

MR. AND MRS. C. E. DEVEAUX

Sturgeon Church Wedding Was Solemnized In July

The marriage took place on Tuesday, July 26th, at St. Paul's Church, Sturgeon, P. E. I., of Agnes Eileen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Daley, St. Mary's Road, and Clarence Emilie Deveaux, Oshawa, Ont., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Deveaux, Point Cross, N. S. Officiating at the double ring ceremony was Rev. E. L. Mullanly. The Wedding March was played by the organist, Mrs. Willard McCarron.

The church was decorated with arrangements of yellow and white mums. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of white satin, fashioned with Empire waist, scooped neckline, and long tulle-trimmed sleeves. Alencon lace trimmed the bodice and panel of skirt front and chapel train. A four tier bouffant veil of tulle illusion was held with two fabric roses. Her only jewellery was a cultured pearl necklace, a gift of the groom. She carried a cascade bouquet of white and pink sweet-heart roses.

The bride's attendants were her sisters, Madeline, as maid-of-honor, in yellow, and Doreen, as bridesmaid, in lime green. Their floor-length gowns were styled alike, and they wore wedding ring headresses in colors to match their gowns. They carried nosegays of chasta daisies. Evelyn McGee, cousin of the bride, was flower girl in a short dress of white chiffon, and carrying a basket of white mums and pink rosebuds.

Paul Daley, brother of the bride, was ring bearer.

Alphonse Deveaux was his brother's best man, and the ushers were Ivan Deveaux, brother of the groom, and John Daley, brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception for 70 guests was held at All Saints Parish Hall, Cardigan. Levi Deveaux was master of ceremonies, and Alphonse Deveaux proposed the toast to the bride.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Daley chose a beige costume with pink accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

The groom's mother chose an aqua lace dress with white accessories and a corsage of white carnations. Photo by The Craft Studio, Montauque, P.E.I.

County Line WI In Convention At Springfield

Mrs. Wilbur MacKay, president of County Line No. 1 Convention Group Women's Institutes, presided at Springfield Hall for the Grade 8 scholarship presentations recently.

The following program was heard: vocal quartette by Janet Beverley, Karen, and Mary Claire Rowe, Emerald; solo with guitar accompaniment by Leigh Campbell, Graham's Road; accordian selection by Mrs. Harry Locke, Springbrook; monologue by Linda Sharp, Norboro, and a vocal duet by Melissa Mayhew and Linda Howard, Margate.

Mrs. George Dunning, scholarship convener made the presentations and extended congratulations to Joan Sinclair and Elizabeth Paynter, Springfield.

Margaret Payne, who had been chosen to represent Kensington Regional High School in a group of students who had visited Prince Albert, Saskatchewan this summer gave an interesting account of the trip.

Rev. MacBeath, Kensington showed colored slides of several European countries and gave an interesting commentary on each.

Refreshments were served by Springbrook and Springfield WI.

NEED TWO MARRIAGES? CHATHAM, Ont. (CP)—You may have to marry again before you bring your Asian bride to Canada. Karma Vir Singh Sangwan, 24, formerly of New Delhi, found Canadian regulations did not recognize the Indian family ceremony so the Sangwans had to go through a second marriage before a judge.

ELLEN'S DIARY Jewelled Hummingbirds Visit Our Flowerbeds

Today under skies that favored its progress, the project of carpentry-undertaken of late by our farmers was continued. The cooks were aware of it by the absence of the children, who were drawn to the scene of the work, to the rear of the other buildings, by the polebarn up the fields' lane. Forms had been built. Shore sand and fieldstone and the mixer, had been hauled to the spot. Cement brought in, and a water-line laid. And the mixing for the concrete foundation for the extension to the barn began.

Following the recent rains, the cattle were content today on their brown-topped pastures, the green was more pronounced on the shorn haylands, and the harvest fields caught more of the flooding gold. In the sunshine, jewelled hummingbirds—called by the lawns to enjoy the flowerings, juncos to pick up any fallen crumbs. Baby robins tested new wings. Swallows congregated in sober lines on service wires to discuss, we suspected, their coming trip to far lands.

One of our service lines no longer is there to invite their councils. That of the telephone has gone underground - buried our "lead-in" has been inducted since last fall. We recalled, watching the change made recently on the roadside, how happy we had been in the long ago to see the wire reach in from there, above the millpond of then and the front meadow, to give us access to the rural line, which served a number of farms on this and neighboring roads.

James still sneaks of the labor entailed in helping transport as a lad, the first poles obtained from the next neighbor's bush, by horse and farm-wagons, when the line was first laid.

A friendly line that was. There was time then to chat with folks to learn of the doings in the communities about, to hear who was first on the land in the springtime, and learn whether or not it was actually fit yet to

Writer At Last Gets Chance To Do Some Writing

FREDERICTON (CP) — Dorothy Livesay — poet, scholar, lecturer, journalist, teacher and social worker — is finally getting a chance to settle down and do some writing.

ALL HER adult life Miss Livesay, this year's resident writer at the University of New Brunswick, has been squeezing in the writing of her sensitive modern poetry between teaching, lecturing and social work assignments coast to coast in Canada and as far away as Zambia.

In private life she is Mrs. Duncan Macnair. Her father, the late J. F. B. Livesay, was general manager of The Canadian Press.

NOW, AS resident writer at UNB, Miss Livesay is under no obligation to do anything but write. She will teach no courses and give no lectures, except as she chooses. The only stipulation is that she maintain some office hours, in which to consult with and advise young would-be writers on the campus — something which Miss Livesay does not consider a chore.

"Of course, I'm delighted with the setup," she says. "It's what I've been looking for since I came back to Canada. In fact, it's why I came back to Canada."

Miss Livesay had been in Africa, teaching English to Rhodesian teachers under the auspices of UNESCO. She came home in 1963.

"PARTICULARLY, I thought I'd do some writing. I found that I was going to have to teach, in order to earn a living."

She did teach, at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver. At the same time she was "supplementing" my teaching equipment," she puts it, by doing a thesis on Rhythms and Sound in Contemporary Canadian Poetry for her MA degree.

THE THESIS subject was well suited to Miss Livesay's talents — she herself has published six volumes of poetry and in 1947 won the Lorne Pierce Medal from the Royal Society of Canada.

The topic involved her in interviewing and tape-recording many young poets reading their own works, as she analyzed sounds, style and linguistics. She became acquainted with most of the prominent poets on the west coast.

"They're all a bit nutty out there, not unlike the people I remember from my own youth," she recalls. "But there is a very great excitement for poetry."

Miss Livesay became caught up in this movement. By last fall, when she had finished her thesis, she found herself teaching poetry and creative writing at UBC. But she still wanted to do her own writing.

Thus the Canada Council appointment was ideal. "It's the first time in my life I'll be able to sit down and write, free of any financial worry," she says happily.

SHE'S ALSO keen because it is the first time she has lived in the Maritimes. She was born in Winnipeg, educated in Toronto, worked in Vancouver, Montreal, London, Paris and various parts of Africa.

So far most of the students she has encountered are attending UNB's summer session, where she teaches a workshop course in creative writing.

"There's a strong tradition of poetry from this area, what with Bliss Carman, Sir Charles G. D. Roberts and so on," Miss Livesay says. "But at present things are — how shall I say it — a bit out of touch with what's happening."

"BUT I find that the young people are really eager for the news, so to speak, in the creative field. They don't know what they want, but they are thirsting for something — something different."

so the wheat or other grains: to find-out from some old-timer of farmer how the haying was progressing on his farm, and ask his opinion as to whether it would be wise to save that piece of new meadow, say, after dinner, though as yet, it did seem to rustle as well as it should. And know of the harvest's stacking and threshings — and the afternoons at the digging, which gathered a brisk crew of helpers and horses and carts to the potato-field, to round up the blues and the reds.

The brides new-come, we would hear of. And speak with becoming modesty, woman to woman, of certain signs of one due in the far offing. Knew when happy twins were to "appear out" in the old "Kirk" after a marriage, and also how folks ill and in difficulties were doing. And now that our rural line has lost its identity with others in the march of progress? More business-like it has become. Our messages, we fear, have lost something of the interesting human values they once so kindly conveyed.

Week's close now. The night has come down over the farmsteads, putting by the machines of the farming until comes in a new week. But have we put by our thoughts, those which linger to fret and annoy even in the peace of week's end? A friend writing enclosed this one of her favorite verses, this, a prayer for day's end:

"God make my thoughts like little quiet sheep, And keep them in Thy sight Through the dark hours, the dusk and dawn between, Guide them, and guard them from the steep ravine, And fold them in at night. Often they stray upon the moor of fear, Lost on its rocky height; Oh, in Thy peaceful pastures let them sleep. Shepherd my thoughts like little quiet sheep And fold them in at night." Until Monday — Diary — Good-night.

Here's how Blue Shield-Blue Cross can protect you against the sometimes crippling cost of PRESCRIPTION DRUGS!

Canadians spend approximately $200 million a year on prescribed drugs. That's why Blue Shield-Blue Cross now offers a plan of protection against these and other extra costs, not covered by basic medical and hospital plans.

This Extended Health Benefits plan (E.H.B.) covers, in addition to prescription drugs; private hospital room, private duty nursing, extensive x-ray, laboratory procedures, health appliances, ambulance and other essential services.

This is a "company group" plan available to firms with 10 or more employees. It is designed to eliminate the heavy cost of prolonged illness or accident.
