

THE DAILY EXAMINER.

JULY 5, 1895.

THE OLD METHODS.

As well may the leopard desert his spots as a corrupt government its methods of corruption. Reports come to us from Prince County, where a partial election is in full swing, that the local member of the Executive and the Commissioner of Public Works are quite familiar figures in a district where they were seldom or never seen before, and that every old bridge and prospect road is made to do service in the "plan of campaign" which is expected to carry the day for the Government. In all decency, with the prestige of power and an overwhelming majority at his beck and call, with the late representative, Senator Arsenault, away at Ottawa, with a candidate covered with innumerable scars and much Opposition glory, after repeated defeats, Premier Peters might safely allow the new Conservative candidate, Mr. L. A. Arsenault, on the strength of his political principles, to contest the Third District with Mr. Stephen Gallant, his nominee and henchman and a worthy and apt disciple of his master in the use of human devices. Time was when such brazen and corrupt tactics as are now being employed in Egnont Bay would secure for their employers an abundant application of tar and feathers. But so persistently have the ambassadors of the government plied their nefarious avocation, so general has been the poisoning of the well, that even in quiet country districts the Peters methods are now to a certain extent regarded as matter of fact. In the general election many rural sections took the bait, and presently we are to see if the grand old district so long represented by that true, tried and scrupulously honest Islander—Joseph Octave Arsenault—will yield to the methods of those who are now doctoring it, and return the nominee of Mr. Peters. Is there any elector of the Third District willing to share the opprobrium such an election would bring about? Is not there a capable, intelligent Acadian in the person of Lawrence Arsenault, soliciting your suffrage? He will help you to the emancipation you sigh for and represent with credit to the name the great old Arsenault seat.

THIS CANADA OURS.

The Montreal Gazette said on the first day of July:— "The Canadian Dominion today enters upon its 29th year. When it was born into national life on July 1st, 1867, there were a lot of people who predicted it could not live. The soil is growing greener, the roots of their grievances are being cut, the Dominion has spread itself over and made provinces out of territories that were then a terra incognita to the world. It has lived to see secession movements collapse, has welcomed more members to the federation, has resisted foreign invasion, and suppressed domestic insurrection. It has strengthened the Empire by creating a new route between the metropolis and its Pacific dependencies, and more than any other colony, has helped to awaken in the mother land the spirit of Imperial unity. And it is going ahead on the same lines to the accomplishment of still greater results. It has the country, and the faith."

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

—How strictly proper the people of Victoria, B. C., are. A young woman from Portland, Me., went out bicycling in bloomers and wearing a man's collar and necktie. She was requested to doff the same by the authorities. She declined and the outcome is awaited with interest. —The anti-tobacco reformers of the United States do not seem to be keeping up with the procession even to say nothing of making headway. The consumption of tobacco in its various forms shows a steady increase. Last month, according to government reports, there were manufactured in the United States 365,726,447 cigars, 305,150,360 cigarettes, 22,057,443 pounds of tobacco, and more than a million pounds of snuff. This was an increase over the production during the same period last year of nearly two million cigars, half a million cigarettes, and one and a half million pounds tobacco.

NEWS NOTES.

The Connecticut House of Representatives has passed a law which prohibits the marriage of persons deaf and dumb, epileptic or epileptic, until the woman is 45 years of age. The fact that 62 literary women sat down at dinner together in London recently is viewed by a leader writer for an English daily as ominous and portentous to the future of men of literature. The University of Glasgow has received from a gentleman whose name has not been divulged an offer of £10,000, or more if necessary, to endow a chair of political economy to be named after Adam Smith, who was at one time a Glasgow professor. The inconceivable quickness with which a photograph is taken by the flash light is illustrated by the fact that Lord Raleigh has succeeded in photographing the electric solution of a soap bubble, a process which occurred between the two-hundredth and three-hundredth part of a second.

RUSSIA, CHINA AND JAPAN.

Unquestionably Russia has stolen a march upon the other great powers by coming into close and confidential relations with the Chinese government. Russia has made China a large preliminary loan, and the French government with the aid of the Paris bankers has found the money for Russia. The Trans-Siberian railway will find a route across China's territory to an advantageous harbor, and it is freely predicted that Port Arthur— which Europe has wanted Japan that she must relinquish in due season—will fall eventually and permanently into Russia's hands. But this denouement is highly disturbing to England and Germany. As for Japan, she is busily engaged in securing possession of the island of Formosa, and will surely find herself the stronger and safer for abandoning the idea of holding territory upon the mainland. She will increase her navy as rapidly as possible, and will aim at nothing short of becoming the dominant naval power of the Pacific. With the extra million dollars of indemnity money which it is expected she will obtain for consenting to evacuate Port Arthur, Japan can build or purchase a fleet which would enable her to capture Port Arthur or any other fortress on the coast with considerable ease, whenever she might find it desirable to do so.—From "The Progress of the World," in the July Review of Reviews.

THE IRISH CAUSE.

The executive council of the Irish independent parliamentary party met at the Irish National Club New York, on Wednesday night and adopted a manifesto. The manifesto says, among other things: "It makes little difference to the Irish people whether they are misgoverned by whigs or Tories. The question of home rule can only be raised to the dignified level to which it was brought by Parnell by the presence in that ministry of Irish representation owing no allegiance to whig or Tory. "Will Americans give financial support to a conglomeration of Irish factions which has failed to accomplish anything but the destruction of the fabric raised by fifteen years of arduous labor? Or do they desire to see an Irish party in parliament advocating the claims of Ireland, and who place no reliance on English promises and who accept no offices from the British Government? "We appeal with confidence for contributions to the funds now open for the purpose of helping the election of Irish representatives who will pursue in the next parliament the policy so long identified with the name of Charles Stewart Parnell."

CRIME IN ENGLAND.

The English home office has published the report of a special committee appointed to discover whether crime is increasing or decreasing in that country, with a critical and explanatory introduction by C. E. Troup. The result of the enquiry seems to show that crime generally is decreasing, although more slowly than has been hoped, while there is an apparent increase in offences against morality. Part or all of this may be due to the better enforcement of the law. Offences with violence exhibit a downward tendency, but there are exceptions. Mr. Troup says that all classes of crime against property show a diminution as compared with the population; and though in the case of larceny and kindred offences this diminution is not so marked, it is still apparent. The most moral country in England and Wales is Cornwall, where the proportion of crime is only 48 per 100,000 inhabitants, as against a maximum of 343 in Monmouthshire, and an average of 184 in England and Wales as a whole. The worst country in the country, on the other hand, is Monmouth, and close after it come Brecon and Glamorgan.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Considerable food for superstitious people was furnished by the Gilbert trial in Boston. Thirteen jurors were drawn. During the opening address of the attorney general chimes a requiem for 13 minutes. When the jury retired, 13 cross-eyed men were in the court room. The verdict of guilty was brought in on Friday.

Boston, July 3.—A special to the Herald from New York says: "The right enforcement of the Sunday liquor law is arousing the people as no other effort has done. Citizens of all parties want the present law modified so as to give the man who wants a glass of beer with his Sunday dinner or supper a chance to get it. Some of the best known citizens of New York, among them Carl Schurz and Gustave H. Schwab, have put their opinion on the restricted law in the form of an address, which will be sent broadcast. City organizations have already begun active warfare upon what it calls a 'blue law Sunday.' The Young Men's Democratic Union proposes to carry the agitation into every county of the state."

THE PASSING OF THE HORSE.

The rapid rate at which the trolley car and the bicycle are supplanting the horse, is a favorite topic of discussion these days in the columns of the United States press. Centuries hence, says the Cincinnati Gazette, some antiquarian explorer will dig up the skeleton of a horse, and clothing it with an artificial body will exhibit it to the future students as the worker of mankind in the early days before mankind had learned to utilize the great and hidden forces of nature. The New York Sun takes the view that the new agencies which are supplanting the populative energy of the draught horse are advantageous to wage earners, business men and the whole community. It says: "We repeat that far more work people earn their weekly wages through the trolley, the steam engine and the bicycle than ever cranked them through the driving and the shoeing of the horse or by horse power. Many of the workmen of this country have become alarmed lest, through the extension of the use of such forces as electricity and the invention of labor-saving appliances, and the substitution of machinery for hand work, there shall soon be no chance of securing employment. The alarm is groundless. By every device that is utilized by every invention that is brought into use, the opportunities for labor and the demands for it are enlarged. Far more people are employed at cotton manufacturing, and at the iron trades, and at the service of transportation, and at other industries than were employed at them before steam and electricity and machinery and all kinds of labor-saving devices were applied to them. It is a whimsical prediction of Mr. Edison that the only labor of the next generation will consist in 'pressing a button, but we would not be alarmed even at that prospect, for we are sure that we shall all have plenty of good hard work in pressing the innumerable buttons needed to keep things going. We have no doubt that the pay will be high too. There is no one in taking care of the novel devices. We need every one of them if we are ever to make this jumbled up, half starved, overworked old world of ours a place fit to live in."

A REJECTED LOVER'S REVENGE.

A terrible story comes from Romeo, Ill. Luke Hoyte, the rejected lover of Mollie Biers, who lived with four other women in a boarding house near the drainage canal, blew the house to pieces with dynamite last Tuesday night while all the inmates were sleeping. All of the women were badly hurt and three of them will probably die. For some time Luke Hoyte and Tim Hoise have been rivals for Miss Biers, a pretty waitress, 20 years old. The girl apparently had no preference between the two men until two weeks ago, when Hoyte became so persistent in his demonstrations and so abusive of Hoise that she became disgusted and showed a preference for the latter. Hoyte was furious and threatened revenge. For a week he had been drinking heavily and on Tuesday his rage reached a point bordering on insanity. All along the drainage canal are supplies of dynamite to be used in blasting through the rock in the line of the canal. These are kept locked and guarded to prevent theft or accident. On Tuesday night, while one of the supply houses was temporarily unguarded, Hoyte gained an entrance by means of a key and carried off a quantity of the deadly explosive. This he carried to the boarding house and secreted. About midnight the people in the village were awakened by a terrific crash, and hastening to the place they found five wounded women lying on the ground near the former site of the house. The building, a large cottage, had been reduced to splinters. Timbers, shingles, sills and joists were scattered over an acre of ground and pieces of the wreck were found next morning a quarter of a mile away. The women were carried to the houses of neighboring villagers and medical aid at once summoned. Blackened, bruised and bleeding the victims presented a pitiable spectacle, and their cries were heartrending. Suspicion at once fell upon Hoyte and an excited search for him began. He was captured by the village marshal and before a mob could form he was spirited away to the lockup at Lemont for safe keeping. He denies his guilt, but it has been proven that he stole the dynamite, and it would surprise no one if he were lynched.

FOUGHT HER MAD BROTHER.

Miss Lizzie Ecker had a terrible experience with her brother John a few nights ago at her home near Jamesburg, in New Jersey. She sat reading in the dining room when he rushed in brandishing a large table knife. "I have been commanded by an angel to cut off your head, Lizzie," he shouted, "so get ready." A glance at her brother convinced Miss Ecker that he had become crazed with insanity. She sought to pacify him and replied "All right, John; just give me time to finish reading." He assented and sat down. Every move the terrified young woman made was watched intently by the maniac. When he turned his back Miss Ecker thought it a favorable chance to escape. She started for the door, but the madman heard her. He was at her side at one bound. Then ensued a terrible struggle. Miss Ecker fought for possession of the knife with superior strength, and although her hand was badly cut she finally wrested it from her brother. She then managed to get out of the room and locked the door. She hastened to a neighbor for assistance. For several minutes she could not speak from the effects of the terrible ordeal through which she had just passed. With two neighbors she returned to the house. Her brother had escaped through a window. A searching party failed to find any trace of the crazy man after hunting in the woods all day.

SPECIAL DESPATCHES TO THE EXAMINER.

PARLIAMENT OF CANADA.

Cartwright and the Vacancies in the Senate.

The Celebrated "Mixer and Mudder's" Amendment is Negated.

OTTAWA, July 5. In the House yesterday the French treaty was debated.

On the motion to go into supply, after speaking on the subject of the Senate vacancies, Sir Richard Cartwright moved an amendment that, as it appeared from the Premier's letter to Mr. McNeill, M. P., that there were eight vacancies in the Senate, the conduct of the Government in allowing one-eighth of the Senate to remain unfilled, was, under the circumstances, to a great degree derogatory to the dignity and usefulness of the Senate, and was calculated to bring that branch of legislation into contempt. The amendment was negated 95 to 55.

A Meeting of the Cabinet.

OTTAWA, July 5. The Cabinet was in session over five hours yesterday. Shortly after three o'clock, when the members of the Cabinet reached Parliament building, it was ascertained that no conclusion had been reached as the result of the meeting. Mr. Foster admitted this in the House, and intimated that he would probably be in a position to make announcements to-day. Remedial legislation was not mentioned by either Mr. Laurier or Foster, but the general impression is that this was the subject that both gentlemen had in their minds during the brief colloquy across the floor. Some of the quid nuncs say that the question discussed by the cabinet to-day was simply as to whether or not remedial legislation should be brought down this session or deferred till next year. Your correspondent, however, is in a position to state from the very best source that coupled with this particular subject was the nature of the remedial legislation for which the government might be responsible, one being a bill exempting the Catholics of Manitoba from paying public school tax and the other being a proposal to repeal the Manitoba school legislation of 1890.
