching rhythm to the maw of the machine today. Nevertheless, it was yesterday afternoon the threshing first came to the place. After the pulse of it had died away at Mr. A.'s, and a wide peace for the moment had possessed the neighborhood.

Suddenly Granddaughter and Gage paused in the midst of a fascinating pastime being carried out in a lilac-shaded nook in the yard. Wordless, they listened intently and then pleased expectant smiles lit young faces. She had been mixing a cake with a womanly touch while he endeavored to keep the "various" called-for ingredients and "sugar," the milk, which was perhaps the most intriguing of all since this required a trip to a faucet in the plegery. If the flour was of sand, this was as she said with satisfied air "thoroughly sifted;" and if the raisins they used to set it apart from more ordinary bakings were only the orange-red berries of the Rowan-trees about, the egg used was no make-believe. "What an egg!" we said incredulously. "Yes, it was ours." "Yours?" she looked up. "If the hen intended it for you, do you suppose she would have laid it in the corner of our playhouse?" she asked.

"They're coming!" Gage exclaimed. Granddaughter ran to round the kittens to a place of safety... and we hurried for chips to light the supper fire. Turning then from the road to the laneway were the machines that brought this place to today's threshing "from the field." The meal-getting presents its anxieties. James came in hearing the supper hour this afternoon to announce: "We may want it after we may have supper first. I'm not certain. Anyway, Ellen, it won't hurt to have the tea down!"

And yet what a pleasant day we have had for the threshing—pleasantly warm, sunny, a light happy wind, the hours embroidered with gossamer thread and laced with crickets' tunes!
 Until tomorrow — — — Diary — — — Good-night. . . .

London Fall Fashions Feature Straight Lines

LONDON—(CP)—Men who like women in wasp-waisted, skirted dresses with fitted bodices and frothy hats are in for a big disappointment.

Miss 1953 is on her way back to the straight, waistless look of 1928.

Recent photographs of London and Paris winter styles clearly show that the shapely "jumper suit" look with draped bust and hip emphasis is tenaciously holding a front place in fashion—despite initial unpopularity.

The post-war styles with un-padded shoulders, microscopic waists and rustling skirt fullness introduced by Christian Dior, have been whittled down to such as the Schiaparelli hobble-skirted, moss-green suit with bolero-backed jacket fronted by enormous hanging lapels of beaver lamb.

Slowly Dying
 So far, the big-skirted look is making a slow exit—but worse is yet to come, fashion writers predict.

They say that such "surprise" outfits as the black cocktail suit with dead-straight skirt and unshaped, box jacket shown by Norman Hartnell, gives the shape of things to come. This unromantic suit with jet fringing at skirt hem and jacket is so different from the rustling femininity of Hartnell's royal ball gowns.

It seems that whether or not anybody likes it, the straight silhouette is on the way back. Since the 18th century, dresses have alternated from tiny-waisted crinolines to straight skirts with waists coming anywhere from under the bust to the hips, and back again.

The stately swan look of the 1900s gave place to the hobble skirts of 1910, followed by the tunic look of 1915 and the Dresden shepherdess style of 1916, and from the wide skirts of 1916, it was an easy swing to the waistless, oriental styles of the early 1920s.

Back to 1928

Now we're at it again. Skirts may be longer than in 1928, but the unwaisted jackets, slim skirts and short-cut hairstyles are not so different. Even the cap-style hats of the present day are at

For Tomorrow

A DAY of definitely "mixed influences" in astrological terminology. There will be unusual commotion, excitement, surprise and challenges, incited by potent forces and compelling situations, in which events, contacts and sudden predicaments combine to tax the ingenuity, good sense and shrewd judgment. An uprooting and upheaving force, reacting on personal and business life, with home, social, and practical matters complicated and of such importance and magnitude as to challenge or mystify. Subtle as well as open conflicts must be untangled from a maelstrom of involved vital factors.

For the Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year that is unpredictable and challenging. There will be many angles, contacts and commitments demanding shrewd, intelligent and responsible judgment. Understanding and management. There are strange and subtle factors to be brought out into the open for sound judgment. Under sudden crises it is imperative that the right moves be summarily made, lest the denouement be confusion.

Those born on this day may have an involved, powerful and exciting life of intrigue and high adventure.

up-to-date version of similar 1920 styles.

In the recent collections a typical, unattractive straight style is a beige tweed suit by Balenciaga of Paris, its casual unfitted jacket buttoned from neck to waist and fringed at foot. The skirt is tight and tapering to the calf.

One of the smartest, waistless styles is the big-shouldered gaucho jacket shown in London by La-chasse and featured in Paris by Bruyere as the poncho jacket. This makes a smart casual top to straight-skirted suits and dresses should be a winner on the winter fashion rails.
