Possible U.S. Tire Order May Lead To Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is considering ordering U.S. tire-makers to tell the public of automobile tire hazards, a government source says.

The possibility of a "disclosure of hazards" order, described by a spokesman here, arose after the FTC listened to some highly explosive testimony during a two-day hearing in January.

Such an order could touch off a controversy as intense as the furore over whether the tobacco industry should be required to display warnings that habitual smoking may injure health.

Senator Gaylord Nelson (Dem., Wis.) said in a speech prepared for the senate Thursday the 800-page transcript of the tire safety hearings documents a "national scandal in automobile tires," and should be made public.

Nelson said the transcript, which the FTC does not intend to print, includes expert testimony that:

1. Many new cars come equipped with tires inadequate even for normal use.

2. Six-passenger sedans with big tanks are tested for tire purposes with only three passengers and no luggage.

3. Sizes stamped on tires do not tell the actual size and were never intended to.

4. Ply-rating labels have no understandable meaning."

5. There is no way a motorist can choose the right tire.

"It (the transcript) indicates that untold thousands of people are buying fine new cars, loading them up with children and baggage and setting out across the country in the belief that they are perfectly safe," he said.

"Actually, many of them are sitting on a time-bomb."

Tire manufacturers and independent tire dealers testified at the hearing that the terms "first line," "second line" and "third line" mean something different to each manufacturer.

Halves Of Egyptian Statue Located After Long Search

NEW YORK (AP) — About 2,500 years ago an Egyptian chiselled an alabaster statue of Selma-Tawy-Tefnakht, a power in the court of King Psamtik II.

He depicted the handsome official sitting cross-legged, erect but relaxed, his hands resting on the calves of his legs, and wearing a big grin on his face.

Some time in antiquity the statue was broken in half at the abdomen and elbows.

The two halves were separated for centuries, until Bernard Bothmer of the Brooklyn Museum got Sema-Tawy-Tefnakht back together again.

The top half was purchased in 1951 by the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts in Richmond, on Bothmer's advice. He told them he'd keep an eye out for the lower half.

SAW OLD PICTURES

In 1952, while looking through some old pictures in a Paris library, his eyes lit up when he spotted a picture of some alabaster crossed legs.

He figured it might be what he was seeking. But the photo was taken in 1934, and where were the crossed legs now?

Bothmer looked in Egypt and checked dealers and collectors for a half-dozen years. Finally a woman Egyptologist told him she had seen alabaster legs in a home in Luxor, Egypt.

But it took four years of bargaining with the owner, Egyptian dealers and the Egyptian government before the legs could be purchased and shipped to New York.

Bothmer still wasn't certain the two halves would fit.

He put them together and now he's grinning as broad as Sema-Tawy-Tefnakht.

The restored statue goes on exhibit in Richmond April 2.

Work Pushed On New Mine Near Timmins

NEW YORK (CP) — Work to bring Texas Gulf Sulphur Company's giant base - metal find near Timmins, Ont., into production in 1966 is progressing rapidly and on schedule, the company's annual report says.

"Plans now are well advanced for the open-pit mine, ore concentrator and related facilities to begin production in 1966. The concentrator is being designed so that its intial production capacity of 2,000,000 tons of ore a year can be readily expanded to 3,000,000 tons, or about 9,000 tons a day.

This first phase will require a multi-million-dollar capital investment and will produce metal concentrates to be refined by custom smelters."

The strike, 12 miles north of Timmins, has been valued at $2,000,000,000. The ore contains zinc, copper and silver.

The report says the second phase of the operation will be to build a smelter — a major capital investment to be considered when the mine is in production.

The economics involved in determining the right location and method of smelting must be thoroughly investigated. Characteristics of the concentrates and byproduct disposal will be important factors.

BIG FARMINGPAYS

The U.S. department of agriculture says big farms make up 22 per cent of the industry and produce 72 per cent of all farm products.

The department said the total insurance in effect at the end of last year was $62,673,000,000, an increase of 10.5 per cent or $5,869,000,000 over the year-earlier. Of the amount in force at the end of 1964, ordinary insurance amounted to $38,218,000,000, group insurance to $23,660,000,000 and industrial insurance to $795000,000.

Canadian companies carried $43,210,000,000 of the total. British companies $2,706,000,000 and other foreign countries $16,757,000,000.

Robichaud In Dark On Fish Plant

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Robichaud told the Commons he knew of no negotiations with Japanese interests concerning the establishment of a fish plant in the Atlantic provinces.

Lloyd R. Crouse (PC—Queens-Lunenburg) said there have been suggestions Japanese interests will build a fish plant. He wanted to know whether the government plans to allow foreign fishing vessels to land fish in Canada for processing and resale.

Mr. Robichaud said no foreign trawlers are permitted to land fish in Canada and no thought is being given to changing this.

Life Insurance Sales Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Life Insurance sold in Canada last year totalled $7,803,000,000, an increase of 12.5 per cent over 1963, the federal department of insurance said here.

In a preliminary report of insurance business last year, the

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Opening lead—four of clubs.

The advantages and disadvantages of bidding psychics have been argued among good players for many years without a unanimous conclusion being reached. But right or wrong, like it or not, the psychic does add spice to the game, as demonstrated by this hand which occurred in the match between Italy and the United States in 1938.

West (Sidney Silodor playing with George Rapee) opened the bidding with a diamond. Of course he knew he lacked the values for an opening bid, but Silodor hoped that this experienced pair would double his worthy opponents (Avarelli and Belladonna) to wind up in the wrong contract.

The famous Italian pair got to three notrump and Avarelli wound up with twelve tricks for a score of 600 points. The best final contract is debatable, but the Italian pair stopped conservatively at three notrump.

At the second table, where this writer (South) was playing with John Crawford, the bidding went:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥
Pass	3 ♥	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♦	Pass	6 ♥

There is considerable doubt whether six hearts is the best contract with the combined North-South cards, but, luckily, I made the slam with an overtrick for a score of 1,460 points.

The Italian West could have defeated the contract had he led a spade, the suit North opened the bidding with.

But West made the more natural lead of a diamond, and making the slam was now as easy as pie. I took the diamond with the jack, cashed three rounds of clubs, discarding two spades, and then played a low heart. When the king appeared, I was able to claim all the tricks.

The United States gained 770 points on the deal, but whether the American team earned them or not is strictly a matter of
