Cardinals' Sadecki Starts in 1st Battle

By JOE REICHLER
ST. LOUIS (AP)—A pair of left-handers, veteran Whitey Ford of New York and St. Louis' youthful Ray Sadecki, will be the starting pitchers in the World Series opener here Wednesday.

The Yankees and Cardinals will clash for the fifth time in the post-season classic.

Both teams likely will be without the services of one of their regulars.

Julian Javier, the Cardinals' clyclic second baseman, suffered a knee injury in a collision with Bob Taylor of New York Mets Saturday and was still without complete mobility Monday.

Manager Johnny Keane listed him as a doubtful starter.

CLINCHED FLAG SUNDAY

If Javier is unable to play, his place at second base will go to Dal Maxwell, who came through with two key hits in Sunday's 11-5 pennant clincher against the Mets.

Yankees manager Yogi Berra said he would not decide on his opening day shortstop until after a working here today.

Other than the uncertainty surrounding Kubek and Javier both teams were fit for this first World Series. The American League holds a 37-23 edge margin in the series.

The Yankees' World Series manager is even bigger. The American League champions have been in 28 series classes and have won 16.

The Redbirds have won six of nine series, while the Yankees were in four battles. St. Louis beat the Yankees in 1955 and 1962. The New Yorkers won in 1928 and 1943.

Present plans call for each team to go with just three pitchers. Keane, who had the Cardinals to their first pennant in 1925, has named as his starting pitcher Bob Gibson, his ace right-hander, in the second game here and open with veteran southpaw Curt Simmons in New York Saturday.

Friday will be an open day for travel.

Berra, who captured a flag in his rookie season as manager—the Yankees' fifth in succession—plans to use his rookie star Mel Stottlemyre in the second game and come back with Jim Bouton, a right-hander, in New York.

St. Louis' series started clinched on Oct. 4, when the Cardinals' impending meeting with the Yankees. Many thousands of fans were crying for tickets which were about as hard to get as hotel reservations in town. And that's impossible.

Tony Kubek of the Yankees has been nursing a jammed right arm for two weeks while Paul Linz, the harmonica-playing utility man, has been filling in at his shortstop position.

Montreal (CP)—Montreal Alouettes landed British Columbia Lions their first defeat of the season Monday night, scrambling to two fourth-quarter touchdowns for a 14-7 victory in a Canadian Football League interlocking game by 17,084 fans.

As quarterback George Bork, calling plays sent in by coach Jim Trimble, threw touchdowns to 17-yarder J. J. Gotta and 10 yards to Nat Crawford as Montreal rallied from 21-0 deficit to tie each minutes and 66 seconds.

The victory snapped Montreal's five-game losing streak and moved them into sole possession of third place in the Eastern Conference, two points ahead of Toronto. It was Vancouver's first loss after seven wins and three ties this season, but left them atop the Western standings.

The Lions, playing their second game in three days after Saturday's 20-15 win at Toronto, appeared to be in the final 30 minutes but maintained control of the game until the wacky events of the closing quarter.

They had built their lead on Sonny Homer's second quarter touchdown on pass from Kapp and Peter Kemp's convert while Montreal's only play was a fumble by Gino Bertetta, who also converted one of the Als fourth-quarter scores.

World Series Predictions

The St. Louis Cardinals led the way to the wire in the hectic National Baseball League pennant race. The Reds and Phillies were in contention right up till the end. The Cardinals needed a win in their final game to tie the New York Mets; they managed to come up with the all important victory and fall down the pennant.

We made a survey in last Tuesday's column to unveil the opinions of some of Charlottetown's baseball followers and of the seven people who were asked to predict the outcome of the seven games of the World Series. The Cardinals were leading the poll by a full game at the time we asked these gentlemen for their opinion.

Those who proved successful at looking into the future were: Jim MacCallum, Fred "Fiddle" MacDonald and Dan McCormack. John Squarabriggs almost made the selective group as he called for a playoff between the Reds and the Cards.

We contacted the same persons last night to ask them whom they thought would win the World Series and why they took their respective stands.

JIM MACCALLUM—I think the Cards will come through with the championship in seven games. I think this will be a hitter's series and that the Cards will swing the biggest bats. Last season I saw a pitching series but neither club has the mound staff that the Dodgers had.

"FIDDLE" MACDONALD—I think the Yankees will end it in six games. Yogi's team has a wealth of world series experience and this will help them a lot; also, I think the Yankees have more power hitters than the Cards and home runs will make the difference in this series.

JOE REICHLER—I think the Cards will have more last effort at predicting but I will call the Cardinals to win the series in six games. They have a better all around ball club than the Yankees.

"SPY" READY—The Yankees will win world championships after the Cardinals have what it takes.

DAN MCCORMACK—I still think that the Cardinals are the best of the big league professional baseball. I think it will be a hitting series and although the Yankees will hit harder the Cards will connect more often.

JOHN SQUARABRIGGS—The Cardinals have a better team than the Yankees and the only thing that will be against them will be world series experience. I think the Cards will win just as much as the Yankees, but I think the Cards will walk off with the championship.

FREDERICK TON—Well I don't want to divulge any information due to the danger of being misquoted. (Charlie ran into a little difficulty in a game of musical chairs earlier this season.)

Olympic Athletes Set For Games

From AP-Reuters
TOKYO (CP)—Athletes continued preparations here for the biggest and costliest Olympic games of modern times opening here during the weekend before Emperor Hirohito.

While competitors were sharpening their skills Monday Olympic officials met for six hours and were reported to have considered various proposals including one that new nations be given guidance on the Olympic spirit.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, declined to comment on matters discussed at the meeting but it was understood they included proposals to:

1. Give guidance on the Olympic spirit, the amateur Olympic status and on the question of the interference of politics in sport.
2. Select Olympic sites six years in advance and that the venue of the 1972 Olympics should be decided at Lucerne, Switzerland, in 1966.
3. Introduce women's basketball as an Olympic sport.

At a flag-raising ceremony in the Olympic Village early Monday, 21-year-old Jenny Wingerson of Toronto, holder of the Canadian native record for the 80-metre hurdle, became the first woman to carry the flag for Canada at such a ceremony.

Asked why she had been given the honor instead of a man, Miss Wingerson said, "I don't know—but I'm certain it won't be the opening ceremony." She was performing a parade of athletes at the official games opening.

Other athletes who were rostered are doubtful starters, they are Dickie Moore, drafted from Montreal and trying to make a comeback after a one-season retirement and a knee operation, and Red Kelly, who as a Liberal Member of Parliament is scheduled against the Olympic Games this month in Tokyo as an official representative of the Canadian government.

Wharram, recovering from a facial injury, and Henry, suffering a back ailment, may not play for the All-Stars.

Gordie Howe holds the record for most appearances. He has played in 15 of the 17 previous games.

Sailors Top Saints

Stadco's Sailors defeated St. Dunstan's Saints 6-0 in the Saints opening game of Atlantic Conference, at the St. Dunstan's field on Saturday night. The Saints were heavy favourites when the game was scheduled to be played at the first quarter it looked as if the Saints were going to be victorious.

The St. Dunstan's team scored on a third down play from the Saints' 30 yard line. Stadco's quarterback broke into the clear to race the Saints' defence and broke into the clear to race the Saints' defence and broke into the clear to race the Saints' defence.

The Saints threatened to tie the game on several occasions but the closest effort came in the latter part of the opening quarter as they were caught about ten yards inside the Saints' 50 yard line. The Saints' defence held the Saints' offence for the locals, got his hands on the ball but just couldn't get the Saints' offence to score as an incomplete pass.

This observer thought that John Driscoll kicked a terrific field goal for the Saints in the quarterback slot. Mike McPhee was a big cog in the St. Dunstan's machine as he was the Saints' star player on several occasions.

Jim Griffith also turned in a good performance in St. Dunstan's defence. He was a good player in the Saints' defence. He was a good player in the Saints' defence.

St. Dunstan's coach, Ed Hill, was coaching the Saints' defence. He was coaching the Saints' defence.

Canada's Best Player Has Come Along Way

George Chabot, PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (The road from 100 Mile House, B.C., to Tokyo is more than a matter of miles for Buddy Palmer.)

It's also a matter of 14 years fighting, of all-night drives to get to fights, and of long, lonely hours of training.

Now, at 28, he is the senior member of the Canadian boxing team at the Tokyo Olympics, fighting as a lightweight.

For the last five years Palmer has been a charter member, trainer, coach and the No. 1 fighter in the 100 Mile House Boxing Club.

It would have been almost impossible for him to develop if he spent his entire career in the small trading community for cattle and sheep men, however.

He came to 100 Mile House from Edmonton as a complete fighter. He had already had a taste of international competition representing Canada in the 1954 British Empire Games in Vancouver.

Palmer fights relatively little these days. Last year, for example, he had only one tune-up bout before he won the Canadian lightweight title by methodically knocking out a game Max Gibb in Edmonton.

The game will be played Saturday at Toronto.

The Stars will oppose Punch Imlach's Stanley Cup champion Toronto Maple Leafs for the second straight year. They tied 2-2 last year.

As coach of the runner-up Stanley Cup finalist, Abel will be making his third appearance in four years as coach of the All-Stars. In addition to members of the first and second All-Star teams chosen last spring, he has selected these players:

The All-Star teams named last spring are:

Second team — goal, Charlie Hodge, Montreal; defencemen, Vasek, Chicago and Jacques Laperriere, Montreal; centre, Jean Beliveau, Montreal; right wing, Gordie Howe, Detroit; left wing, Frank Mahovlich, Toronto; Horton and Mahovlich will play for the Leafs, not for the All-Stars.

This will be Imlach's fifth game as a coach in an All-Star game, his third behind the Stars' Cup winners bench.

Imlach has basically the same team that won the cup over Detroit in seven games last spring. Two newcomers are goalie Terry Sawchuk, drafted from Detroit last June, and rookie left-winger Ron Ellis, graduate of Toronto Junior Marlbours.

The All-Star teams named last spring are:

Second team — goal, Charlie Hodge, Montreal; defencemen, Vasek, Chicago and Jacques Laperriere, Montreal; centre, Jean Beliveau, Montreal; right wing, Gordie Howe, Detroit; left wing, Frank Mahovlich, Toronto; Horton and Mahovlich will play for the Leafs, not for the All-Stars.

Imlach has basically the same team that won the cup over Detroit in seven games last spring. Two newcomers are goalie Terry Sawchuk, drafted from Detroit last June, and rookie left-winger Ron Ellis, graduate of Toronto Junior Marlbours.

Canada's Best Player Has Come Along Way

By DOUG MARTIN
George Chabot, PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (The road from 100 Mile House, B.C., to Tokyo is more than a matter of miles for Buddy Palmer.)

It's also a matter of 14 years fighting, of all-night drives to get to fights, and of long, lonely hours of training.

Now, at 28, he is the senior member of the Canadian boxing team at the Tokyo Olympics, fighting as a lightweight.

For the last five years Palmer has been a charter member, trainer, coach and the No. 1 fighter in the 100 Mile House Boxing Club.

It would have been almost impossible for him to develop if he spent his entire career in the small trading community for cattle and sheep men, however.

He came to 100 Mile House from Edmonton as a complete fighter. He had already had a taste of international competition representing Canada in the 1954 British Empire Games in Vancouver.

Palmer fights relatively little these days. Last year, for example, he had only one tune-up bout before he won the Canadian lightweight title by methodically knocking out a game Max Gibb in Edmonton.

Since then he has taken a two-week trip to Camp Borden, Ontario training for the rest of the time he has been training in his spare time while working at the most listened to bartender in 100 Mile House, as the Olympic lightweight champion at home. There aren't any ac-
