BREAKFAST—SUPPER.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided for our breakfast and supper a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified by pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

"SHERLOCK HOLMES."

The Original of Conan Doyle's Detective is an Edinburg Surgeon.

There will not be much dispute, says Harper's Weekly, among those who have read Dr. Conan Doyle's "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" that they are the best detective stories ever written in their kind, and that their kind is in some essential respects a new one.

The current detective of fiction is of French origin, and he bears very little resemblance to the current detective of fact. "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" for the first time introduces us to a conceivable detective, being a man who cultivated the habit of observation until it has become a second nature or a sixth sense. No discerning reader of the stories can fail to have been impressed with the possibility that a man who diligently employed and trained faculties that all men possess might arrive logically at conclusions which to less observant persons seem like magic when it turns out that they are true. Sherlock Holmes, in a word, makes much more strongly than any previous detective of fiction the effect of being founded on fact.

It was therefore with great satisfaction that the reader of Dr. Cronan Doyle's fascinating stories learned some time since, from the author of his being, that Sherlock Holmes was indeed founded on fact and drawn from life, and that the model for him had been a professor in the medical college in which Dr. Doyle studied. This gentleman has been the object of an extensive and pardonable popular curiosity. He is Dr. Joseph Bell, of the Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, took his degree at twenty-two, was for two years assistant demonstrator of anatomy in the university, then became house surgeon at the Royal Infirmary, where has remained ever since, having for many years been senior surgeon, and lately consulting surgeon.

It is evident that the medical profession offers peculiar advantages for the development of the faculty of observation, which, indeed, is as helpful and indispensable to an ideal doctor as to an ideal detective. Diagnosis is, indeed, largely detective work, and those who have had the good fortune to be the patients of a "born doctor," when they had the misfortune to be patients at all, often have occasion for astonishment at a knowledge of their condition that seems to them like clairvoyance, but is in truth the result of a natural faculty for observation assiduously cultivated. It is evident that the original of Sherlock Holmes has the faculty in an eminent degree.

A reporter for the Pall Mall Gazette has had, and related for his paper, a highly interesting interview with the original of Sherlock Holmes. It appears that Dr. Bell has made use of his remarkable faculty not merely in the line of his profession, and for the astonishment of his acquaintances, but that it has frequently been employed in actual detective work, and in furtherance of the ends of justice. As might be expected, he has paid special attention to medical jurisprudence. The crown retains in Edinburgh a regular medical adviser in criminal cases, and this medical adviser has for some twenty years been in the habit of enlisting the services of Dr. Bell, although in these cases he has merely been retained as an expert, and has no official counection with the crown. The reporter who visited Dr. Bell was in Edinburgh to report the Ardlamont murder trial, which has attracted comparatively little attention in this country, but has excited a great and widespread interest in England and Scotland; and in this case Dr. Bell has been retained as an expert adviser for the prosecution. While he declined to give any reminiscences of his detective work that had not already been made public, he declared that whatever deductions he had been able to make that had been of service to the authorities had been "simple and commonplace."

They had come from the habit he himself had formed and had tried to inculcate upon all his scholars—Conan Doyle among them—the habit of paying attention to what are commonly disuissed as unimportant things. "I always impressed over and over again the vast importance of little distinctions, the endless significance of the trifles." To what important results this habit may lead is illustrated in the facts of Dr. Bell's career, as well as in Dr. Doyle's fiction founded on those facts. One illustration of it is striking enough to be well worth giving in Dr. Bell's own reported words:

"This one struck me as funny at the time. A man walked into the room where I was instructing the students, and his case seemed to be a very simple one. I was talking about what was wrong with him. 'Of course, gentlemen,' I happened to say, 'he has been a soldier in a Highland regiment, and probably a bandsman.' I pointed out the swagger in his walk, suggessive of the piper; while his shortness told me that if he had been a soldier it was probably as a bandsman. In fact, he had the whole appearance of a man in one of the Highland regiments. The man turned out to be nothing but a shoemaker, and said he had never been in the army in his life. This was rather a floorer: but being absolutely certain I was right, and seeing that something was up, I did a pretty cool thing. I told two of the strongest clerks, or dressers, to remove the man to a side room, and to detain him till I came. I went and had him stripped. Under the left breast I instantly detected a little blue 'D' branded on his skin. He was a deserter. That was how they used to mark them in the Crimean days, and later, although it is not permitted now. Of course the reason of his evasion was at once clear."

After one knows that Sherlock Holmes is not entirely the creature of the novelist's imagination, but that his qualities are drawn from life, many readers must be incited to develop those qualities in themselves. In the interview from which we have quoted, Dr. Bell says, very truly and suggestively:

"I should just like to say this about my friend Doyle's stories, that I believe they have inculcated in the general public a new source of interest—the kind of interest created by Richard Jefferies and the 'Son of the Marshes.' They make many a fellow who has before felt very little interest in his life and daily surroundings think that, after all, there may be much more in life if he keeps his eyes open than he had ever dreamed of in his philosophy. There is a problem, a whole game of chess, in many a little street incident of trifling occurrence if one once learns how to make the moves."

LANSING, Mich., July 2—A friend of William Langley formerly of this city, now of London Ont., received a letter a few months ago stating that Mr. Langley had Bright's disease. Of course no hope of his recovery could be held out. Within a month, the same friend has received a letter from Mr. Langley stating that he is completely cured of the supposed fatal disorder. Mr. Langley says no medicine did him any good until he began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. These helped him from the first and in the end restored him to perfect health.

CAUSE OF BOWEL COMPLAINTS.

The direct cause of pain and looseness of the bowels, is an irritation of the mucous membrane of the same, sufficient to produce excessive peristaltic or worm-like motion in the interior of the bowels, thus the partly digested food matter is kept constantly passing along and evacuated freely. This is called a diarrhœa; where the irritation is enough to cause bleeding, we have dysentery. Indirect causes of diarrhœa, by which an irritation is started are intestinal dyspepsia, overeating unripe or over-ripe fruit, tainted meats, or oysters etc.; torpor of liver, by which not enough bile is secreted; excessive flow of bile, etc.; TREATMENT. Thoroughly evacuate the bowls with Parsons' Pills, they are among the best to get rid of all irritating matter. Then take Johnson's Anodyne Liniment in teaspoonful doses diluted with water, every four hours, and oftener if the case is severe. In case of Asiatic cholera, one teaspoonful should be given every half hour. Thousands of people remember the year 1849, when the worse known epidemic disease spread over this country. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment at that time was little known outside of the state of Maine. But for its use at that time by its friends, many would not now live to spread the joyful news that any case of diarrhœe, dysentery, cholera-morbus, or kindred diseases, can be cured by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. It nevr yet failed. The proprietors, I. S. Johnson & Co., Boston, Mass., will send their new illustrated book, entitled "TREATMENT FOR DISEASEL," free to any person for the asking. July 25

Notice to Commercial Travellers.

The attention of Commercial Travellers is called to the following sections of an Act passed by the Legislative Assembly of Prince Edward Island, Session 1894, intituld "An Act to Impose a Direct Tax on Certain Classes of Traders":—

1. "From and after the passing of this Act every casual trader not permanently residing in this Province doing business within this Province, commonly known as "Commercial Travellers," and every person not permanently residing in this Province, and who sells either for himself or any other person any goods, wares or merchandize in this Province, or solicits or canvasses for orders either for himself or any other person for the sale, exchange or purchase of any goods, wares or merchandize within this Province, either by the production of samples, photographs, catalogues, printed or written matter, or simply by word of mouth without the production of samples, photographs, catalogues, printed or written matter, shall, before he or she enters upon the business of so selling any goods, wares or merchandize, or soliciting or canvassing for such orders, pay to the Provincial Treasurer of this Province an annual license fee or direct tax of fifteen dollars."

2. "Upon payment of the said license fee or direct tax, the said Provincial Treasurer shall grant a license authorizing the person therein named to sell goods, wares and merchandize in this Province, and to solicit and canvass for orders for the sale, exchange or purchase of goods, wares and merchandize within this Province. Such license shall be granted and remain in force for the space of one year following the date upon which the said license shall be granted and no longer."

3. "Any such Commercial Traveller or person not permanently residing in this Province as aforesaid, who, after the passing of this Act, shall sell any goods, wares or merchandize, or solicit or canvass for orders for the sale, exchange or purchase of any goods, wares or merchandize in any manner aforesaid within this Province without having first paid the said license fee or direct tax, and obtained the said license, shall for each and every occasion upon which he or she shall sell any goods, wares or merchandize, or solicit or canvass for an order for the sale, exchange or purchase of any goods, wares or merchandize as aforesaid, be liable to pay the sum of two hundred dollars to the said Provincial Treasurer."

This Act is now in force.

License can be procured in Charlottetown at the Provincial Treasury, in Summerside from Wm. T. Hunnt Esq., in Georgetown from George B. Aitken Esq.
