ADVERTISING RATES

For small advertisements which are ordered for only one or two weeks the charge is 5 cents per inch for the first insertion, and 2 cents for each continuation. Rate cards are furnished on application at the office. Special contract prices at a reduced rate are quoted for advertisements four inches in size or larger, which are to run for three months or longer.

No special notices inserted unless paid for at the rate of 15 cents per line, and under no circumstances will such paid notices appear in the local column.

Special discounts made on all advertisements connected with Church Fairs, Bazaars, cnics, etc. No notices will be inserted with the same unless the regular rate of 10 cents per line is paid.

That THE EXAMINER is considered by our Merchants and Manufacturers to be the leading newspaper in P. E. Island, and consequently the most valuable advertising medium through which to make their announcements public, is abundantly proved by the fact that in order to accommodate our advertisers we have been compelled to enlarge the paper to its present size.

THE AMERICAN

$8.00 Typewriter.

This is a well-made, practical machine, writing capitals, small letters, figures, and punctuation marks (71 in all) on full width paper, just like a $100 instrument. It is the first of its kind ever offered at a popular price for which the above claim can be truthfully made. It is not a toy, but a typewriter built for and capable of REAL WORK. While not as rapid as the large machines sometimes become in expert hands, it is still at least as rapid as the pen, and has the advantage of such simplicity that it can be understood and mastered almost at a glance. We cordially commend it to helpful parents and teachers everywhere.

Writes capitals, small letters, figures and marks—71 in all.
Writes just like a $100 machine.
No Shift Keys. No Ribbon. Prints from the type direct.
Prints on flat surface.
Writing always in sight.
Corrections and insertions easily made.
Takes any width of paper or envelope up to 8½ inches.
Easy to understand—learned in 5 minutes.
Weighs only four pounds--most portable.
Compact, takes up but little room.
Built solid and simple; can't get out of order.
Capital and lower case keyboard alike-easily mastered.
More "margin play" for the small letters which do most of the work.
Takes good letter-press copies.

Packed securely in handsome case and expressed to any address on receipt of price, $8.00, in registered letter, money order or certified check. We guarantee every machine, and are glad to answer all inquiries for further information as to this machine and also the "Yost."

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

THE LIONS' FAST DAY.

Captive Animals Receive No Meat on Sundays, Only Milk.

Trained animals do not like Sunday. One would naturally suppose that on that day, when they do not have to go through their paces in the big ring in the arena, and show off to an audience what they can do, but lie comfortably in their cages and sleep, that they would enjoy themselves very much better than on any other, but such is not the case.

Sunday is medicine day. Any one who knows anything about a lion will acknowledge at once that to get one of these animals to take a nostrum is simply out of the question. The sense of smell with the lion is in a very high state of development, and, no matter how subtle the physician may be, medicines are hard to get down a lion's throat, if not actually impossible. Professor Darling, who is perhaps one of the best informed men at present on the question of lions, was found stroking one of his brute's manes through the bars of the cage the other day, when he turned and said:

"Did you ever see a lion drink?"

Now the popular idea is that a lion eats, but does not drink. No one ever heard of any one else ever telling about a lion drinking. No one ever associated drinking with the lion, yet the lions do drink, and Sunday is drinking day. It is the one day of seven that they take off and devote to drinking, but at the same time it is the one day of seven that they devote to fasting.

Said Professor Darling: "From Saturday afternoon until Monday night my lions never get one bite of feed. This may appear on the surface very cruel; it may look as though they were half starved, and to many who imagine that we overfeed our animals it may look like a horrible prevarication, but it is a fact nevertheless. Each lion during the week is fed once a day. This feed is given them directly after they have finished their work, never before, and it consists of a chunk of meat weighing twenty pounds.

"After I have ended my performance for Saturday night my lions wait until Monday night after the performance before they taste meat, and all they get is milk. You know the lion belongs to the cat tribe. You have often seen a pretty little pussy sitting over a saucer of cream and lapping it as daintily as can be imagined and seeming to enjoy it. Well, a lion is simply a great big cat. They all come from the same source, and they all have instincts alike, and as a matter of protection to the health of my animals, I give them on Sunday only milk. This acts as a tonic, and tones up their systems. That is why I have been able to keep these five that I have for so many years and work them hard (because it is hard work for these animals) and still have them looking so well.

"Would you like to see the lions drink?" he said, turning to me, and, never having had that opportunity, I naturally said "Yes."

The big, brawny keeper was called, and an order given for some milk. The lions when they are about to be fed jump over each other, rush around, and make a great fuss to get their various pieces of beefsteak, but when the milk came in they seemed to look at each other with an expression of "Well, here it comes again!" and there was no particular hurry as to who would first begin to lap the milk.

About a quart and a half of rich milk was set down to each of the five brutes, and slowly, seemingly reluctantly, they got up and began to drink it. There was a great deal of difference between the little red tongue of the pussy cat, which daintily laps up milk from a saucer, and the great rough tongue of the king of beasts that went at their medicine. They seem to go at it more as a matter of duty than as a matter of taste; yet in a very few moments after the dish was put in front of them it was empty. Still, there was no clamoring for any more, but they turned over, looking drowsily at their keepers, as if to say: "Well, we did it because we wanted to; not because you wanted us to do it."

"That," said Professor Darling, "is all the medicine my animals ever get. At times I have attempted to put a small amount of sulphur in the milk, but the animals do not take it. Too much meat would completely upset the system of a lion just as it would a man.

"I know very well that lions running in the jungles do not get milk to drink, yet, on the other hand, you must remember that a lion running in the jungles has more room for exercise than a lion behind the bars."

Colors From Coal-tar.

Writing about that marvellous color producer, coal tar, a writer in Longman's Magazine reminds us that it is only thirty six years ago that Perkin "gathered up the fragments" in coal-tar and produced the beautiful mauve dye. Now, from the greasy material which was considered useless is produced madder, which makes coal tar worth £100 a ton. This coloring matter alone now employs an industry of two millions sterling per annum. One tone of good cannel-coal, when distilled in gas retorts, leaves twelve gallons of coal-tar, from which are produced a pound of benzine, a pound of toulene, a pound and a half of phenol, six pounds of napthalene, a small quantity of xylene and half a pound of anthracene for dyeing purposes. According to Roscoe, there are sixteen distinct yellow colors, twelve orange, thirty red, fifteen blue, seven green and nine violet, besides a number of browns and an infinite number of blendings of all shades.—New York World.

Trying to Escape.

"There!" said the young wife proudly, as she deposited the hot plate carefully on the table. "That's the first mince pie that I ever made without any help, all alone myself."

"So it is!" exclaimed her husband enthusiastically, looking it over critically meanwhile. "And as long as it is the very first, my dear, don't you think that, instead of cutting it, it would be nice to keep it for a souvenir? How would it do to have it framed?"—Somerville Journal.

As It Struck Bessie.

"I had to come back, mama," said Bessie, who had made a most heroic effort to give her doll a sleigh ride in the back yard while the blizzard was on. "The wind blowed all the air away so I couldn't breathe!"—Chicago Tribune.

WOMEN OF EGYPT.

Interesting Sketch of Their Ways and Manners at Home.

The most ancient moralist that we know, the Egyptian Ptahhotpou, spoke of women as bundles of mischief and bags full of lies and wickedness. The testimony of the wall paintings of Thebes, of the bass reliefs of Louqsor, and of the antique papyri written by the remote predecessors of Boccaccio and Sacchetti, goes to show that the ladies of old Egypt, with their plaited hair and jewelled bosoms, were ardent to attack and weak to resist. Princesses, daughters of the priestly class, or peasants, all resembled the wife of Potiphar, if we may believe the ingenious stories, the popular tales and the golden legends which have for centuries amused the ennui of the mummies in their silent tombs, and which the modern readers of hieroglyphics are now deciphering for the better comprehension of the most ancient and perhaps the gayest of civilizations. The Egypt of the Pharaohs is no longer figured in our imagination as a land of hieratic contemplation, but rather, like our own country, as a place of joy and of tears, of hopes and of fears, of illusions and emotions, a land peopled by human beings like ourselves, who laughed, sang, loved and passed. Modern erudition has even succeded in deciphering love-lyrics that were sung four or five thousand years ago on the banks of the Nile—lyrics in which the ancient Egyptians expressed the sentiments that devoured them—sometimes with exquisite sweetness, at other times with an exuberance and a boldness of imagination that alarm our more sober Western minds. The Egyptian made all nature participate in his amorous emotions—the song of birds, the perfume of flowers, the murmur of the breeze. Egyptian love is a manifestation of the joyous and splendid harmony of triumphant nature, but at the same time it is tempered by a veil of sadness, and by the ever-present consciousness of the fragility of things and the brevity of bliss.

The Egyptian woman was almost the equal of the man; she was free to come and go, to tempt and to be tempted, and she made use of her privileges. The land of Potiphar's wife is not the land, either of the harem or of the veil. It is in the palaces of Assyria that we must look for the haram. It is in the valleys of the Euphrates and the Tigris, in the cradle of civilization, that we shall find the veil, that emblem of modesty and submission which became one of the arms of coquetry almost as soon as it was invented. The first woman who saw her own image reflected in the still waters of the river, whether Pison, Gihon, Hiddekel, or Euphrates, was the first coquette, and when she began to arrange her hair, to smooth it, to hide it with a veil or shawl, to conceal one part of her face and to reveal another, the art of coiffure was invented.—Harper's Bazar.

The Wonderful Temples at Baalbec.

These temples in Syria, about which so much has been said and heard, stand upon an artificial platform rising about thirty feet above the level of the surrounding plain. In some respects the foundation is like that of Solomon's Temple. This fact has led some to ascribe the work to David. Even to this day the ruins are grand in their immensity, like those of the Coliseum at Rome. At one place in the foundation, at the height of about 20 feet, there are three immense stones, each measuring 63 feet long, 15 feet wide and 13 feet thick. How these stones were quarried, transported and raised into place is in the category of the lost arts. On top of this platform of masonry stand the Temples of Baalbec (three of them)—the Temple of the Sun, the Temple or Jupiter, and the Great Circular Temple. The first was 290 feet long, 160 feet wide, and was surrounded by Corinthian columns 75 feet high and 7 feet 3 inches each in diameter at the base. The cap stones were each 15 feet square, and reached from one column to the other. Six of these columns are still standing. The Temple of Jupiter is almost perfect, even in its ruins. It is a most magnificent and imposing structure. Its outside dimensions being 230x120 feet.

Some Big Trees.

The big tree is surpassed in size only by the encalyptus of Australia, which the redwood may claim the honor of being the third largest tree in the world. The largest known redwood is 326 feet in height and twenty feet in diameter. The big tree attains a greater diameter, but does not reach a proportionately greater height. Thus there are big trees recorded having a diameter of forty-one feet, but we have seen none mentioned as being over 400 feet in height.

The height of the largest known encalyptus tree is stated to be 470 feet, but the diameter is only twenty seven feet. So while taller than the largest big tree if their proportions are the same, the California tree has about twice the bulk of the one which grows in Australia.—St. Nicholas.

A Paste for Foot-rot.

A writer in National Stockman tells how to make a paste to cure foot-rot and other sores on sheep. Use equal parts gunpowder, blue vitriol, sweet or castor oil and pine tar; the powder and vitriol to be pulverized and mixed with the oil and tar, and all simmered together.

Worth Five Glass Beads.

In certain parts of Africa cows rate higher in the market than women do. Among the Masai a woman is worth only five large glass beads, while a cow is worth twice that number.

Friday—Lucky or Unlucky.

There are some persons who believe that death and destruction stalk abroad on Friday, and who have any number of facts on hand to prove their position. Well, here is an array of facts from which almost anything pro or con, might be proven:

Lee surrendered on Friday.
Moscow was burned on Friday.
Washington was born on Friday.
Shakespeare was born on Friday.
America was discovered on Friday.
Richmond was evacuated on Friday.
The Bastile was destroyed on Friday.
The Mayflower landed on Friday.
