MR. AND MRS. RICHARD JENKINS

Young Couple Plight Troth In Candlelight Ceremony

A pretty wedding was solemnized recently at Pownal United Church, when Kathryn Gail, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sheidow, became the bride of Richard Arthur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Jenkins, Pownal. The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. T.R. Goudge.

The bride entered the Church on the arm of her father to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March played by the church organist, Mrs. Edward Wood, who also accompanied Miss Glenda MacKenzie as she sang "O Perfect Love" before the ceremony and "I'll Walk Beside You" during the signing of the register.

The bride wore a floor length gown of white peau de soie fitted bodice, full skirt with portrait neckline and long pointed sleeves. Her veil of tulle illusion fell from a crescent of pearls and crystals. She carried a cascade bouquet of gold roses nd wore cultured pearls and earrings, a gift of the groom.

Attending the bride, as matron of honor was her sister-in-law, Mrs. Douglas Sheidow, who wore a blue nylon over satin taffeta dress. Her bridesmaids were Marjorie Jenkins, sister of the groom, and Janet Jones, cousin of the bride, who were gowned in blue and pink dresses, with matching shoes, and white pill box head pieces. They carried bouquets of blue and white carnations. Darrell Jenkins, the groom's brother, was best man. The ushers were Douglas Sheidow and David Smith.

Mrs. Sheidow chose for her daughter's wedding, a pastel green suit and her corsage was of green and white carnations. The groom's mother was attired in a blue lace dress, her corsage was of white carnations. Following the ceremony a reception for one hundred guests was held at the Charlottetown Hotel. The bride's table was centered with a three tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom.

The master of ceremonies was Mr. H. P. Smith, uncle of the bride. A toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Edison Smith, uncle of the bride, and responded to by the groom, who proposed a toast to the bridesmaids, responded to by Darrell Jenkins. Telegrams were received from Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sheidow, New York, Miss Evelyn Sheidow, Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Winston Smith, Ontario. Out of the province guests attending were Mr. Norman Sheidow and Miss Ann McClatchie, Delhi, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Smith Kentville; David Smith, Montreal, and Walter Smith, Fredericton. In charge of the guest book was Mrs. Donald Smith.

For travelling the bride wore a dress of blue wool with a coat of light beige mohair with brown accessories. Following the reception the bride and groom left on a honeymoon trip through the Maritime provinces. They are now residing in Pownal.

ELLEN'S DIARY

We Descend To Common Places Of Our Daily Lives

"A Happy Easter!" we say.

And the wish, yours and ours, echoes in this, its season around the whole earth. We hear it. And the Easter sun smiles, and there comes that seasonal joy to our hearts. Now indeed, for mankind, is the world hopefully "made new."

"When the last Easter music has melted away" one reminds us, "when the last Easter garlands are withered, and from the mount of our Easter exaltation, we descend to the valleys and the commonplaces of our daily lives, let this be our ceaseless joy: that Providence is ever with us. He, who year in and year out sends the shower and the sunbeam, dresses highway and byway with beauty, from the dogwood to the goldenrod, from the green leaf to the brown, will not forget the least of us. And the same Springtime, over and over is sent."

The same warming winds, the sparkle of frost at night, the thawing by day. Baring fields, firming paths . . . and April's snowflurries.

"If we didn't get the like of these," Granddaughter observed this morning noticing from a window a flurry restless in the valley, "the nice days would come."

"It would be a queer April," James offered, "if it failed to give us some snow."

"We accept it," we said, "knowing that it is the new snow that helps take away the old."

"Oh, we've had a good winter. I've enjoyed it. But somehow I wish now that the year would get on with the spring," she smiled.

"This College-term is spending away," we remembered.

"It surely is!" she nodded. "Just a few more weeks - too few, when I think of our Finals, and the holidays are here!"

She tied a scarf about her hair, turned up the collar of her jacket and went then down to lane's end, on the way to her classes.

Because the younger farmer was miserable today, "fetched" unkindly by a cold which kept him indoors. Mack and his grandfather must take over the farm-work. So busy they were at the feeding, and the cleaning of stables, and all the fetching and carrying that goes with the chores.

It was good that Jamie, an able chap, came by to assist them, to assume the heavier tasks.

"If," Mack reported, not unhappily, "the calves would just wait until Dad gets back on the job. But we get one straightened away here, and another is being born there! And such pretty little fellows too," he smiled, "all sleek and smart."

All in all, however, the week was pleasant here on this Island farm. . .

And the Easter Day nears. Sunrise services, there will be. In Churches, the Easter hymns will reflect its joy. How lovely the flowers - and the very miracle of it all. And all because from a sealed tomb in an eastern garden, a gravestone was now rolled away.

"Egyptian tombs hold priceless things,
Scepters, and crowns and rings,
And ornaments of cunning skill
To humor the imperial will
Of mummied potentates.
Full tombs,
Great corridors and rooms,
To tell of ancient powers, and high estates.
And has an empty tomb, no glory shed?
'He is not here; He is risen' angels said."

Until Monday — — Diary— Good-night. . .

MARY HAWORTH

Given Courage To Leave Incompatible Husband

Dear Mary Haworth: In case nobody else mentions it, I'd like to take this moment to express my appreciation of your column.

I am sick of the gibberish in the other advice columns, most of which lean to the theory that a woman is a jerk if she can't make her marriage succeed.

Then suddenly I discovered your column. And one day you wrote, in effect, that a woman is a coward who clings to a lousy marriage as if there were no alternative. I said to myself, "here is a woman with her feet on the ground."

I spent 16 years being suffocated in a wrong marriage, trying to transform it. I ran the gamut of specialist counselling; I produced children; I moved with my husband to different parts of the country. Ever hopeful that new developments would straighten us out. Nothing did. Finally I mustered the guts — the only word for it) to pack up the children and leave. Today I am not happy; but I am happier than I had been for years. I am lonely; but lonely in peace. And if anyone were to tell me "You must go back to your husband," I would prefer simply to die.

Surprisingly enough, I don't hate or even dislike him. In many respects he is a fine person, but not for me. He gives me nothing and I ask nothing of him except that he stay out of my life. I left him not to play around but simply to call my soul my own. So thanks for your concrete answers. E.A.

Dear E. A.: I am glad you think well of my writings; but I doubt that they ever won anybody to a course of action that he or she wasn't facing towards already.

In all probability you seized upon a particular column or viewpoint of mine and used it as fuel for a drastic change of direction, largely because it suddenly made you clearly acquainted with certain thoughts and feelings of your own, that long had been struggling to claim your whole - hearted allegiance.

I hope indeed that you are on the path to peace at last. But may I suggest that you double-check, just to be sure, by reading Wingfield Hope's book "Life Together" (Sheed and Ward).

M. H.

Dear Mary Haworth: I am one person who doesn't think it is laughable for people to go to church. Insofar as our great non-church-going president Abraham Lincoln was concerned, perhaps if he had been in church that Good Friday evening, instead of at the theater, he might not have been shot. C.G.

Dear Mary Haworth: Count me as one who feels the need to worship God actively at least once a week in a public gathering, in a building that has been consecrated to just that purpose. And with kindred souls who feel as I do.

Regrettably, only those who have and share this experience can testify to its rewards.

Quite aside from the blessings derived which the unbelievers miss, I am fearful for our country if the majority of our citizens should feel as some of your cities do, namely, that Sabbath church-going is a meaningless exercise.

Would that they had studied the history of civilization and knew that human evolution always has been guided by man's response, through loving obedience, to God's laws.

God bless you; and may you continue to give light and truth. Sincerely, T.F.

Here's Casserole Dish Straight From Persia

ONE of the most heart-warming sights I saw in Tehran was a crowd of rosy-cheeked school children dressed in western-type clothes, the boys wearing visor caps, streaming from a school building swinging books for homework from a leather strap. The youngsters in both public and private schools can choose either of two courses, Persian-English or Persian-French, which, on graduation, makes them bilingual, a great asset in the integrating world of today.

While in Persia we visited Isfahan, an hour away by plane, to see the mosques (Moslem churches), the most magnificent in the world.

FABULOUS LUNCHEON

Luncheon was served in a royal palace.

Tall windows inlaid in restrained designs with stained glass filtered in daylight. The tables, equipment, food and everything needed was brought from the Royal Tehran Hilton. A native chef roasted a whole lamb; the executive hotel Chef de Cuisine prepared fabulous kebabs which we will describe later on.

The kitchen was a floor below the dining room and the stairs were high, steep and rugged, which posed a problem for serving. Very cleverly, a waiter was stationed on each step and the plates and foods were passed from hand to hand up to the dining room.

IMPORTANT UNIVERSITY

One could not stay long in Persia without becoming acquainted with the University of Tehran which plays an important part in the country's education and culture.

In an alcove is a Memorial Library dedicated to the memory of Joseph Saul Kornfeld, American Ambassador to Iran, 1922-1924, who negotiated the first American-Persian oil contract and is the man who introduced Persian melons to the United States.
