

DR. AND MRS. JOHN A. BLAKELY

Beautiful Wedding Held At Holy Rosary Cathedral

On Saturday, May 3rd at Holy Rosary Cathedral, Regina, Miss Noreen McGuigan, only daughter of Mrs. John Leo McGuigan and the late John Leo McGuigan of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island was united in marriage with Dr. John Blakely, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Blakely, Prince Albert, Saskatchewan.

Reverend Father Deutscher was the officiating clergyman. James Noonan, a first cousin of the bride, was one of the altar boys.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle Louis P. McGuigan of Regina. She wore a floor length princess line gown of white crystallette charm linen with heavy taffeta. The gown had tapering sleeves and high neckline.

The fingertip length veil of silk tulle was from a crown headpiece encrusted with tiny seed pearls. She carried a cascade of white daisies.

The maid of honor, a graduate of St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, was Miss Barbara Knips of Montreal. The bridesmaid was Miss Isabel Bray, R.N., of Antigonish, Nova Scotia.

They were identical ermine-trimmed gowns of white crystallette charm in bamboo. Their nosegays were yellow and white daisy spray mums.

The groom was attended by Mr. Douglas Sagi of Saskatoon. The ushers were Mr. George McGuigan of Charlottetown, brother of the bride, and Mr. Robert Blakely of Prince Albert, brother of the groom.

During the ceremony Miss Marie Gauda sang "Ave Maria" and "On This Day," accompanied by the organist, Miss Delia Morrison.

The bride's mother was wearing a chemise styled silk dress of primrose blue self-embroidered organza over taffeta. Her hat was a cap fitting all organza with nylon flowers to match the dress. Her corsage was composed of white feathered carnations.

The groom's mother wore a black and white dress with a tiny white hat, matching accessories and a corsage of red roses. The reception was held in the church lounge room and was catered to by the Catholic Women's League.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. E. D. Noonan, L.L.D., uncle of the bride and responded to by the groom. The toast to the bridesmaids was given by the best man Mr. Douglas Sagi. The bride's table was centered with the traditional three-tier wedding cake.

The numerous telegrams and messages of good wishes were read by Mr. Douglas Sagi.

Mrs. Blakely graduated with honors from St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, Bachelor of Science degree in Home Economics. She is also a diabetic graduate of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto. For the past three years she has been the diet therapy clinical instructor at University Hospital in Saskatoon.

Dr. Blakely holds his Bachelor of Arts degree and his Doctor of Medicine from the University of Saskatchewan.

Out of province guests included Mrs. John Leo McGuigan and Mr. George McGuigan, Charlottetown, P.E.I.; Miss Barbara Knips, Montreal, P.Q.; Mrs. Howard Moore, Windsor, Ontario; Mrs. Roy Waterbury, Erickson, Manitoba; and many friends from parts of Saskatchewan.

The bride's going away outfit was a gold and cream princess line dress with short bodice fitting jacket. The jacket had a standing empress neckline, long tapering sleeves and tiny buttons at the front. Her other accessories were in bone color and she chose Talisman roses for her corsage.

Dr. and Mrs. Blakely left for Jasper, Banff, Victoria, San Francisco and parts south. Upon return from their wedding trip they will take up residence in Toronto where Dr. Blakely is at St. Michael's Hospital.

MacWilliams - Silliphant Wedding Is Solemnized

Miss Donna Silliphant, her sister's bridesmaid was gowned in crystal length green frosted crystallette with matching head-dress and carried a bouquet of yellow rosebuds.

Mary Miller Auxiliary Founder Is Remembered

The regular meeting of the Mary Miller Auxiliary was held in the West Parlor, Heartz Memorial Hall on Monday evening, June 2. Mrs. Norman Holmes, assisted by Mrs. Norman MacLeod, Mrs. Fred Hooper, Mrs. Louis Simmons and Mrs. P. A. Creelman, had charge of the worship service, also of the study period, which was based on Citizenship.

The meeting opened with the hymn "Take My Life and Let It Be," after which the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians was read in unison. Mrs. Holmes and the members of her group gave a splendid analysis of the scripture which had been read. Love embraces the qualities of patience, kindness, generosity, humility, courtesy, selfishness, good-temper, guilelessness and sincerity. Mrs. Simmons led in prayer. The offering was received and dedicated.

Mrs. Creelman described the film, "What's your opinion?", and an interesting discussion followed. Is it necessary to a community that each member should do his part as a good citizen? Is it helpful to teach citizen that he do his share of work for the good of the community? It was agreed that the qualities mentioned in Corinthians 1:13 would produce the highest form of citizenship.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. E. B. Ellis conducted the business meeting. Minutes of the preceding meeting and reports of the various conveners were heard. The Pot-Luck Supper was reported to have been most successful financially, and Mrs. Creelman's delightful description of her trip to Fort Churchill was much enjoyed, also her slides.

There was a splendid display of clothing, quilts, and knitted garments from the Co-workers groups. These articles are being packed and forwarded to the Mission fields.

A letter was received from Rev. Dr. Hugh Miller expressing his appreciation of the flowers sent in memory of his wife. Mrs. Miller was the founder of this auxiliary, and news of her death, which occurred at Soldiers' Memorial Hospital, Campbellton, N.B., brought expressions of sorrow from the members.

It was decided that the next meeting will be held in September. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

MARY HAWORTH

Clergy Will Help You

Dear Mary Haworth: Can you tell me how to find a man I haven't seen or heard from in 10 years? I don't want him to know that I am inquiring.

Ten years ago, at the age of 24, I loved this man very much. We were engaged to be married when suddenly I was left with an ailing mother to support.

Bill and I quarreled bitterly. These were words spoken by both of us which were very cruel. We were stubborn and both refused to apologize. Bill walked out of my house and never returned, although he said he would never marry another girl. Later I learned that he had left town.

My mother has been dead for a year now and I would like to find happiness. However, I still love Bill and would like to know where he is; but because of the possibility that he may be married by now, I don't want him to know that I am still interested. I don't want to interfere with any happiness he may have attained.

Will you please help me? I do love him so much; and cannot forget, although I have tried for 10 years. If he is still unmarried I know that we can find happiness together—even despite the lost years.—F. Y.

TRY TO FIND HIM

Dear F. Y.: Don't complicate and hinder your search for happiness, with so many unnecessary "ifs, and buts." Since you are free at long last to pursue the idea of marriage, and realize that Bill would be your first choice still, then go ahead and try to discover his whereabouts, and his present status—married or single.

It won't make any difference for the worse, in his life or yours, if he learns that you've been looking for him; or that you would be interested in picking up where you left off with him, if possible.

Supposing that he has been married since you last saw him, and is getting along either badly or well with his spouse, still he is a friend of your youth; and it would be friendly of you to want to mend an old quarrel—in process of getting your life in order, since your mother died.

As for how to go about getting in touch, you might write a letter inscribed to Bill's last-known address (even if years old)—and mark it "please forward." Or, if you have any inkling at all of the city or town where he now resides, you might try the long distance telephone service. Often its operators are remarkably astute and successful in sifting the slightest clues and eventually locating the person wanted.

CLERGY WILL HELP

Still another approach is to talk confidentially with your pastor, or a family service counselor, and get the benefit of their professional know-how, in exploring the worth or wisdom of trying to retrieve opportunities lost in the past. If they approve the quest, they'll guide you in it.

Don't be ashamed of your wish to overtake an old mistake, and put it right—if that's how you feel about it. But, on the other hand, don't talk about your hopes and uncertainties with neighbors, friends and relatives, who might be amused, pessimistic or gossipy—confusing you with conflicting advice, and all shades of opinion as to the propriety of such inquiry.

When, as and if you see Bill again, it may release you from the spell of remembering him. He may be (or may have become) quite different from the image that dominates your wistful day dreams. You might have to meet somebody new, to find the approximation of the man that comes to mind, when you fancy that you are thinking of Bill.

ELLEN'S DIARY

Skill & Interest Shown In Girls' Sewing Class

When twilight was commencing to drift in over the farmlands, gathering them cozily beneath purple shadows, we walked along old and newer fields of this farm to join James, husband of ours, at the sowing. It was in a distant spot, back where little and larger groves are bright with new leaves and blossoms, and where too close by, a small slough-of-place, its strange shrubby damp-footed, is now all in mauve bloom. There the peepers played an enchanting symphony, no errant note marring the delightful melody.

It was pleasant there when only echoes from "the haunts of men" reached us: the sight of the car passing on this or that far road, a plane on wing, tractor-beat from other farms, a dog's excited bark over the fields indicative of a cow or cows being herded in to the milking.

What perfect sanctuary could be had in such a remote place, it came to mind, where none of the ills, the quirks and vagaries of mankind could follow, nor any of its sadness or sorrow.

A tiny field sparrow, a petite, dainty creature, regarded our coming with some apprehension and then unafraid hopped away to some interest — perhaps of nest, in a hayland. And beyond at a headland, James was replenishing seed-boxes, another patch of sowing almost done.

"It's too late to be of much help" we offered.

"Oh no" he smiled. "You see, after I finish work on this piece I intend to take a few turns on that field over there."

So we saw the twilight darken and lights shine out across the dim fields, before he felt his day was complete. And then along dewy paths and fragrant, we turned out steps toward home.

This afternoon we had for an interesting guest the younger lad from the house across the lane. He is an active child, extremely busy and quick, and now at the stage where he must climb to heights. Up he goes smartly, to stand on couch or chair. "See what a smart fellow I am!"

His triumphant grin then says, "But as Mack has pointed out 'He is just like a rabbit, he has no idea of how to get safely down' and all must guard him from falls."

This afternoon brought Achievement Day to the Garment Club of our school, when the mothers and interested friends were its guests. The event climaxed nicely all the painstaking stitches made during the term.

We saw them at work one evening, these "young leddies" of this class of "Sunbeams," to be amazed at the skill and interest they lent to the work at hand. They were gaining a knowledge of the rights and wrongs of patterns and sewing, and also learning something of fabrics and colors as they fashioned their stitches.

It is good to know how to sew and mend, to knit and darn and crochet; and as our grandmothers said of "the schooling," "It's a light load to carry" and should prove of much value to them all down their years.

"Rest comes at length" — not that our day has been at all wearisome the thought comes to mind, but that after our outdoor exercise our pillow will be good, our rest sound, we know, and sweet.

Until tomorrow — — Diary — Goodnight. . . .

PAINTS 'N BRUSHES

Study Those Trees Before Painting Them

Almost everyone agrees with the poet who extols the beauty of trees, but not everyone can appreciate their wonderful structure. When a child of six paints a tree, he makes a enormous trunk with a vague wisp of greenery at the top. Trees, he finds, are useful things to hide behind. The ten-year-old, having had the experience of climbing trees, or picking fruit, represents a tall pointed trunk with branches carefully arranged at each side, and fruit or leaves in tidy rows on the underside of the branch. It is not until adolescence that a child can represent a tree with some realism.

The amateur artist must try to understand a tree, root, stem and branch. He should know that the oak is different in appearance from the elm, that a maple tree and a poplar are not very similar. Some trees have rough bark, some have smooth. Some have soft droopy outline... some up right and spiky.

Think of a tree as a bundle of fibres which go under the bark and grip it firmly. Notice that the width of the trunk does not diminish until some of these fibres start going off into branches. Old trees which have thrust themselves out of the ground are of course wider at the base, but the younger trees are not. The branches of the tree spread like a bouquet — some come toward you, some go directly away from you. Not all are at the sides of the tree, remember.

Be careful to compare the distance from the ground to the first branch with the distance from the first branch to the top. You will find the branching part, or foliage part, is usually very much longer than the trunk below. Don't make the foliage too solid — remember, the birds have to fly in and out. Shade the masses of leaves softly, lightest toward the sun, dark underneath. There are trees all around us. Good luck with them!
